CONGRESSMAN PRAISES POST-DISPATCH WORK IN OUSTING JUDGE ENGLISH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.

DURING the debate on the Michener resolution recommending discontinuance of the English impeachment trial Representative John N. Tillman (Dem.) of Arkansas, one of the House managers of the prosecution, paid the following tribute to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for its part in ousting of the East St. Louis Judge:

"I want to pay a well-deserved compliment to one of the great newspapers of America, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. That fearless journal began the investigation of this Federal Judge, spent large sums of money in the conduct of this investigation, invited libel suits, but, to the admiration of all good citizens, continued its public-spirited course in exposing this officer.

"America leads the world in great newspapers and one of the greatest in this great middle western journal published in the City of St. Louis."

Tillman's statement received applause both from the Republican and Democratic sides of the House.

EXPLOSIONS ON OIL TANKER INJURE MAN 10 BLOCKS AWAY

One of Crew Also Hurt by Blasts That Shake New York Harbor and Create Panic.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—A series of explosions aboard the oil tanker Agwisun, anchored in Buttermilk Channel off Brooklyn, tonight shook New York harbor. Two men were seriously injured and taken to a hospital. Fifteen men of the crew of 38 were aboard the vessel. Fourteen climbed hand over hand on a rope to a tug 30 feet away before a second explosion came which twisted the steel plates of the fore part of the Agwisun apart.

John Walters, a shipyard worker, one of the men injured, was about 10 blocks away and suffered a fractured leg when thrown to the pavement by the force of the blast. Windows were broken within a half mile radius. Hundreds of families in tenements along the water front fled from their homes. Tanks of the ship had been emptied of oil and were being cleaned preparatory to refueling. About an hour after the explosion the Agwisun sank.

NEW MEXICO'S GOVERNOR-ELECT BALKS AT WEARING DRESS SUIT

Inaugural Ball Committee Says He Must "Conform" and There the Matter Rests.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA FE, N. M., Dec. 11.—Governor-elect R. C. Dillon says he will not wear full evening dress to the inaugural ball on New Year's eve. The executive committee in charge of the ceremonies says that the Governor-elect must conform to custom. There the matter rests.

"I've never seen the necessity for wearing a dress suit in my life and I hardly want to begin to put on the dog at my age," Dillon said.

The committee in charge of ceremonies in a statement says "the ball will be strictly formal. Mr. Dillon will not direct our actions until after the first of the year and until that time he is our guest and must conform to custom as well as everyone else."

SENATE TO DECIDE WHETHER ENGLISH MUST GO TO TRIAL

Almost Certain to Vote Tomorrow to Discontinue Case of East St. Louis Judge Who Resigned.

HOUSE RECOMMENDS ACTION, 286 TO 22

Michener Resolution Carries After Fight by Insurgents to Force Further Procedure.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—With the approval of the House, given today by a 286-to-22 vote, the managers in the impeachment proceedings against former Federal Judge George W. English of the Eastern Illinois District, will inform the Senate at 1 p. m. Monday that the House does not desire to continue its charges against English who resigned Nov. 4.

Sitting as a high court of impeachment, the Senate, after hearing the recommendation of the managers, will vote on whether the trial shall be continued. In view of the overwhelming vote in the House it is almost a foregone conclusion that the Senate will vote to dismiss the charges.

On Nov. 10, the date set for the trial, the managers informed the Senate that English had resigned and asked that the proceedings be postponed until the House could instruct them (the managers) how to proceed. At that time the managers stated that they favored the dismissal of the charges since the purpose of the impeachment was primarily to oust an unfit judge from the bench.

Senate to Act Promptly.

Senator Curtis majority leader, said tonight that the Senate would vote on the question immediately after the managers had reported. He said it had not been decided whether a formal resolution would be presented. The trial can be stopped, he explained, by a unanimous order.

The Senate is not obliged to accept the recommendation of the House. If it desires to do so it can compel English to stand trial.

The articles of impeachment, adopted by the House April 1 by a 306 to 62 vote, charged Judge English with tyrannical and oppressive conduct; corruption in handling bankruptcy funds and receiverships; partiality and favoritis mto his Referee in Bankruptcy, Charles B. Thomas; coarse and indecent behavior on the bench, and a course of conduct which brought the administration of justice into contempt and disgrace.

His impeachment was the result of an investigation based upon charges published in the Post-Dispatch almost two years ago.

Many Senators Want Trial.

Several Senators have indicated that they do not favor the plan to discontinue the trial, holding that English's resignation has not affected the proceedings now pending in the Senate. Should the Senate vote to proceed with the trial, the managers, in spite of their recommendation to the House, would conduct the prosecution.

A small group of Democrats, progressive Republicans and independents, led by Representative La Guardia (Rep.) of New York in the House today opposed the recommendation of the managers, which was presented in the form of a report and a resolution by their chairman, Representative Earl C. Michener (Rep.) of Michigan.

For an hour the Michener resolution to discontinue the trial, which had the unanimous support of the managers, was debated on the floor. The opposition, however, could only muster 15 votes on a standing division and 22 votes on a roll call.

Michener Leads Fight.

Michener led the fight for the resolution. He was supported by Representatives Hatton Summers (Dem.) of Texas and John N. Tillman (Dem.) of Arkansas. The speakers against the resolution were Representatives La Guardia, Henry Allen Cooper (Rep.) of Wisconsin, Edgar Howard (Dem.) of Nebraska, George Huddleston (Dem.) of Alabama, and Henry B. Steagall (Dem.) of Alabama.

William B. Dowling (Dem.) of Alabama, who defended English when the articles of impeachment were voted, briefly stated that he favored the resolution.

The House consumed only an

RENEWS CHARGES OF CAMPAIGN LEVY ON POSTMASTERS

Senator Couzens Alleges Collusion in Effort to Block Indictment of Tennessee Congressman.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL PLEDGES NEW ACTION

First Investigating Attorney Himself Accused — Taylor, in Defense, Draws Nice Distinction.

By CHARLES G. ROSS
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — Circumstantial charges that Congressman J. Will Taylor of Tennessee, the Republican National Committeeman for that State and one of the recognized leaders of the G. O. P. in the South, violated the criminal code by soliciting campaign contributions from postmasters, are to be the subject of a new investigation by the Department of Justice, if a promise just made by Attorney-General Sargent to Senator Couzens (Rep.) of Michigan is carried out.

The department had attempted previously to whitewash Taylor. Senator Couzens, who is the chairman of the Senate Committee on the Civil Service, refused to accept its finding and demanded that the case be reopened.

"There is no question in my mind," Couzens wrote to Sargent, "that there was collusion in an effort not to have an indictment returned."

It was in reply to this letter, courteous but pointed, that Sargent said he would have the case investigated further. The Attorney-General did not indicate whether he would comply with Couzens' request that a special attorney be assigned to the matter, instead of the United States Attorney who conducted the previous inquiry.

Reminiscent of Slemp Case.

The charges against Taylor are reminiscent of the statements placed in the Congressional record three years ago regarding the activity of C. Bascom Slemp, former Congressman from Virginia and later private secretary to President Coolidge. Where Slemp, however, was accused of selling postmasterships for campaign contributions, when a member of the House, Taylor is charged with levying contributions of from $25 upward on postmasters already in office. The statute which he is alleged to have violated forbids the solicitation of campaign funds "in any manner whatever by any person in any room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties by an officer or employe of the United States mentioned in the act."

Affidavits made by several postmasters tell of the receipt of dunning letters from Taylor in their respective offices.

Information relating to Taylor's collections from the postmasters, which are undisputed, came to the attention of Couzens, as the head of the Senate Civil Service Committee, last spring. Couzens brought about an investigation by the Civil Service Commission, which, after an inquiry in the field and an examination at which Taylor testified, lodged a complaint against the Congressman with the Department of Justice.

Prosecutor Himself Accused.

The department went through the motions of an investigation by referring the case to the United States District Attorney at Nashville, A. V. McLane. McLane is a political ally of Taylor and is holding office upon Taylor's recommendation. Indeed, according to one of the affidavits in the case, he assisted in the collection of the very fund which forms the basis of the charges against Taylor.

McLane reported to the Department of Justice that he had laid the case before a grand jury and it had refused to bring in a true bill.

"The grand jury concluded," he wrote, "that the charges grew out of petty politics and that they were unfounded of fact."

This report was transmitted to Couzens by Assistant Attorney-General Luhring, who wrote that the department felt that it was justified in accepting the statement of McLane that the matter had been thoroughly investigated.

Couzens Strikes Pay Dirt.

But Couzens, with characteristic tenacity, hung on. He wrote letters to seven of the Postmasters who had made complaints and found that six of them had not been asked to appear before the grand jury. He found also that

OIL TRIAL CLOSING WITH IMPORTANT EVIDENCE UNHEARD

Prosecution in Fall-Doheny Case Allows "Yellow Peril" Story to Stand Uncontradicted.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Testimony in the Fall-Doheny conspiracy trial came to an abrupt and puzzling end today, remarkable for the number of witnesses who did not testify. Argument by counsel will open Monday, instructions by Justice Adolph Hoehling will follow and the case will be in the hands of the jury Tuesday night or Wednesday.

For three weeks former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Edward L. Doheny, the oil magnate, have been on trial for conspiring to defraud the United States in the lease which Fall gave Doheny on the Elk Hills (Cal.) naval oil reserve in 1922. Two present and two former Cabinet members, a number of United States Senators, and a squadron of notable persons have testified.

Fall Fails to Go on Stand.

Fall, however, did not take the stand. Only two witnesses appeared directly in his behalf, and both were character witnesses. All other defense witnesses were produced by Doheny's counsel, although, to be sure, their testimony [illegible] Fall's. That of a former Cabinet member, accused of degrading his high office to rob the Government of which he was a part, should fail to take the stand in his own defense, was remarkable. It was remarkable also that J. J. Cotter, named by Doheny as the officer of his Pan-American Oil Co., who represented him throughout the negotiations for the lease, did not testify, although present.

But the omissions on the Government's side were even more conspicuous, and were far more likely to effect the outcome of the case. Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State during the period when, the defense contends, Japan was preparing for war against the United States, was here yesterday, but he was not called, consequently the "Yellow Peril" theory advanced by the defense in justification of the lease, stands in the record virtually uncontradicted.

Robison Important Witness.

One of the most important witnesses for the defense was Capt. (formerly Rear Admiral) John K. Robison, chief of naval engineering, and the only man not an engineer who has ever held the office. He was active in promoting the lease.

Robison succeeded the venerable Admiral J. B. Griffin, who related before the Walsh oil investigating committee of the Senate in 1923 how he had bitterly protested to Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby against turning the reserves over to Fall, and had said to his superior: "If Fall gets hold of them we might as well say good-by to the oil." He was one of the most important witnesses in the Walsh inquiry.

Gray and feeble with honorable years spent in the service of his country, Admiral Griffin sat in the courtroom throughout the trial. He was not called to testify.

Another Protester Not Called.

There was Commander H. A. Stuart, a naval engineer detailed to the oil reserves before Fall got custody of them through President Harding's executive order. It was Stuart who, when he learned of Fall's intention to lease the reserves, told him in his teeth, with language that cannot be printed here, what he thought of him, and defied him to ask for a court martial.

There was Commander Shafroth, another naval engineer similarly detailed, who added his protests to Stuart's and who like Stuart was there after transferred to distant fields of duty.

Both testified at length before the Walsh committee. Neither were called by the Government.

"I have to try this case with what I have, and according to my best judgment," said Owen J. Roberts, special prosecutor, when asked about these omissions. "There are some things that cannot be told now."

"Has the attitude of the administration had anything to do with it?" he was asked. "It has not," he replied emphatically. "President Coolidge and Secretary of State

MAKE DASH WHEN OFFICER UNLOCKS DOOR FOR TRUSTY

Prisoners Stun Deputy Sheriff Baumer With Blow and Run Through Open Gate to Street.

THREE SEIZE AUTO AND DRIVE AWAY

One of Fugitives Is M. L. Mainord, Who Confessed Creve Coeur Killings—Similar Break in 1922.

Seven prisoners, including the confessed slayer of two men, escaped from the St. Louis County Jail at Clayton at 4:40 p. m. yesterday. They swept Deputy Sheriff Rudy Baumer from his feet when he unlocked the "bull pen" door, knocked him unconscious with a 5-pound padlock, and locked him in with his own keys.

Ten minutes later, when the alarm spread beyond the jail walls, the fugutives were out of sight. Three had seized a cleaning company truck, throwing the driver to the street, and the others apparently had fled through alleys and lots converging on the court house square.

The truck was abandoned in South St. Louis but at a late hour last night the police had no clews to the whereabouts of the men. A similar jail delivery occurred at Clayton, Oct. 15, 1922, when six men fled after slugging a deputy sheriff.

List of Those Who Escaped.

The seven who escaped are:

Miles Levi Mainord, 24 years old, awaiting trial on his confession that he shot and killed two men while drunk at a Creve Coeur Lake roadhouse.

James Elmer Fox, 22, held in default of a $45,000 bond, one of two men who admitted wounding a University City policeman in a pistol fight over a stolen automobile.

Robert E. Williams, 22, jointly charged with Fox.

Louis Glassman, 21, serving a one-year term for carrying a concealed weapon, who escaped from St. Louis detectives last spring after admitting 107 burglaries.

Harold McArthur, 20, charged with grand larceny.

Emmett Wallace, 19, forgery.

Everett Dailey, 19, automobile theft.

The jail delivery became known when Night Sheriff Charles Weigman, approaching the courthouse, heard prisoners shouting in the jail. He ran in and discovered Baumer in a dazed condition behind the "bull pen" bars, locked in with 15 prisoners. Weigman opened the door and released Baumer.

Unlocked Door for Trusty.

Suffering from a severe cut on the upper lip, Baumer told his story. He had gone to the jail unarmed with a trusty, Tony Schimdt, who had been doing outside work. When he unlocked the bull pen door which opens outwards, six men rushed at him. Fox was the leader and Baumer struck him in the face with his heavy keys knocking him to his knees.

The others seized Baumer and the trusty and swept them into the cellroom, throwing them to the floor. Fox was pushing the door shut, when Glassman, who apparently was not among the plotters, ran from a cell.

"Let me go too, boys," he shouted.

"All right," replied Fox, re-entering the cellroom and pushing Glassman out. "I want to get a crack at that guy anyway."

He went to Baumer and struck him savagely with the heavy padlock, then leaned over and rifled the deputy's pockets of $20 in bills and a ring of small keys. He slammed the cell room door behind him, snapping the lock, and joined his accomplices who were pushing open the steel doors of the jail building which opens on a runway leading to the Sheriff's office in the courthouse.

Tried to Start Baumer's Car.

Apparently the fugitives tried to start Baumer's automobile standing near the runway, for his keys were found on the running board.

WOMAN KILLS MAN IN PISTOL FIGHT ON PERRY (OK.) STREET

She Surrenders to the Sheriff, but Declines to Disclose Cause of Trouble.

By the Associated Press.

PERRY, Ok., Dec. 11.—Bill Dearborn, 50 years old, was killed in a pistol fight on the main street here this afternoon with Mrs. Ellis Hobbs, 30. Mrs. Hobbs, who walked to the courthouse and surrendered to the Sheriff immediately after the shooting, would make no statement.

Dearborn is survived by a widow and two children. Mrs. Hobbs is married but has no children.

The duel was fought around Dearborn's automobile. Witnesses said Mrs. Hobbs produced a pistol and started shooting after ignoring Dearborn's demands that she enter the car.

Dearborn got an automatic from his car and opened fire. Two bullets passed through Mrs. Hobbs' coat, but neither struck her. Her third shot struck Dearborn above the heart.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Members of the United States customs harbor patrol boarded the steamship Vincent of the Cosmopolitan Line at a Hoboken pier today, tore up the flooring of the hatch and seized 1000 bottles of what they described as Piper Heidsieck champagne bottled in 1914.

The quartermaster of the ship was arrested on a charge of interfering with officers and the captain and two of the crew were ordered to appear for a hearing Monday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—A request that a suitable medal be given to Matthew A. Hensen, Negro, who accompanied Admiral Peary to the North Pole, was made in a bill introduced in the House today by Representative Celler, Democrat, New York.

He said Hensen, "who, at the peril of his own life, saved Peary from death and made the polar discovery possible, received neither reward nor honor, and today, old and ill from exposure, is an obscure menial servant in the customs house at New York."

GIRL AID OF TEXAS GOVERNOR-ELECT HELD IN BANK RAID

Stenographer for Attorney-General Moody Charged With Getting $1200 Loot in Holdup With Revolver

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 11.—Rebecca Bradley, 21 years old, graduate of the University of Texas, and a stenographer in the office of Attorney General and Governor-elect Dan Moody, was arrested tonight, charged with robbing the Farmers Exchange Bank, of Buda, Texas, today.

B. G. Neighbors, District Attorney of Hays County, said the girl had made a verbal confession. "Miss Bradley admitted everything to me but made no written statement," he said.

Officers earlier had said she would not admit the robbery.

The bank was looted of between $1200 and $2400 at the noon hour by an unmasked girl, who entered the building on the pretense of using a typewriter and, when all except two bank employes had gone to lunch, coolly produced a revolver and forced them into the vault, escaping in an automobile.

J. N. Littlepage, Austin Chief of Police, said Miss Bradley had been identified as the girl robber by S. A. Jamison and Waymon Howe, cashier and bookkeeper, respectively, at the bank, who were the victims of the holdup.

The girl was rushed to San Marcos, south of here, in the county in which the robbery occurred, to forestall habeas corpus proceedings filed in the district court here by her mother, Mrs. Grace E. Bradley. The proceedings were dismissed late tonight when the court was informed that Miss Bradley had been formally charged with robbery with firearms, a capital offense, in Hays County.

Judge O. S. Lattimore of the State Court of Criminal Appeals later fixed bail at $5000. The bond was made returnable to Judge George Calhoun of the 53d District Court here for approval of the signatures on the instrument.

The girl's mother is employed in the State Insurance Department. The girl's father is dead and the

LEAGUE FAILS TO ACT ON GERMAN ARMAMENT PACT

Council Adjourns Sine Die Without Deciding to Transfer Control to League Feb. 1.

HOPE OF PATCHING UP AN AGREEMENT

Foreign Ministers May Accomplish What Session Could Not—Rumor Briand May Resign.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Dec. 11.—The difficult question of the cessation of interallied control over Germany's armaments was still undecided when the Council of the League of Nations adjourned sine die tonight without registering any agreement in the matter. There was hope, however, that an accord would be reached at a private meeting of the Foreign Ministers before leaving Geneva.

Paris holds the key to a solution for the French Cabinet has to judge whether new assurances to be given by Germany in connection with the dismantling of fortresses and exportation of war material would justify turning over supervision to the League.

It was confidently hoped that new promises on the armament problem to be made by Germany would convince the Council of Ambassadors at Paris and the allied military experts and that the Foreign Ministers could reach an accord to substitute League supervision for interallied control Feb. 1. The unsettled problems, such as the dismantling of fortifications and the exportation of arms would be left for settlement by a special tribunal of arbitration.

A modified plan of League investigation into German armaments was adopted by the council before adjournment. This plan authorizes the council to decide by a majority vote whether an investigation is necessary. Germany won what is regarded as an important point by the adoption of a provision that no special control shall be exercised in the demilitarized Rhine zone unless this is later agreed upon by France and Germany.

Cabinet Sends Instructions; Rumor That Briand May Resign.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Foreign Minister Briand's proposal to withdraw allied military control over German armament Feb. 1 and to arbitrate any difference with Germany relative to that country's disarmament, is believed to be disapproved in some measure by the French Cabinet Ministers, who, after a two hours' session this evening, sent him new instructions.

The members of the Cabinet acted with utmost secrecy, but rumors from Geneva that Briand might resign if the Cabinet flatly rejected his plan, indicates the seriousness of the situation. Whether the Cabinet did more than suggest a modification, however, is still a matter of speculation.

The prestige of the Foreign Minister for the moment hangs on his peace work with Germany, and this is in the public eye because of the award to him of part of the Nobel peace prize. His negotiations with Gustav Stresemann, the German Foreign Secretary, over withdrawal of allied control, was evidence that he expected a settlement and the blunt refusal of the Ambassadors' Council to give Germany a clean bill of health was a bombshell.

The fact that the Council of Ambassadors and all the allied military experts have agreed that Germany has not fulfilled her obligations, and have refused to "whitewash" her, indicates how far ahead of the procession Briand has been traveling.

The French press has been discussing the expected withdrawal of allied control, as if all but insignificant differences had been ironed out. Since the Ambassadors have shown that really serious things are at stake, such as modernizing, instead of dismantling forts by Germany, the problem has assumed a somewhat different aspect.

While reports were circulated tonight that Premier Poincare had repudiated concessions made by Briand, another report was that Briand and Foreign Secretary Austin Chamberlain of Great Britain, stirred by their receipt of the Nobel peace prize, were felt to have exceeded the limits of discretion in favoring the cessation of interallied control.

Kellogg have not interfered with our judgment in any way."

Roberts and Atlee Pomerene were appointed by the President as special counsel to try the civil and criminal cases growing out of the oil scandal disclosed by the Walsh committee.

They won the civil suits to recover Elk Hills from Doheny and the Teapot Dome reserve from Harry F. Sinclair. Both of these civil cases are pending before the United States Supreme Court.

Defense Rests With McCormack.

The defense rested its case this morning after John McCormack, the famous tenor, had testified as a character witness for Doheny.

The prosecutors then presented their rebuttal. It was astonishingly brief.

Minutes of a meeting of the navy council held in the War Department in November, 1921, and presided over by Secretary of the Navy Denby were introduced. Denby has endeavored to take full responsibility for initiating the leases. The stenographic record of the council meeting recorded Admiral Robison as pressing for the leases, and quoting Fall as saying the oil would be gone in a few months drained off by private wells while Denby was recorded as expressing extreme reluctance, questioning the legality of the plan to exchange Government royalty oil for storage tanks at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and insisting that he would do nothing in the matter until he had consulted the naval affairs committees of Congress.

A more striking contrast than that between this picture and the one presented by Denby in his testimony is difficult to imagine.

Fall-Doheny Letter Misplaced.

John Holland, former Secretary to Senator Walsh, related how the original letter from Doheny to Fall outlining a plan to bid on the lease, was missing from the files of the Interior Department relating to the subject, and later was found in a small safe in a department where it had no proper reason to be.

Letters sent by Robison to Senator Harreld and Congressmen Kelley and Sinnott, in reply to inquiries about the leases, were introduced, they showed that Robison replied evasively and in such a manner as to conceal what had been done.

The defense presented no sure rebuttal. Both sides rested and the court recessed to Monday.

Change in Atmosphere.

A remarkable change in the entire atmosphere surrounding the trial has occurred in the last three days. Until then, the prosecution had everything its own way. Roberts had torn the testimony of important defense witnesses to shreds on cross-examination. It looked ominous for the defendants.

Then Doehny took the stand in his own behalf, made a remarkable impression and was subjected to a brief and comparatively mild cross-examination by Roberts.

Secretary Wilbur came on the stand and by refusing to produce certain documents, gave strong support to the defense claim that the lease was made to provide tanks at Pearl Harbor, because the country was threatened by a Japanese naval attack.

Postmaster-General Harry New appeared as a character witness for Fall. Two members of President Coolidge's Cabinet testified for the defense within the course of an hour.

These events and the bewildering brevity and lightness of the prosecutions rebuttal, have left a different taste in the mouths of those who have regularly attended the sessions of the trial.

The announcement that Roberts would speak first for the Government, leaving the closing argument for Pomerene, whose forensic limitations have been demonstrated and who has taken a passive part in the trial heightens the impression that conviction is unlikely.

family is said to have been in financial straits.

Attorney General Moody was in San Antonio tonight attending a meeting of the State American Legion.

L. C. Button and W. C. Wheeler, assistant attorneys general, waited at the sheriff's office for the habeas corpus proceedings. John Cofer Jr., was retained by Mrs. Bradley to represent her daughter.

In Texas, robbery with firearms, carries death as the maximum penalty, but it has never been assessed except when the defendant had shot someone in executing the robbery. A revolver was used by the girl who held up the bank.

Another Banker Is Puzzled.

While the legal skirmishing was in progress, Tom Nelson, president of the Farmers' State Bank at Round Rock, near here, disclosed the fact, that a young woman answering the description of the Euda bank robber, had "hung around" his bank for several days this week. She represented herself to be a Waco, Tex., newspaper woman.

Nelson said that yesterday afternoon the girl entered the bank and yelled "fire" several times, but that he and the bank employes paid little attention to her. A vacant house burned in Round Rock yesterday afternoon.

This morning the girl again went to the bank and was questioned about the fire, but denied all knowledge of it.

While in the bank, the young woman asked customers about crop conditions and several times questioned bank employes as to what they did in case of fire; whether they "dashed out of the bank."

Robbery at Noon Hour.

Police said they learned the girl was not at work today in Governor-Elect Moody's office. Her automobile is declared to correspond with the one used in the robbery, which occurred at the noon hour.

Jamison and Howe were preparing to go to lunch when the girl suddenly drew a revolver from her coat and commanded: "Stand where you are!" Jamison was leaving the vault. Howe was in his cage. The girl told Jamison to unlock the safe.

"Dig that money out," she commanded. Jamison handed out two packages of currency, each containing $1200. Another he dropped to the floor without the girl seeing it. The girl slammed and locked the vault door, having ordered both men to step inside.

Passers-by, who had not suspected the robbery, said they saw the girl calmly enter a small coupe and drive away on the post road toward Austin.

With a screwdriver, Jamison and Howe succeeded in opening the vault door from the inside within 10 minutes and telephoned the police.

STREET CAR AND FIVE AUTOS IN ONE WRECK

Olive Street Shopping Crowd Sees Machines Telescope One Another in a Flash.

The unusual combination of a street car and five automobiles in one wreck tied up traffic in Olive street 20 minutes yesterday and attracted a crowd of shoppers, office workers and messengers.

At 1 p. m. when both sides of Olive street between Tenth and Eleventh streets were lined with parked automobiles—an eastbound Delmar car rammed a shiny new Buick, which was emerging from a parking space. The impact sent the Buick sideways against another Buick. The second Buick jumped forward and struck a Ford. The Ford climbed onto the next in line, a Chevrolet. The Chevrolet smashed a Ford. The second Ford stood its ground, and those in front were saved.

All the automobiles except the first Buick car were unoccupied. The street car had many passengers. The first Buick was driven by H. E. Tippett, local manager of the Stein-Hall Manufacturing Co., Syndicate Trust Building. No one was injured, but Tippett was imprisoned in his car until policemen and United Railways trouble men extricated his car from its wedge-like position.

One by one, as the afternoon wore on, owners of the damaged automobiles appeared to view the wreckage. Dr. James H. Cummings of 4545 Lindell boulevard claimed his Buick; Edward Power, 2019A Alfred avenue, called for his Chevrolet, and Benjamin Ziegler, 6135 Michigan, took custody of his Ford. At a late hour, one Ford stood alone, awaiting an owner who tarried elsewhere, knowing not what had happened.

Senate to Vote Monday on Dropping English Case

hour in debating the resolution.

Those voting against the resolution were:

Republicans—Beck, Wisconsin; Cooper, Wisconsin; Frear, Wisconson; James, Michigan; LaGuardia, New York; Lampert, Wisconsin; Peavy, Wisconsin; Schafer, Wisconsin; Schneider, Wisconsin; Voigt, Wisconsin.

Democrats — Almon, Alabama; Black, New York; Hill, Washington; Howard, Nebraska; Huddleston, Alabama; Prall, New York; Steagall, Alabama; Taylor, Colorado, and Thomas, Oklahoma.

Independent—Kvale, Minnesota.

Farmer-Labor — Wefald and Carra, Minnesota.

Michener closed the debate by a forceful 10-minute speech in which he urged the House to vote its honest, sincere and "common sense" convictions, declaring that if the House decided against discontinuance of the trial the managers were prepared to conduct the case before the Senate.

At the conclusion of his statement, the House by a standing vote of 167 to 15 adopted the resolution. Representative Schafer made the point of no quorum, however, and demanded a roll call. The roll call showed 286 for the resolution and 22 against.

Sumners Opens the Debate.

Sumners, opening the debate, declared that when Judge English resigned the sole question left undetermined was whether or not the House through its managers should bring 125 witnesses to Washington and take up the time of the Senate to try the sole issue whether or not the Senate should bar the President of the United States and the Senate of the United States from again entrusting Judge English with Federal official power.

"We confront the practical proposition, and the House must decide it," Sumners declared. "The managers did not feel that they would be justified, as the representatives of the House, to put what we regarded as an unnecessary charge upon the public treasury and upon the Senate in order to protect the people against the possibility of this Judge being again clothed with power by the Federal Government, and in our judgment and I believe in the judgment of the House, there really can be no question as to what ought to be done in the situation."

Sumners retained five minutes of his allotted 10 minutes for a closing speech.

Attitude of LaGuardia.

La Guardia, speaking as leader of those opposing the resolution, declared that the expense of the trial should not be considered.

Contending that if the rule were followed there would be absolutely no system of jurisprudence or trials in this country, "Why, the Doheny trial is costing the United States hundreds of thousands of dollars," LaGuardia shouted. "What do you want to do? Discontinue that and have the Congress vote to the gentleman the congressional medal of honor?"

"I called the attention of the House to the conduct of this man on Decoration day, 1924," LaGuardia continued, "his letter of resignation to the President of the United States is not one of a penitent. There is not one word of contrition or regret in it. The contrary he says: 'I enjoy the confidence of the people of my district and that is sufficient for me,' and he resigned.

Precedent to Proceed.

"There is precedent to proceed with the trial, the resignation to the contrary, notwithstanding. Since when does the American Congress take the easier way for the sake of saving a few paltry dollars and permit this man to avoid trial by handing in his resignation? Gentlemen, the purpose in bringing offenders to trial, is not only to mete out punishment, but serve as a deterrent to others. The practice in the administration of the bankruptcy law in many jurisdictions of the country is very bad. Are you going to continue the continuance of this bad practice by permitting this man to escape trial? Why, if he were put on trial tomorrow, or on Monday, there would be but one alternative for this man to take, to go before the bar of the impeaching tribunal and plead guilty.

"Suppose a defendant is under indictment, and after indictment makes complete restitution without the consent of the District Attorney. Would that void the indictment? Not at all. He would have to face trial. The resignation, so far as the record goes, was made without the knowledge or the consent of the board of managers. Even if restitution is made in a case of larceny, that may be taken into consideration by the Judge in fixing the litigation, but the offense has been committed.

"The fact that this man usurped power as a Federal Judge, the fact that he committed improper administration in bankruptcy cases, the fact that he called State and county officers before him and read the riot act to them improperly and unlawfully, are these things to be removed from the question of impropriety by our conduct today?

Matter Up to Court, He Says.

"I believe the matter is beyond us. I believe that, having once drawn the indictment, having once approved the articles of impeachment by a vote of 360 to 62—I may be wrong in my figures—the matter rests squarely with the high court of impeachment, and we should not instruct the managers of the House to go before that court of impeachment and say that the House does not desire to urge further the articles of impeachment."

Huddleston supported La Guardia by declaring that the House would be setting a dangerous precedent by allowing English's resignation to stop the trial.

Cooper, drawing an analogy with a criminal trial, said that English should not be allowed to escape trial.

Presumption of Guilt.

"In the prosecution of criminal cases the fact of the flight of the man indicted, is always introduced by the prosecution as presumptive evidence of guilt," Cooper declared.

"This man runs away, virtually, in the face of this indictment, charging him with venality, miserable tyranny and corruption. He resigns and are we to say to other Judges—and there are many of them who need the warning—'You can disbar men, you can form a ring and put money in your pocket and in the pocket of your son; you can rob litigants in the name of the law, but if any trouble is raised about it in Congress or elsewhere, resign and we will give you a certificate of good character.'"

Bowling briefly announced that he had defended Judge English on the floor of the House, but in view of the resignation, now favored the managers' resolution. With the exception of Sumners, the other speakers declared they were against the resolution.

Action Will Set Precedent.

In closing the debate Chairman Michener gave a brief resume of the history of the investigation and informed the House that though a precedent would be established by the dropping of the charges, he urged the adoption of the resolution.

"This matter has been thoroughly discussed," Michener declared in a calm manner-of-fact voice. "Every single item in the articles of impeachment was argued and discussed before this body. Every man within the sound of my voice knows well that it was the argument in the House that it was the purpose of these proceedings to remove from office a man whom this body determined was unfit to longer hold office. Often we lose sight of the fact that the institution of impeachment under our Constitution is remedial and not punitive. There is no punishment attached to it other than a disqualification to hold office under the Federal Government.

Called Practical Question.

"It is a practical question with which we are confronted. If we were to go to the Senate we would take at least three weeks time."

Representative Edwards (Dem.) of Georgia asked what precedents the managers had found for the recommendation.

"There are no precedents, so far as I have been able to ascertain, where an officer impeached by the House resigned after the day for trial had been set in the Senate," Michener replied. "There are precedents where a man resigned after the investigation was started. There are precedents where men resigned after they had been impeached in the House. There is one precedent in the Kansas case, where a Judge was impeached in the House and articles of impeachment were presented to the Senate, but the respondent never appeared in answer to those charges, and in that case no proceedings were ever had or taken in either body. In other words, it seemed to be easy to read between the lines that the House recognized and that the Senate recognized and that the country recognized that the purpose of the proceedings had been accomplished and the man was removed and no further proceedings were had."

Text of the Report and Resolution Accepted by House.

THE text of the report and resolution recommending discontinuance of the prosecution of Judge English follows:

"The managers on the part of the House in the impeachment proceedings now pending in the Senate against George W. English, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois, respectfully report:

"That George W. English, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois, did on Nov. 4, 1926, tender his resignation to the President of the United States, which resignation was immediately accepted by the President.

"That on Nov. 10, 1926, the managers on the part of the House of Representatives appeared before the Senate, sitting as a court of impeachment in said impeachment proceedings, and advised the Senate of said resignation and its acceptance, and further advised the Senate that the managers had determined to recommend the dismissal of the pending impeachment proceedings, and desired to report their action to the House, and requested the Senate, sitting as a court of impeachment, to adjourn to such time as might be necessary to permit the House of Representatives to take appropriate action upon the report of the managers, whereupon the Senate, sitting as a court of impeachment, adjourned until Monday, the 13th day of December, 1926, at 1 o'clock p. m.

"The managers are of the opinion that the resignation of Judge English in no way affects the right of the Senate, sitting as a court of impeachment, to hear and determine said impeachment charges.

"Inasmuch, however, as the respondent, George W. English, is no longer a civil officer of the United States, having ceased to be a Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois, the managers on the part of the House of Representatives respectfully recommend that the impeachment proceedings pending in the Senate against said George W. English be discontinued.

"Resolved, That the managers on the part of the House of Representatives in the impeachment proceedings now pending in the Senate against George W. English, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois, be instructed to appear before the Senate, sitting as a court of impeachment in said cause, and advise the Senate in consideration of the fact that said George W. English is no longer a civil officer of the United States having ceased to be a District Judge of the United States for the Eastern District of Illinois, that the House of Representatives does not desire further to urge the articles of impeachment heretofore filed in the Senate against said George W. English."

WOMAN BEREAVED BY HEMAN AUTO FINDS WITNESSES

Mrs. Sophia Scallet, Whose Mother Was Killed in 1925, Discovers Persons Who Saw Mrs. Foster Hit

MADE DOOR-TO-DOOR CANVASS FOR WEEK

Grand Jury Is Expected to Hear Testimony That Contractor Was Speeding and Other Evidence.

Mrs. Sophia Scallet, 32 years old, passed a week in a door-to-door canvass of the neighborhood in Park and California avenues, in search of witnesses to the killing of Mrs. Elizabeth Foster by an automobile, the night of Nov. 26. The police had failed to find any witness. Mrs. Scallett found several witnesses, of whom at least two are said to have testimony of sufficient importance for the grand jury's consideration, when it takes up the case Dec. 21.

Mrs. Scallet's purpose was to bring about prosecution of John C. Heman Jr., contractor, whose automobile struck Mrs. Foster. Her reason was that Heman also drove the automobile which killed Mrs. Scallet's mother, Mrs. Lillian Schreiber, at Page boulevard and Walton avenue, March 8, 1925.

Mrs. Scallet, at her millinery store, 3527 North Grand boulevard, last evening told the story of her volunteer search for witnesses in the Foster case, in which she had no direct personal interest.

Tells of Mother's Death.

"At the time my mother was killed, I was too broken up to do anything," she said. "We were told at the time that the evidence against Heman was not sufficient for prosecution.

"When I read of the death of Mrs. Foster, I decided to go to the Coroner's inquest, and see what this man looked like. I saw him, and I heard the police say that they had been unable to find any witness, though they heard that a Mrs. Norton had seen the accident.

"Because of the lack of testimony, the Coroner's jury was compelled to render a verdict of accident, as in my mother's case, not fixing the blame.

"I thought someone ought to find this Mrs. Norton. I believed I could do it, and I left my store in care of a girl clerk the next day, and went to Park and California avenues to look for her. Nobody seemed to have heard of her. I asked in several stores, and finally one clerk told me a Mrs. Morton, not Norton, traded at his place.

Found Woman Witness.

"I found Mrs. Maud Morton at 1414 South Ewing avenue, and she told me what she had seen and said she would be willing to testify. I determined to get more witnesses and worked day after day, and in the evening, for many people were away from home in the daytime. I used a red-blue book list of persons living on that part of Park avenue and the adjacent parts of California, Ewing, St. Vincent and Eads avenues and Caroline street.

"Wherever I went, I explained to the people what I wanted, and why I was interested in the case. Most persons wanted to help, but few knew anything about the matter. Some men made annoying remarks, but I paid no attention to them. The second important witness I found, Lewis Willingham of 2727A Park avenue, was not mentioned to me by anyone else, and I found him only by encountering him in my house-to-house inquiry.

"I found others, whose names I took down, but do not recall now who said they had seen the accident. All agreed the automobile was running very fast—faster than any of the machines that were passing at about that time."

Gives Notes to Attorney.

Mrs Scallet turned over the names of witnesses found by her, and her notes as to their statements, to Louis Martin Wolf, attorney for relatives of Mrs. Foster. A $10,000 damage suit against Heman has been filed by Mrs. Foster's nephew, Charles E. Alexander, administrator of her estate. Wolf represents Alexander in the suit. Wolf advertised for witnesses of the accident, but the witnesses did not appear until Mrs. Scallet went out and found them.

Attorney Wolf has sent a letter to Circuit Attorney Sidener, asking for a thorough inquiry by the grand jury. The Circuit Attorney replied that all witnesses presented would be heard Dec. 21.

Willingham, one of the witnesses found by Mrs. Scallet, said yesterday that he was driving east when he saw the west-bound auto which struck Mrs. Foster. He said the car was running at a rate which he would estimate as 50 to 55 miles an hour. "I saw the woman just as the machine hit her," he said. He said the driver appeared to have swerved to the left, so that the right side of the car struck Mrs. Foster. Willingham stopped and picked up the woman, then left as others came, not wishing to be a witness in the case, he said.

Woman Witness Isn't Home.

The other witness, Mrs. Morton, was not at home when a reporter called.

Heman's statement as to speed was that he was running not more than 20 miles an hour, and that the woman walked in front of his car in such a manner that he could not avoid the accident.

The scene of the fatality was in front of 2811 Park avenue, on a westward slope, up which Heman's automobile was running. There is another hill to the east, and it is not uncommon for machines to be run at high speed on these blocks.

After the inquest into Mrs. Foster's death, Coroner Vitt asked and obtained Heman's promise that he would not drive his automobile for one year. Heman said he would employ a chauffeur. He said that, in makng this promise he did not admit culpability.

MRS. CHAPLIN TO SUE FOR DIVORCE AT ONCE

Refuses to Surrender Youngest Child to Comedian in Return for $300,000.

By the Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Lita Grey Chaplin, estranged young wife of Charles Chaplin, film comedian, will file suit for divorce and custody of their two babies immediately, it was announced tonight in a statement issued in her behalf by her attorney.

Mrs. Chaplin said this action is the result of failure to negotiate a settlement out of court.

"Negotiations pending have failed to result in any reasonable or adequate proposal on Mr. Chaplin's part for support, maintenance and education," read the statement by her attorneys. "Mr. Chaplin has refused to relieve her present inconvenience and necessity. He has even made it a condition of settlement that she give up her youngest baby. This she will positively not consent to under any circumstances."

Chaplin, who has been absent from his home for three days and nights, and his attorney, both were declared out of the city tonight. Earlier in the day, however, Chaplin's lawyer had announced a definite break in the negotiations.

"We made them a fair offer," he said, "and it was refused. The next move is up to them." The offer, it was intimated, was for a settlement of $300,000 on condition that Mrs. Chaplin give up one of the children.

SENTENCED FOR SWEARING OUT WARRANT WITHOUT EVIDENCE

Cobbler Who Caused Raid on Publisher's Home Given 5 Days and Fined.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 11.—C. T. Lumpkin, a cobbler of Avondale, was sentenced today to serve five days in jail and pay a $50 fine for his part in the raid last Tuesday on the home of Frederick I. Thompson, newspaper publisher.

Lumpkin testified he swore out a warrant for the raid because he heard a bootlegger boast of having delivered liquor to the Thompson home. The raid disclosed no liquor, however, and Lumpkin was convicted of contempt of court in having taken out the warrant without sufficient evidence. His punishment was the limit allowed by law.

SLAYER AND SIX OTHER MEN BREAK JAIL AT CLAYTON

Baumer said all the men were in their shirt sleeves, without hats.

The other prisoners in the cell-room made no effort to escape. When he regained consciousness, Baumer related, two men were trying to revive him—Thomas Wrenn of Kirkwood, awaiting trial for killing a neighbor, and Travis Watts, who has been sentenced to 35 years in prison for criminal assault. Baumer began to shout for help and the prisoners joined in the outcry.

Meanwhile, at Bemiston and Bonhomme avenue, a block from the jail, three men in shirt sleeves ran up to a parked sedan from which L. C. Russell of 4530 Forest Park boulevard, was alighting with a baby in his arms. They tried to seize the machine, and Russell was fighting them off with one hand, when they spied a truck of the Lungstras Dyeing and Cleaning Co. approaching.

The men abandoned Russell and ran to the truck, scrambling on the running boards and dragging the driver, Martin Heseman, from the wheel. They threatened him with knives, he said, and drove off in the truck toward St. Louis.

General Manhunt Ordered.

Immediately after the jail break became known, all police and deputy sheriffs of Clayton were ordered out to search for the fugitives, and police of St. Louis and various county municipalities were notified by telephone. Baumer had his wound treated by a physician and went home.

At 8:30 p. m., St. Louis police found the Lungstras truck parked in the 8100 block on Caroline street. In it was a blood-stained shirt, which indicated that Fox, perhaps, was injured in his encounter with Baumer.

Fox and Williams were arrested Oct. 16 in an East St. Louis rooming house where they were nursing bullet wounds, suffered according to their admissions in an encounter with three University City policemen who sought to question them in a stolen car the night before. Patrolman John Kaiser was wounded in the exchange of shots.

Mainord Held Since September.

Mainord, the oldest of the fugitives, had been a prisoner since September, awaiting trial for murder. He had confessed that he shot and killed James P. Duffy, part owner of the Duffquin roadhouse at Creve Coeur Lake, and his cousin, Malcolm J. McDonald, after they evicted him for disorderly conduct, Aug. 29.

Glassman had served since June, when he was convicted by a jury at Clayton. He had been out of the St. Louis workhouse only 11 months when he was arrested in April by city police. He was touring the city with detectives to point out homes he had robbed, when he escaped by a ruse, and was at liberty several days. The detectives were fined for letting him get away. Presumably, at the expiration of his jail term, he would have been taken to St. Louis for trial for burglary.

Similar Break in 1922.

The 1922 jail delivery was almost identical with the one yesterday. On that occasion, Deputy Sheriff William Grupp, acting as Warden, was struck down with an iron bar. Six men escaped and three were recaptured.

Investigation at that time showed that the escape had been planned for several days, and that prisoners had sawed through two iron bars of one of the jail inclosures through which three ben fled after Grupp had been slugged.

No jailer is stationed permanently in the jail building under the existing system, and inasmuch as most of the cell doors are warped or broken, the prisoners on the first floor are allowed the freedom of the entire enclosure. The building stands immediately west of the courthouse and when the deputy sheriff in charge has business there he crosses the runway from the Sheriff's office.

Recently, Sheriff Wilmas announced that no deputy sheriff would enter the jail unless accompanied by another deputy, but the rule has not been generally observed, especially at the hours when shifts are changing as was the case yesterday.

Besides the 22 prisoners on the first floor yesterday, there were 26 on the second floor who had no chance for flight. Among them was Robert Johnson, a Negro, who has appealed from a sentence to hang for a criminal assault in Webster Groves.

M'KINLEY DEATH REVIVES INTEREST IN LOVE TRAGEDY

Friends Wonder What Provision Late Senator Made for Widow—They Lived Apart for 30 Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Close friends of the late Senator William B. McKinley are speculating whether there is any provision in his will for his widow, Mrs. Kate Frisbee McKinley, whom he married in the early '80s, but from whom he was separated for 30 years. The value of his estate is said to run into the millions, notwithstanding the fact that in the last few years of his life he gave nearly $7,500,000 to charity, schools and churches.

Mrs. McKinley did not attend her husband's funeral, due to the fact that she is an invalid. For several years she has been living at various health resorts in the United States, although for more than 20 years she was in France and Italy, passing most of the time in Paris and Florence under the care of specialists.

Always Amply Provided For.

Her husband provided amply for her during his lifetime. She is the former Kate Frisbee of Champaign, Ill. Mrs. McKinley lives in Southern Pines, N. C., and it was there that the Senator saw her last, shortly before he went to Baltimore for an operation which was the precursor to his long illness and death a few days ago from cancer, at Martinsville, Ind.

Mr. McKinley was the son of the pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Champaign. The pair were married in 1881. The details of their love tragedy are little known.

When young McKinley went in for a political career, his wife is said to have opposed his ambitions. She thought he should conform to more intellectual ideas. He persisted and she suffered a nervous breakdown. Thereafter her name was scarcely mentioned.

McKinley is described at that period as an intensely busy young man and Mrs. McKinley as coldly intellectual. Mr. McKinley once said he knew but one person as coldly intellectual as his wife, and that one was Elihu Root.

Protected Her During Panic.

He provided an independent income for her based on securities which he placed to her credit. In the panic of 1893 these securities dropped in value, but the Senator substituted other gilt-edged paper and Mrs. McKinley never had a financial worry. When Senator McKinley made his frequent trips to Europe he always saw his wife and consulted her about charities in which she was interested, notably the Salvation Army, the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Home for Women and Children in Chicago and several down-state colleges. His many loans to deserving students at the University of Illinois were inspired by her.

During his campaigns for office there were many whispered stories about his domestic life, but they were based only on malicious gossip. He let his intimates know that his love for his wife had never died.

In the panic of 1893 Mr. McKinley is said to have been "in" for $3,000,000 in Kansas loans. The panic virtually broke him. However, he set to work, and by 1903 had paid 100 cents on every dollar given him for investment. After the Kansas loans were worked out, Mr. McKinley devoted himself to public utility development, and achieved success.

MANICURE GIRL, HART WIDOW, SHARES IN $1,000,000 ESTATE

Aged Jeweler's Former 18-Year-Old Bride, Whose Suit Was Nearing Trial, Gets Settlement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Kate Hart Bigelow, who, as an 18-year-old manicure girl, married James Harvey Hart, 86-year-old retired jeweler, will share in the $1,000,000 Hart estate, although she was not mentioned in the will.

Counsel for the five daughters of Hart by an earlier marriage today filed a proposed settlement agreement granting the widow a dower right of a life income of one-third of the estate. The widow had contested the will and the case was about to come to trial.

Mrs. Bigelow married Hart in 1918, and he changed his will, which left everything to his daughters, to bequeath her a one-third share. After a brief honeymoon Hart brought suit for annulment, which he lost, and his wife obtained a separation verdict. He then made a will similar to the one in effect before his second marriage, making no mention of his wife. He died at the age of 94 last January and his wife subsequently remarried.

JAPANESE EMPEROR GIVEN OXYGEN TO KEEP HIM ALIVE

Monarch Seriously Ill of Pneumonia; Empress, Eldest Son and Daughter at Bedside.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 11.—Emperor Yoshihito is seriously ill of pneumonia. Oxygen and heart stimulants are being administered to keep him alive.

His eldest son, Prince Regent Hirohito, and the Crown Princess Nagako, have joined the Empress Sadako at the bedside of the stricken monarch. The Emperor's mother, Countess Yanagiwara also is at Hayama, a seaside town not far from Tokio, where the Emperor lies in his villa. Prince Chichibu, second son of the sovereign, will take the fastest steamer leaving England for Japan.

The Emperor, an invalid for many years, suffered attacks of cerebral anemia during the past year. He has been subject to fainting spells and high temperature.

Several weeks ago a severe cold developed into bronchitis. The sufferer did not rally to the efforts of several physicians, and two days ago it was announced that bronchial pneumonia was present in his right lung.

MANHOLE BLOWS HALF HIS TROUSERS OFF, PICKS POCKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Residents of the lower West Side were giving manholes a wide berth today after a freak explosion that threw a woman up in the air, tore the trousers half off a man and picked his pocket of $50.

Three manhole covers, their vents sealed by snow and ice, blew up at Seventh avenue and Twenty-second street. Mrs. Mildred Connelly, standing on one cover, was tossed 10 feet in the air and severely bruised.

Robert Craig was near another and the blast ripped off the right side of his trousers, turned the pocket inside out and frisked away with his "roll." The torn trousers were cast back to the street but the money failed to reappear. Craig was treated by an ambulance surgeon for astonishment and left for his tailor's.

ESCAPES FROM PRISON, WIFE RETURNS HIM

Mrs. Elmer Decker Drives Fugitive Husband Back to Leavenworth in Auto.

Elmer Decker, of Centerville Station, near East St. Louis, and Leavenworth, Kan., is back at Leavenworth, where he will remain the next three years.

Decker, prominent in East St. Louis underworld circles, had been at the Federal prison at Leavenworth since the last September term of the East St. Louis Federal court. At that time he was sent to prison for robbing an interstate shipment.

However, on Dec. 1, Decker, with Oscar Shields, once of Indianapolis but now of Leavenworth for robbing the United States mails, was working with the rock quarry locomotive. They were trusties and escaped.

He arrived in East St. Louis, where his wife and six children live, Friday and left the same day because Mrs. Decker put him in the Decker automobile and drove all Friday night. Yesterday morning she delivered Elmer back at the Leavenworth penitentiary gates.

"You take him," she said to Acting Warden T. B. White. "This is the best place for him." And Mrs. Decker got back into the Decker automobile and set out for Centerville Station.

While Mrs. Decker was taking her husband back to Leavenworth Shields was being arrested by Terre Haute police.

SHOPKEEPER AND OFFICER SHOT BY HOLDUP PAIR

bers in both instances, after searching their victims at the point of revolvers, locked them in ice boxes, and escaped. The holdups occurred 15 minutes apart.

William Rodefeld's saloon, 2126 Madison street, was entered at 5:45 p. m. and Rodefeld and three customers were robbed of $248. The robbers forced Rodefeld, William J. Laughlin, 2521 Mullanphy street, Arthur Hess, 2618 North Twenty-first street, and Jules Ostrowski, 1819 North Twentieth street to turn their faces to the wall and submit to a search. They took $108 from Laughlin, $45 from Hess, $12 from Ostrowski, $45 from Rodefeld, and $36 from the cash register, then forced the four into an ice box in the rear. The victims were released half an hour later by a customer who heard them pounding on the door.

Fifteen minutes later two men entered Edward Gadell's saloon and after taking $70 and the diamond ring from him, ordered him into his ice box at the back of the saloon. Gadell was freed by a policeman who heard his cries.

Henry Bretscher, proprietor of a dry goods store at 911 Whittier street, was robbed of $38 at 8:10 p. m. yesterday, by an armed man, who made a purchase and handed Bretscher a $10 bill. When Bretscher went to his cash register for change, the robber drew a revolver.

Joseph Rovisc and Isadore Schwartz, proprietors of a cigar store at 5872½ Delmar boulevard, were robbed at 5:20 p. m. yesterday of about $50 by two armed men who, police say, fired a shot as they fled. The bullet broke the window of a Kohn Store, 5862 Delmar boulevard.

BRIDE BEATEN TO DEATH

Husband of Less Than a Month Sought by California Police.

By the Associated Press.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 11.—Mrs. Cornelia Buttles Murphy, 27 years old, bride of less than a month, died here today as the result, police declare, of a brutal beating inflicted by her husband, Lee D. Murphy, 34. Police are hunting the husband.

The Murphys were married on Nov. 17 in Fresno and the alleged attack took place in their apartment here on the night of Nov. 30. After the attack, police say, the husband left and Mrs. Murphy was taken to the home of friends. Death was attributed to an internal hemorrhage caused by the attack.

BOY, 4, FINDS REVOLVER AND WOUNDS GIRL, 8

Small Customer in Candy Shop Invades Back Room to Get Weapon.

Using a revolver which had been laid in a convenient place by Rufus Hunt to protect his confectionery shop at 2723 South Seventh boulevard against a possible holdup, 4-year-old Robert Grover shot and critically wounded Hunt's daughter, Nellie, 8 years old, at 7:50 o'clock last night.

Hunt had left his revolver in his bedroom, just back of the confectionery shop. There it was found by Robert who had gone to the confectionery from the home of his parents, Mary and Bryan Grover, at 2711 South Seventh boulevard.

Robert picked the weapon up and came back to the front room, where Nellie was leaning on a low icebox, drawing a picture on a sheet of paper. Waving the revolver, the little boy shouted to her to look. As she turned the weapon was discharged.

Nellie's mother was in the store at the time but did not notice that Robert had the revolver until a moment before the shot was fired. Policemen took the little girl to City Hospital.

WHOLESALERS ASKED WHY SCALPERS GOT SERIES TICKETS

Revenue Office Traced 2000 of Them, Bought for Out-of-Town Customers, to Speculators.

Employes of Washington avenue wholesale merchants are being asked to come to the office of the Internal Revenue Collector to explain how tickets for the 1926 world's series baseball games here, which they bought for their employers for redistribution to out-of-town buyers, fell into the hands of scalpers. Some 2000 of these tickets have been traced to scalpers.

The employes are making affidavits that the tickets were given to out-of-town buyers and that, hence the buyers must have resold to scalpers.

It is recalled that Washington avenue wholesalers, in advance of the world's series appealed to St. Louis holders of tickets for three games to surrender those for one game in order that the city's visiting business customers might be accommodated.

LEAVES NOTE FOR GIRL AND ENDS LIFE AT HER HOME

Cecil L. Ryan, 25, Insurance Agent, Takes Poison — Miss Edna Shepley Denies Quarrel.

"Honey, what on earth do you mean? You can always have something to think of now. Yours and only yours, CECIL."

Cecil L. Ryan, 25 years old, of 2716 North Twenty-first street, knocked at the door of the home of Miss Edna Shepley, 2613 Palm street, about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, handed in the foregoing note with the request, "Give this to Miss Edna," toppled to the porch, and died of poisoning a few moments afterward.

Miss Shepley, later in the day, however, said that Ryan did not kill himself because of any quarrel between them. She said she loved him and they had not disagreed.

Ryan, who was employed by the American National Insurance Co., 2806 North Grand boulevard, as an agent, called on the company superintendent shortly before noon yesterday and asked that his check be given him a trifle earlier than usual. He was leaving the office for the day, he said, but remarked he would be "at that banquet tonight," a banquet held for the company's agents. He received his check.

It was about an hour later he arrived at Miss Shepley's home, knocked, handed in the note and fell to the floor of the porch.

He was carried into the house, laid on a bed and Miss Shepley was called. She tore open the note and read it.

Miss Shepley went to Ryan's side. He was lapsing into unconsciousness, but was still able to murmur that he had taken poison. Miss Shepley fainted and was carried away. A few moments later Ryan mumbled he hoped he would get well. He died shortly afterward.

According to relatives, Ryan was divorced about nine months. Mrs. Ethel Ryan received custody of their 5-year-old child.

Miss Shepley said that she had known Ryan for two years, but did not know until a short time ago that he was married. She insisted Ryan and she had not quarreled, other than "a few little lovers' quarrels," and that at the conclusion of his last visit they had parted friends.

Ryan's parents live in Pevely, Mo.

350,000 Reindeer in Alaska.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Santa Claus has more reindeer for his sleighs this Christmas than ever before. There are 350,000 reindeer in Alaska, the biological survey reported today, an original herd of 1280 animals imported from Siberia, 25 years ago, having increased to that extent. The raising of reindeer has become an important commercial enterprise in the last few years, the animals being distributed over the territory in 110 herds.

20,000 Cars of Fruit Delivered Here.

Government reports show that about 20,000 cars of fruit and produce are delivered to St. Louis annually, a statement by the St. Louis Fruit and Produce Association says. This does not take into account the large supply also brought here by truck for distances as great as 100 miles. Otto Furbinger, president, and other officers of the association were re-elected Friday.

FRANZ A. CRAMER RESIGNS AS HEAD OF NUGENT STORE

President of Dry Goods Co. Will Accept Similar Place With Firm in Denver, Colo.

Franz A. Cramer, president of B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co., for the last six years, has resigned to accept a similar position with the Denver Dry Goods Co., of Denver, Colo., owned and controlled by Scruggs-Vandervoort & Barney, it was announced yesterday.

Cramer's successor has not been named, but it is expected that an announcement concerning the new head of Nugent's will be made this week from the New York headquarters of the National Department Stores, Inc., under which Nugent's and three other large stores located in various sections of the country are consolidated.

Cramer succeeds Frank M. Mayfield, president of Scruggs-Vandervoort & Barney, as president and manager of the Denver store. Mayfield, then vice-president of Scruggs, was appointed to the place at the time of the purchase of the Denver concern by the Scruggs-Vandervoort & Barney Co., in 1924 for a sum said to have been $5,000,000. Since Mayfield's election to the presidency of Scruggs, following the death of Melville L. Wilkinson in 1925, he has managed both stores, although residing here.

Began as Cash Boy.

The new president of the Denver Dry Goods Co., began his business career as a cash boy in the Wurzburg Dry Goods Co., of Grand Rapds, Mich. He later worked for an Omaha, Neb., department store and came to Nugent's 17 years ago as a silk buyer. He became merchandise manager and vice-president, and in 1920 succeeded the late Dan Nugent as president of the concern.

Under Cramer's management there has been a general expansion of the Nugent business program, including consolidation under the National Department Stores and the inauguration of a $5,000,000 building program, the first unit of which has been completed. Gross receipts of the concern during the six years Cramer has been president were increased approximately $10,000,000 over income for the previous six-year period. Cramer is a stockholder in the Nugent company and will retain his interest, although resigning as a director of the National Department Stores. He will continue as a director of the Bry-Block Mercantile Co. of Memphis.

In accepting the new position Cramer also resigned as president of the Associated Retailers of St. Louis. Explaining his departure from St. Louis in a letter to fellow members of the association, Cramer said: "New business affiliations offering greater interest and opportunity call me to Denver. St. Louis, its merchants and mercantile establishments remain dear to me, however, and will always be among my most pleasant recollections."

Son as Assistant.

Cramer will take with him to Denver as his assistant his son, Franz A. Jr., who has resigned as merchandise manager of Nugents. Young Cramer, who is 23 years old, is a graduate of the School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania.

Cramer is 46 years old and resides at Clayton and Hanley roads, St. Louis County, with his wife and son. The family will move to Denver during the Christmas holidays and the father and son will take up their new duties Jan. 3.

Marconi Says He Is Not Engaged.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — Senator Marconi, commenting on the Rome report that he was engaged to Countess Maria Scali, informed the Sunday Times: "I am not engaged to anybody."

AUTO HORN THAT TALKS SUBJECT OF DETROIT SUIT

Financial Backer of Device Charges Inventor Would Resell Rights He Bought.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—A speaking automobile horn which, it is claimed, will voice clearly and in the best of English the information of in what direction the driver of the car purposes to turn, is the subject of litigation.

Charles Negrim, who described himself as financial backer of the device, was granted an injunction yesterday restraining his partner, Benjamin Freeble, the inventor of the device, from disposing of the rights to the patented device.

Negrim claimed that in addition to automobile usage, the principle could be applied to railroad crossing signals, which would chant, "Trains coming north," or whatever was desired.

RENEWS CHARGES OF CAMPAIGN LEVY ON POSTMASTERS

neither of the two inspectors who had looked into the case, one for the Postoffice Department and one for the Civil Service Commission, had been summoned.

He sat down and wrote a letter to McLane. It sizzled. He said, for one thing, that he wanted to correct McLane's impression that he was a lawyer.

"If I were a lawyer," he said, "it might be easier for me to understand why you are unable to get results."

Couzens also wrote to Sargent calling attention to the fact that the six Postmasters and two inspectors had not been called before the grand jury.

"This committee," he said, meaning his Senate Committee on the Civil Service, "is not satisfied with this outcome of its effort to get at the facts. It occurs to me that the outcome of the grand jury investigation would have been different had the proper Governmental departments charged with the responsibility in the matter been permitted to give evidence."

In another letter to Sargent he gave the names of the Postmasters and particularly cited the statement of one of them, J. H. Gammon, who said: "Taylor did solicit funds from me and received the same. Possibly you know that I have a canceled check."

Plain Talk to Sargent.

"Just why," demanded Couzens of Sargent, "was this Postmaster not called?"

"If your Assistant Attorney-General (Luhring) will examine the complaints made to the Civil Service Commission by these Postmasters that I have enumerated," continued Couzens, "he can perhaps tell me why they were not called before the grand jury. For the information of this committee I would like to have this information, so as to submit it to the committee before any action is taken."

He concluded by expressing his conviction that there had been collusion to prevent an indictment, and requesting that McLane be taken off the case and a special attorney substituted.

The money in question was collected by Taylor in 1924 to make up a deficit of $3000 incurred in his campaign of 1922, when he was renominated for Congress after a hot fight in the Republican primary. Taylor in his defense before the Civil Service committee said that none of the money was converted to his personal use, and that, moreover, there was a distinction between money collected for future campaign use and money collected to pay off the debt of a past campaign. It was evident from questions put to him that the committee did not think much of this distinction. The collection from the Postmasters today of a campaign deficit appeared to the committee to have been as much for a "political purpose," in the meaning of the statute, as if it had been taken for a pending or a future campaign.

Taylor Denies Violating Law.

Taylor, however, stuck to his contention that he had violated neither law nor common practice. Among the Postmasters who were interviewed by the investigator for the Civil Service Committee and whose statements were incorporated in a memorandum submitted by the committee to the Attorney-General was John J. Graham of Knoxville who contributed $500 to help pay the $3000 note which had been given a bank to cover Taylor's 1922 deficit.

Graham contributed more after he had been appointed Postmaster in December, 1923. Graham said that his contribution was made without solicitation by Taylor.

Dr. Gammon, who was Postmaster at Coal Creek until December, 1925, testified that when he first received a request from Taylor for money to apply on the deficit he made no response. Taylor wrote to him again early in 1924, assessing him $40 and saying he was one of four Postmasters who had failed to pay their assessments. Gammon then came across with a check for $25, of which a photostatic copy was attached to the committee's report.

$200 by Return Mail.

John W. Jackson, Postmaster at Columbia, said that in June, 1924, he received a letter from Taylor which to the best of his recollection was as follows:

"My dear Mr. Jackson. Fortunately I have no opposition this time and will have no expense. But in my last campaign I was left with a deficit of about $4500. Would it be asking too much of you to send me a check by return mail for $200."

Jackson sent the money.

Referring to the Jackson matter the memorandum from the Civil Service Committee to the Attorney-General said: "The case against Taylor seems clear. Mr. Jackson served as Postmaster under an appointment dated Oct. 1, 1923, and is still serving."

The letter was received by Jackson in the postoffice building at Columbia which it appears was in violation of section 119 of the criminal code.

Joseph F. Morrow, postmaster at Mt. Pleasant, received a letter similar to Jackson's, asking for $100. He received it at the postoffice. He sent the $100 and got a reply from Taylor thanking him for his "promptness and generosity." In this instance also, according to the committee report, the criminal code was violated.

John M. White of Bell Buckle, was assessed and contributed $100. Beecher D. Phillips of Algood was asked for $150 but did not cough up. Blanton W. Burford of Lebanon sent cash, the amount of which was not specified in his testimony. He received a letter of acknowledgement.

Clarence L. Shoffner of Shelbyville testified that he learned from District Attorney McLane that money was needed to meet Taylor's campaign deficit. He contributed. "The deficit was discussed by and among several Postmasters," said Shoffner, "with McLane doing most of the talking. Several stated that they intended to respond."

W. G. Hogan of Rives was solicited by Taylor and came across with $50.

Mrs. Mamie D. Phillips of Brighton sent $25; in this case again, it is charged, there was a clear violation of the criminal code.

B. L. Kemp of Adamsville was assessed $100 and paid it.

When McLane, the friend of Taylor, investigated "the charges against Taylor" he did not call Kemp, Burford, Mrs. Phillips, Gammon, Hogan or B. D. Phillips.

Couzens wants to know why.

Woman Injured by Automobile.

Mrs. Anna Sanders, a Negro, 43 years old, of 3028 Washington avenue, suffered a fractured collar bone when she was struck at 9:40 o'clock last night by an automobile driven by Ernest Forister, 27, a carpenter, of 2750 Menard street. She was taken to City Hospital No. 2. Forister told police that the woman stepped in front of his car at Chouteau avenue as he was driving south on Twelfth street.

FOR SITES CONSIDERED FEDERAL BUILDING SOAR

ent Expert Here to Select tion Warns Against Get- ting Them Too High.

arning against what he con- ntidily high prices for a site new $10,000,000 Federal ng here was issued yesterday F. Field, site expert of the y Department. Since it be- known the Government would or a site facing the projected ial Plaza, he declared, real prices in that section have said real estate agents had told him they could assemble the property on the west side of Twelfth boulevard and Pine street, for $2,250,000, or in the block bounded by Olive, Pine, Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets for $1,500,000, but that he has since learned these locations are being held at higher prices. Part of the Twelfth boulevard property is controlled by interests planning a skyscraper hotel, which have given no indication of a departure from that plan.

If necessary, to prevent the Government being "held up," Field added, he would recommend a cheaper site not on the plaze. He has been offered the old Southern Hotel block, at Broadway and Walnut street, for about $200,000, or possibly the Merrell Drug Co. property, Fourth and Market streets, adjoining a site the Government owns. Field will hear persons with suggestions at 207 Federal Building.

Extra Session of Turkey's Cabinet.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 11.—An extraordinary session of the cabinet was summoned at Angora this morning. The reason for the meeting was not divulged, but it is thought to be a result of the general Balkan alarm over the recently signed Italo-Albanian treaty.

The King today resumed active participation in the affairs of state by receiving Minister of the Interior Goga, with whom he had a long conference.

CHARGES MEXICO IS PLANNING WAR UPON NICARAGUA

President Diaz of Latter Country Issues Manifesto to Own People and Foreign Nations.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Dec. 11.—President Adolfo Diaz of Nicaragua today issued a manifesto, in which he renewed his accusations that the Mexican Government is actively supporting the present Liberal revolutionary movement in this country.

The Liberal party, has set up a government, recognized by Mexico, under former Vice-President Juan Sacasa at Puerto Cabezas on the East coast of Nicaragua.

Diaz offers a general amnesty, compensation for revolutionary losses and a national government in which the Liberal party would have equitable representation. The Diaz manifesto says:

"My Government has information that the Mexican Government, following the same policy which impelled it to equip and dispatch last August to the Pacific Coast of Nicaragua an armed expedition on the Mexican vessel El Tropico, is now organizing and equipping another expedition of more formidable proportions to be launched from Puerto Mexico, Mex., against the Atlantic Coast of Nicaragua.

Charges Warlike Attack.

"It is understood from reliable sources that it is the plan of the Mexican Government that the vessel Superior, now being outfitted by officials of the Mexican Government with an armed expedition, should proceed shortly to Nicaragua under the escort of Mexican gunboats for the purpose of making war against the constitutional government of Nicaragua over which I preside.

"In bringing to the attention of the Nicaraguan and foreign public these manifest designs of the Mexican Government to make war without any provocation on my government through the agency of Mexican military and naval officials and certain Nicaraguans calling themselves constitutionalists, my government affirms its confidence in its ability under any normal conditions to maintain order in the republic and to re-establish its control over certain remote and sparsely inhabited regions of the Atlantic Coast now held by the Liberal revolutionists.

Holds Calles Responsible.

"The members of the conservative party supporting my Government cherish the warmest feelings of sympathy, racial kinship and fellowship of ideals with the Mexican people, but my Government feels a solemn obligation to set its face resolutely against the efforts of the Mexican Government, as to erect a political order in Nicaragua, with the aid of a Nicaraguan political faction, which, following the recent sinister examples of its progenitor, would confiscate property, deny religious freedom, close churches, banish ministers of religion and establish in general in Nicaragua the manifold evils of Communism and political disorder now only too apparent in Mexico.

"My Government feels that many worthy Nicaraguans, members of the historic and illustrious liberal party of this country of noble traditions, have in the blindness of political passion allied themselves with the forces of Communism radicalism and religious persecution now in control and running rampant in Mexico, but not representative of what is believed to be the true sentiments of a large majority of the Mexican people. My Government believes that these Nicaraguan liberals, on due reflection upon the tragic consequences which they might bring upon their native land by aiding in turning it over to the horrors of the regime of President Calles of such unhappy fame throughout the world, will, because of their inherent patriotism and love of country, their love of their religion and their respect for the rights of property, decide to accept the olive branch of peace which my government ever holds out to them."

FORD REPLIES TO STRAUS CHARGE BY NEW JEW ATTACK

Reply to Banker, to Be Published in Magazine, Says Race Controls Even the Federal Reserve Bank.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 11. — Henry Ford, in an issue of his newspaper, the Dearborn Independent, to be published Dec. 25, replies to an attack made upon him by Nathan Straus Sr, New York philanthropist, in a recent address before the National Conference on Palestine, by reiterating charges previously made.

Straus was quoted as saying in part that Ford had been "misled into a campaign of slander against the Jewish people" and had asked that Ford select eight members of a committee of 10 to weigh the facts.

Through his article, Ford charges that "the international Jew today is in direct control of all financial centers of Government, including the United States Federal reserve bank system."

Says Bankers Fear Jews.

Proofs of the article in the Dearborn Independent were made available today. Among other charges Ford asserts that the "international Jew pulls so many strings in business that no banker or business man feels safe to oppose him," that "he either owns the press or controls it so that only pro-Jewish facts are ever admitted to print;" that "he controls the revolutionary elements of the world on one hand and the ultra-conservative elements on the others, so that he has equal power in communistic Russia and in capitalistic England, not to mention the theater, the motion picture or agriculture."

Replying to a quoted statement of Straus that "Ford is using his wealth for vicious ends and is fomenting race hatred," the article replies that "as to philanthropy, it was a great thing a hundred years ago. Genuine philanthropy today means the payment of such wages as will render philanthropy unnecessary."

"It may be," Mr. Ford, continues, "that Mr. Straus revolutionized the wage rate paid to employes of the department stores which he controlled and that he reduced all excess profits on goods, but if so he has neglected to chronicle it in the long list of his philanthropies printed in 'Who's Who'.

"Unfortunately for our full appreciation of that list, this magazine always has held that there is something shameful in receiving 'charity' and something shameful in offering it. We have contended that the truest charity was the effort to make charity superfluous.

Broad Espionage System.

The article adds that "the international Jew is the most closely organized racial entity in the world with an espionage system that covers every village and every larger center in the country.

"These are statements deducible from the most deliberate utterances of Jewish spokesmen, and illustrated at large by Jewish 'history,'" the article says. "To agree with the Jewish claim to pre-eminence in these matters is no more a 'slander' than to agree with their claim to pre-eminence in the clothing trade. Besides that, it is a service to the American people to tell them who their bosses are."

As to selection of a committee of judges, the article suggests that is unnecessary in that "the Dearborn Independent, in a very full and pertinent statement, laid the matter before the only competent judges in this cause, namely the American people, and it is now proper for Jewish spokesmen to meet the issue by addressing their defense to the same judges. Issuing new challenges does not obscure the fact that a previous one still stands."

Hygiene Association Meeting.

DOCTORS REPORT DISCOVERY OF SYNTHETIC THYROXIN

Tests, London Accounts Say, Indicate It Is Equal to That Obtained From Glands.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Sunday Observer announces the discovery of synthetic Thyroxin by Dr. C. R. Harrington, of University College Hospital, London, co-operating with Prof. George Brager, of Edinburgh. They took as their basis the researches of Dr. Edward C. Kendall, of Rochester, Minn., who, in 1917, isolated Thyroxin from thyroid, of which it is an active principle.

It is understood that the new thyroxin is obtained from coal tar products and iodine and that in tests on human beings has apparently shown equal efficacy with thyroxin obtained from the gland. It is used in the treatment of goiter and allied diseases.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

B. B. B.—We do not work problems. You might ask your bank to figure the interest for you.

E. S.—Violin dealers and old book dealers would undoubtedly be interested in the 1726 violin and the old Bible.

BOOSTER.—See the answer to Able, which appeared in the Post-Dispatch on Nov. 19, regarding the requirements for applicants for positions on the police force.

MRS. R. H. M.—The 1823 silver dime is worth about 25c. The 1853 quarter with arrows is worth 30c. We do not send such information by mail—see the heading of the column.

P.-D. READER.—Write to the Bureau of Patents, Washington, D. C., for instructions regarding patent applications. The patent would protect you from having the article imitated by other sellers.

S. McC.—You should consult the Missouri State Library Commission about the list of books suitable for a rural school or inquire at the Traveling Library Department of the St. Louis Public Library. We could not give such a list without knowing the kind of books, the number of children and other such details.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

M. O. L.—It is legal for a woman to smoke on the streets in St. Louis and so a woman doing so could not be arrested.

FRED McM.—You can obtain information regarding the Arkansas soldiers' bonus and insurance by writing to the Secretary of State, Little Rock, Ark.

G. C. S.—You might garnish the boy's wages for the loss of the bill, but it probably would be wiser to report the loss to the police for investigation.

THANKS.—Write to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Jefferson City, Mo., for information regarding the automobile license of the person in whom you are interested.

WILLIAM.—Notes that have not been renewed and upon which no interest has been paid can be made the subject of a suit at any time within 10 years after the notes became due or after the last payment made on them.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

He'lth and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

B. O. P.—Try the following formula to correct the dry condition of your scalp, as well as to prevent dandruff and falling hair: Mix 1 drachm resorcin, ½ drachm ether, 1 drachm olive oil, 1 drachm castor oil, 1 ounce alcohol. Shake well whenever the tonic is used. Apply the tonic to the scalp every night and morning by rubbing it in well with the fingertips.

MORRIS.—Salicylate of soda should be taken in doses of 5 or 10 grains mixed with sweetened water two or three times each day after meals. Copious draughts of water should follow the dose to prevent irritation of the stomach and digestive disturbances. Very hot baths, such as Dr. Brigham's, at Barnes' Hospital, which is especially well equipped to handle cases like yours, would also be of benefit.

ANXIOUS.—We judge from your description that you have eczema on your arms. If this diagnosis is correct the following ointment should give relief: Mix 1 drachm nitrate of mercury ointment, 1 drachm oxide of zinc, 1½ drachms lead water, 2 grains carbolic acid and 1 ounce of lard. Make into an ointment and apply once daily to the affected skin. You should build up your general health by exercise, sleep and wholesome diet.

MISS DESPONDENT.—Psoriasis is a disease of such character as to be only successfully treated by a skilled specialist because it has many stages that require particular treatment appropriate only to each stage of the disease and hardly ever in any stage. Cure is possible for a young person who possesses patience and perseverance. It would be worse than useless for us to suggest home treatment for a disease that requires expert attention for cure.

SUBSCRIBER.—Write to the New England Historic Genealogical Society, Boston, Mass., regarding the ancestry that you desire to trace. You might advertise the Jefferson County lands through some of the mining and metallurgy journals or through the newspapers. Consult the German Consul, 403 Pine street, regarding the estate in Germany.

MISS CURIOUS.—Various theories have been suggested in explanation of the wearing of orange blossoms by brides. It is supposed to have been brought into Europe by returning Crusaders, who found it to be the custom for the Saracen brides to wear the orange blossoms as a symbol of fecundity. This symbolical meaning apparently arose from the fact that the orange tree bears blossoms and fruit at the same time. Other investigators believe the custom originated in Spain, where orange groves have been thriving for many centuries. Because of the delightful scent and the delicacy of the flowers and their scarcity in other countries, it is believed that modistes used the flower in artificial form and so made it possible for brides who could not afford to have the fresh blossoms imported for their weddings, to wear them.

AALCO SUGGESTS THE GIFT PRACTICAL
Instead of paying a few dollars for some useless gift to hang on the Xmas tree, why not buy one of our special Xmas Certificates?
Suggest this to the man of the house, who is not acquainted with the drudgery of wash day. Tell him that he can stop in at 3700 Olive and have one filled out for however much he wishes to make it. Better than that—let this paper lay where he can read it—maybe he will surprise you with a Certificate for Aalco service and carefree Mondays on Xmas Day. By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Evening Post in its financial weekly review today, says:

"Simultaneous with the publication of President Coolidge's views on the state of business and Secretary Mellon's forecast for 1927, the stock market this week developed unexpected strength. Quotations now are back to the record peaks of February and September, and if we accept certain standard compilations, we must conclude that stocks now are higher than they have ever been before. The general movement has shifted repeatedly this fall from the up to the down side, but the expressions of confidence in business that came this week from the Government were seized as the basis for a move forward not equalled in recent weeks. What the Secretary of the Treasury said was digested with particular satisfaction, since he gave assurances for the coming year that were more than mere platitudes.

Week's Developments.

"And then the week brought such favorable developments as a turn in the weather that stimulated retail buying, a relatively steady cotton market in the face of the $13,000-a-bale cotton crop, a rise in the French franc to the 4c level, the announcement that the Treasury financing will not be so large as anticipated, a long list of extra dividends and constructive reports from the Western States where bank failures have been numerous. That authorities continue to forecast sound conditions should not conceal the fact that in the current statistics plain evidence of some contraction in industry may be found. Nowhere does the shrinkage indicate any serious downturn in activity for them on this immediately ahead, but the forward pace has lost its momentum.

Complete Data Lacking.

"Lack of statistical data has kept to the background in all discussions on the business trend of what perhaps is the most powerful force at present to be reckoned with, namely, corporate profits. In the final analysis it is the rise or fall in net earnings that determines the general prosperity of industry. In time our information on the trend in corporate profits will be extended, but from that already at hand it is apparent that such earnings this year will top the 1925 record by a far wider margin than will the general production volume. With a general level of business roughly 5 per cent above that for last year we now know that net corporate profits for the year will run more than 25 per cent higher than for the previous record year of 1925.

Source of Profits.

"What is more these enormous profits have not been gathered through such artificial instruments as an abnormal inflation of commodity prices, but have been ground out with a pick and shovel against the handicap of a falling price level. Elimination of waste in industry, an increase in the productivity of labor, an increased consumption demand through a wider distribution of buying power and the enormous strides in the management of certain companies are among the elements that have contributed to this end. It is gratifying that a large portion of the nation's savings have gone into sound investments. Bank savings this year have jumped $1,500,000,000 to a new high savings rate of $211 per capita."

Unturn at Week-End.

"Having established on Friday new high averages on the recovery from the August break, both railroad and industrial stocks continued their forward march this morning unchecked by the few gentle showers of week-end profit-taking which did nothing more than cause a little functional disorder here and there. Pool managers were in high feather at the success attending their efforts to put stocks to new highs and hopes ran high in professional quarters that public participation would increase next week. Some of them hint vaguely that the stock market will get back on the first page of the newspapers in the next few weeks, but on which side the interest is going to be created, up or down, they do not make clear.

Sugars Are Feature.

"The sugars, coppers and merchandising stocks came in for special notice today. The sugars because of the action of the Cuban President signing the sugar restriction decree limiting the 1926-27 crop to 4,500,000 tons, a reduction of about 500,000 tons from the last year; the coppers because of indications of increased demand for copper both from abroad and domestic consumers, and merchandising stocks because private reports from department stores and mail order houses confirm the earlier statements that this Christmas is going to be a prosperous one. South Porto Rico Sugar reached new high records at 168 after an advance of 9 points from the low of Friday. Great Western Sugar jumped more than 2 points and Cuba Cane preferred moved up but more slowly. Gains of 1 to more than 2 points were made by American Smelting, Chile Copper, Baldwin, Postum Cereal and American Agricultural Chemical. Continental Baking "A" advanced 5½ points. Case Threshing Machine advanced more than 4 points. Steel common was less active but its price was lifted to 152¾. Two of the few stocks to show reactions were Pan American Petroleum and U. S. Industrial Alcohol. The rails moved forward but at slower pace. Pere Marquette reached a new high level and Lehigh Valley continued strong.

Rise in Italian Lire.

"The foreign exchange market was featured by a sharp rise in Italian lire from 4.27 to 4.55. Francs were up 6 points. Chinese exchange was strong but transfers on Japan were lower.

Increase in Surplus.

"The actual statement of the New York Clearing House, issued this morning, shows an increase in surplus of $58,659,650. Loans and discounts decreased $38,726,000 and the excess reserve was given as $13,-581,180."

CURB PRICES REFLECT PAUCITY OF OFFERINGS

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Material advances on the renewal of the broad buying movement gave distinct evidence of paucity of offerings around recent levels, which condition resulted in new high records in several issues on the Curb exchange today.

Victor Talking Machine, which has commanded a prominent position in recent sessions, opened up 4¾ points at a new high mark at 129. Johns Manville lifted 2 points and Fajardo Sugar improved 1¾ points. Baking and Radio shares also shared in the forward movement.

In the public utility division the demand caused sharp advances in the most favored issues. Electric Investors and American Light were early features, selling up a point or more.

The demand extended to a number of lower-priced oil issues in the later trading. Standard Oil issues were neglected without any price changes of importance. American Control, Oilfields and Carib Syndicate appeared in large volume. The latter ranged from 20¾ to 27¾.

BOND AVERAGE NOW HIGHEST IN 13 YEARS

New Top in One Section of List on Exchange and Then in Another During Week — Previous High Average in 1917.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The story of the week in the bond market is new high level in one section of the list and then in another. More or less this has been true throughout the year. This week has been notable in that for the first times the averages broke through the highs of 1917, which up to this time have not been approached, and prices went above anything recorded before early 1913.

In other words, using the yard stick which investors to measure such affairs bonds are now higher than at any time in 13 years, or prior to the World War. Of course, individual instances may be found throughout the list where prices are below the best during this period.

The buying that developed in Government bonds late in the week was of the most impressive character. It resulted in new high record prices for two of the treasury issues, the 4s and the 4¼s, and in the equaling of the previous record high for the Treasury 4¼s.

Next to the demonstration in Government bonds the most interesting incident was the advance in the German Government 7s. The search for yields more attractive than to be found among seasoned domestic obligations centered upon the foreign group and particularly upon the German 7 per cent interest loan, the one originally sold in 1924 as part of the program to put the Dawes plan into effect. The buying of this issue was so animated that it carried it on one occasion at one time 3¾ points above the price at which the bonds are callable.

Chile Copper 6s Feature at the Weekend.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The end of the week in the bond market found the prices hovering around the highest levels in several years as surplus investment funds sought outlet in various foreign obligations, domestic rails, industrials and utilities. Trading was less active, however, and spotted profit-taking caused aberrations.

Attention was focused most of the time on Chile Copper 6s, which sold a half point above the close of 110, following reports that the issue would soon be retired and refunded by a five per cent obligation. Nearly $35,000,000 of these bonds are outstanding and it is expected that an offering of approximately the same amount of new debentures will be made next week.

The return of the French franc toward the four-cent level was accompanied by a revival of buying interest in this country's bonds which carried the Government's 7s to a new high for the year at 98. Belgian 7s continued to sell above par.

Price advances in the railroad group were narrow, but they included Northern Pacific, Erie, Missouri Pacific, Katy, International Great Northern issues, Consumers Power 5s were one of the strongest features of the public utility division.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire from the Evening Post Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange says:

French exchange held the most prominent position in the market all week, transactions including relatively active ventures. It was understood, however, that Government agents had control of the movements and that figure importance dealings were for the account of that group. The rate for checks on Paris opened at nearly the week's level, and the highest price touched in more than a year, but reference to an arbitrary value of 992 francs to the pound sterling being fixed in computing the budget caused a sudden selling movement on which the rate fell to below 3.80. Spring was quickly resumed and another upturn carried the French franc as high as 4.01¼. In the last week nearly all after reaction occurred on which the franc fell again to below 3.90.

Other continental exchanges moved within a comparatively narrow range. Italian after selling at 4.26 yielding to 4.27, but recovered about a half point. Swiss exchange, one of the strongest features, rose four points to 19.35 for checks, bringing the rate to a premium above par. The usual wide movements occurred in Norwegian exchange, though much change, as the week drew to close.

Sterling exchange was in supply on fairly large offerings, but trading it was again almost evenly balanced, and it showed only a slight variation at the end from the opening a week ago. Cotton bills continued to appear in moderate volume, but cotton exports are being financed through acceptances, instead of exchange.

A feature of the week was the downward movement in exchange on Brazil, mill-tis selling yesterday in large volume at 11.37 against 12.44 a week ago.

Canadian exchange developed heaviness in the week and in place of a premium of 1-16 at the beginning of the week exchange on Montreal was in supply at a discount, selling as low as 99.87.

Rumanian exchange, after holding firm for 30 days on .55 for a long period was under suddenly developed pressure in the last half of the week and dropped to .48, a new low for the year.

Mexican exchange was maintained at about its previous low, and after a reaction in the first half of the week rose moderately, gold pesos ranging from 46.35 to 46.95.

"Little change was noted in the price of silver exchanges.

The foreign exchange market was featured by a sharp rise in Italian lire from 4.37 to 4.55. Francs were up 6 points. Chinese exchange was strong but transfers on Japan were lower.

New York Cotton

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The feature of today's cotton trading was the exception of a considerable quantity of trade buying orders both on the opening and at the close of the session. This demand absorbed cotton contracts and with little Southern hedging pressure prices held slightly above last night's closing levels and ended at a gain of a few points on the day. Spots advanced 10 points to 12.40c.

TWO BROTHERS GET PRISON TERMS FOR MAIL FRAUD

L. B. Portman, Directing Genius of $56,000 Swindle, Given 2 Years, Raymond H., 18 Months.

CALLED DREAMERS BY THEIR LAWYER

"Seem to Represent Flaming Youth," Judge Faris Says; "Court Must Protect the Suckers."

Federal Judge Faris yesterday tied the last knot in the financial shoestring which the two Portman brothers from Peoria — "flaming youths" the Judge called them — brought to St. Louis in 1925 to launch a get-rich-quick brokerage business, selling securities on non-existent buildings, such as the 20-story, $3,000,000 office structure they dreamed of for the northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Locust street.

Two years in Leavenworth Prison was the sentence meted out to the elder brother, Lawrence B. Portman, the directing genius of L. B. Portman & Co. Raymond H. Portman got 18 months in the same place. Both pleaded guilty of using the mails to defraud. A third brother, Charles, was not prosecuted.

Since September Lawrence and Raymond have been in City Jail, in default of $10,000 bonds. Their mother had offered to hire a professional bondsman, but they did not want her to incur that expense.

Visited by Their Mother.

The mother came down from Peoria, where the Portman name is an honored one, and met her two sons yesterday morning in the Marshal's office, on their way from jail to the courtroom. She cried a little. While she remained in the Marshal's office, at their request, the sons went before Judge Faris.

Their attorney, Thomas Hoolan, told the Court that Lawrence and Raymond were only 24 and 21 years old, and they looked it. They were dressed like twins, in dark suits and striped ties. Lawrence had his hair slicked back and parted in the middle. Raymond's hair was wavy. He is baby-faced and not quite as slender as Lawrence.

Assistant District Attorney Statler read the indictments, charging that the brothers had obtained $56,000 by fraudulent representations about buildings that hadn't been built, and for which no sites had been purchased.

Statement of Their Attorney.

The defendants made no statement in reply, but Attorney Hoolan told the Court they were "dreamers," who operated in good faith and expended the $56,000 in conducting their business, with an expensive suite of offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building.

"The law is made for everyone," remarked Judge Faris, "and the Court must protect the suckers as well as all the rest.

"These young men, who seem to represent what is called in the vernacular 'flaming youth,' are so youthful in appearance that this very fact should have warned suckers, who are able to gather considerable amounts of money against turning it into their hands.

"The present day seems to produce young men who think they can get away with anything, but usually they come up against a stone wall — the law — and are bruised and broken."

One Gulps, Other Calm.

As Judge Faris pronounced sentence, the elder brother gulped; the younger was imperturbed. Without breaking their silence, they were led from the courtroom and back to the Marshal's office, where their mother awaited the bad news. Then they were taken back to City Jail. Next Tuesday they will make the trip to Leavenworth.

A dozen St. Louisans lost $56,000 by buying the Portmans' interim certificates in building projects in St. Louis and Peoria. The heaviest investors were Dr. G. A. Leavey, Metropolitan Building, who lost $22,500, and Charles A. Wasserburger, president of the National Printing Co., who lost $16,500.

Illinois Central Holdup Men Get 10 Years to Life.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Dec. 11.—George Brown of Chicago, one of the three robbers who held up three diamond salesmen on an Illinois Central passenger train near here three months ago, and having tied the salesmen, escaped with more than half a million dollars' worth of diamonds, today pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

TAX ON SURPLUS FARM CROPS PROPOSED IN HOUSE BILL

Oklahoman Would Let Government Limit Crops; Brookhart Busy on Relief Plans.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The House touched upon farm relief for a few minutes today but gave up when it became involved with the new plan offered in a bill by Representative McKeown (Dem.) of Oklahoma. McKeown said his measure proposed to create a commission which would determine in advance the needs of the consuming public, and then would issue a standardization certificate to each farmer, directing him to grow a fixed quantity. The farmer then would market his crop, selling the surplus, if any, outside the current market and pay an excise tax on it.

Members questioned the constitutionality of the proposed tax.

Senator-Elect Brookhart, Republican of Iowa, is in Washington attempting to line up Senators behind some agricultural bill that in his opinion will bring real relief to western farmers. He plans to appear next week before the Senate Agriculture Committee and declares he is for the revised McNary-Haugen bill with some amendments that would "put more punch in it."

The Rev. Father Luis Guisar Valencia, a nephew of Bishop Antonio Guisar Valencia, was found not guilty today of violating the religious laws. A bond of 500 pesos was returned.

A WORD TO THE WIVES

By NINA BROWN BAKER

MAY I speak to Mrs. Morledge, please? Yes—oh, hello, Maida. Listen, dear, I'm downtown—can't you come down and do a matinee?

Surprised? Why? Oh, after what I said last night. Well, I was going to put in the entire week shopping, and I did expect to be a nervous wreck after it. You've only got one mere husband—I guess if you had Roddy and Uncle Harvey and Dad; Rod's kid brother and my kid brother and dear old Granther to buy for you'd shudder, too.

What? Oh, that's sweet of you, Maida, but I didn't "manage beautifully" at all. I let myself be stampeded into buying some perfectly atrocious things, and you know it. There are so few things you can give a man. And then the dear things are so exasperatingly polite you never know—I'll never forget the perfectly lovely Oriental smoking-robe I gave Roddy the first Christmas we were engaged. He thanked me so effusively, "just what he needed!" And long afterward I found it packed away in an old trunk, still in its holly box.

Well, that cannot happen to any of my offerings this year, thank heaven! What makes me so sure? Listen—here's my big news.

My dear, I've solved the problem for all time. Never again will that ancient Christmas necktie joke be trotted out for my benefit. All my worries are ended; I've bought every one of my masculine gifts, and each of them is the uniquely perfect one. It took me about three hours to do it, and instead of a headachy hundle of frazzled nerves I feel like a carefree flapper.

Of course I'm going to tell you. Quite by accident I wandered into a store veritably overflowing with the most adorable menthings. Oh no, it isn't a new place. It's that men's wear store where our husbands go themselves. Simple, isn't it? To buy for a man where he buys for himself? Isn't it funny we never thought of it? I had some silly notion that they didn't care for women customers. Such a mistake! My dear, they're simply lovely—honestly, I felt like visiting royalty. I loved the atmosphere—quiet, spacious, leisurely, no jostling or crowding even at this season.

And I couldn't go wrong in my selections—they wouldn't let me. That unfortunate smoking-robe, now. I bought it from a girl clerk who agreed with me that it was beautiful, and it was. But she didn't know, and I didn't, that to an everyday business man it was just something for a movie sheik.—Well, that couldn't happen in this shop. Their salesmen know—not only what's being worn, but who's wearing it. Dealing almost exclusively with men, they know masculine tastes and prejudices as no woman can ever hope to. All you have to do is tell them the type of man you're buying for; and whether his taste is jazzy like my young brother's or ultra-conservative like Granther's, they'll give you exactly the right thing.

Expensive? Not a bit of it. Considering the quality, I got mighty good value for my money. Oh, it's no use trying to pick flaws with my ideal store, Maida—there simply aren't any!

I want you to share with me the anticipation of an ideal Christmas for our men folks. We can look forward so many happy moments spent together in this interesting quest for the articles that we confidently know will be acceptable and appropriate.

All right, darling, I'll bottle up my enthusiasm until I see you. You'll be right down? What? No, I don't care about the matinee especially. Why, of course, I will. You'll love it. Oh, heaps of things your husband will like, I know. And he'll think he's got a mighty wise little wife when he sees the name of his own pet store on the box.

Hopeless W

GOLDEN MAC BEATEN BY POOR RIDE

Scotland Captures Assumption Purse—Wild Aster Among Victors at Jefferson Park.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—Racing in his best form over a heavy track, W. S. Heaton's 6-year-old Hopeless contributed his third consecutive winning performance of the meeting by scoring in the Duncan F. Kenner Handicap, feature event of this afternoon's racing card at Jefferson Park here.

With the triumph of Hopeless came the breaking of the winning streak of Mrs. J. H. Buscher's Golden Mac, most stoutly supported of the five entries. He finished in second place, with George Demar, carrying the C. E. Durnell colors, in third position at the finish of the one mile and a furlong.

Golden Mac Handled Badly.

While Hopeless' effort was a good one, his victory was somewhat tarnished by the poor ride L. Whiteacre gave Golden Mac. The latter was badly handled after R. Finnerty rushed the ultimate winner through on the inside of the leading Golden Mac at the final turn and Hopeless got to the wire with a length to spare. By good riding in the last furlong, Whiteacre might have recovered the lead, but his efforts were weak, and Golden Mac was inclined to swerve. The Buscher colt was taken into a long lead in the first three furlongs, with Hopeless forcing his pace.

George Demar had to close a considerable gap to gain the place, and his tiring in the stretch after nearing the leaders two furlongs out eliminated him as a contender for top honors. Overall raced forwardly the entire race, but McTinkle was badly outrun after the first half mile.

The winner was held at slightly better than 4 to 1 and negotiated the distance in 1:55, a good performance over the tough course.

Scotland Captures Purse Event.

In the Assumption Purse, which brought into competition seven of the better 2-year-olds, J. S. Taylor's Scotland registered in decisive fashion over a distance of five and one-half furlongs. Under W. Garner's alert handling, he outsprinted his rivals from the break and had a good advantage at the finish. Second place fell to Medley, with Drummer Boy third. The latter two raced past Hawk God in the concluding furlong, where the latter tired badly from the effects of forcing the early pace. Scotland was well backed, but most support was accorded Hawk God.

A high-priced selling race for sprinters, offered as the fourth number, brought the first success of the meeting for the silks of G. C. Winfrey and Jockey "Chick" Lang. Wild Aster, the favorite, was winner here, the veteran Ultimus gelding racing from behind to overtake Conde, the pacemaker, in the last of the six furlongs. He took nicely to the rough going and drew out fast in the closing yards. Conde lasted to be second, with Quin Chin, a rank outsider, third.

Billy Witt, which races for R. L. Baker, registered his second consecutive winning performance with the running of the opening race, in which he outstayed Sun Rajah and Levoy. The race had its decision over a distance of one mile and a furlong. L. Craver rated the winner within close range of Levoy's pace and drove him hard to hold Sun Rajah safe after getting to the front in the stretch. The winner was a pronounced choice in the field of eight.

Halu Claimed After Winning.

The aged Halu, which had been racing well in previous engagements, made good without great effort over a distance of one mile and three-sixteenths in the third race. He was capable of leading the 11 other contestants the full route and prevailed as choice in the pool. Beveilon followed closest in the victor's wake throughout and held Sir Ralph safe for second.

Jack McCallister Is Named 1927 Cleveland Manager

Man Who Served Indians as Coach for 13 Years Will Succeed Tris Speaker.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 11. — Jack McCallister, for 13 years scout and coach of the Cleveland Indians, will manage the Tribe during the 1927 season. E. S. Barnard, president of the club, announced today that McCallister had been appointed to succeed Tris Speaker, veteran outfielder, who resigned as manager several weeks ago.

The announcement followed a consultation between McCallister and Barnard at Asheville, N. C., last week, where they attended the National Baseball Association meeting. He will take charge of the team immediately and will attend the American League meeting in Chicago next week as the tribe's new chief.

Although McCallister never played a game in the big leagues, he was selected over more than a dozen applicants, some of whom have starred under the big top for years.

Wide experience as coach and scout, and his knowledge of players in the American League led to his selection, Barnard said.

McCallister's many years' service with the team was given as another reason for his selection.

Jack is also an Ohio product. He started in the sand lots of Marietta, O., his home town, and from there went to Columbia, serving under Bobby Quinn, now president of the Boston Red Sox. At Hartford, where he played in the old Connecticut league, he attracted the attention of big league scouts and was slated to go to the St. Louis Cardinals when the season ended.

At the close of the season he played in a benefit game in his home town and while sliding to the plate split his knee cap. The injury kept him out of baseball for two years and he then went to Albany. In 1912 he went to Akron and the following year became scout for the Indians.

When Speaker became manager of the Indians he became coach and chief lieutenant of the veteran campaigner. He devoted much of his time to developing the infield, and assisted Matty Mathews, battery coach for the Indians, in coaching the pitching staff.

McCallister has been thoroughly acquainted with conditions in the Cleveland club since he played with the Columbus team. It was there that he met Barnard and the two have been close friends since. He will spend the winter in Cleveland preparing for the spring training season in Hot Springs.

1927 Western Amateur Golf Meet in Seattle

Tourney Set for July 18—Open Event Awarded to Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The Western Amateur Golf Championship tonight was awarded to the Seattle, Wash., Country Club, by a vote of the delegates of the Western Golf Association, and the date fixed was July 18.

The Western Open was awarded to the Olympia Fields Country Club, Chicago, with the date of this event to be determined later.

The regular slate of officers was elected, and it was announced that sixty new clubs had joined the association, making the membership more than 500, the largest association of golf clubs in the world.

Among those who addressed the 27th annual meeting of the W. G. A. were Harrison R. Johnson, of St. Paul, former western titleholder; Robert A. Gardner, formerly national champion, and A. F. Curry, of Seattle, who extended the invitation to the golfers to decide the Western Amateur title there the week of July 18.

Th selection of the two courses for the tournaments was unanimous the amateur event going to the Pacific Coast for the second time in history.

The junior championship was left to the executive committee for selection of place and date, and the time of the open competition was also referred to the committee, to decide how the date could be best adjusted to fit the selection of the national open championship.

Jonnard to Stay at Milwaukee.

Pitcher Claude Jonnard, who was sent to Milwaukee on option last year, has been released outright to the same club, in part payment for Fritz Shulte, Business Manager Bill Friel of the Browns announced last night.

Pyle's Tennis Stars Read Out of Amateur Ranks

U. S. L. T. A. Takes Action Against Vincent Richards and Others.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Vincent Richards, who last week was ranked first of the amateur tennis players in the metropolitan district, today was read out of the amateur ranks by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. The association also declared that Howard O. Kinsey, Harvey Snodgrass and Mary K. Browne had forfeited their amateur standing because of the C. C. Pyle professional tour being made by the quartet with Suzanne Lenglen, and with Richards will be dropped from the national amateur rankings.

The association announced its disapproval of the action of the Ranking Committee in placing Richards at the head of the list. This selection has not yet received the approval of the Metropolitan Association.

The U. S. L. T. A. reported its action to the International Federation, thus barring the four from competition anywhere in the world with members of the international body.

The action of the Executive Committee does not definitely exclude Richards from the official ranking, for it must come before the annual meeting of the U. S. L. T. A. in February for final action. Two years ago the annual meeting overruled the Executive Committee after the latter body had made changes in the ranking as laid before it, and with William Tilden leading the opposition, passed a ranking of its own.

Oscar Whitehead of the Wooster Lambert bowling team of the Major City League rolled into first place in the second annual Charles C. Peterson Classic when he totaled 1704 for his eight games on Peterson's alleys yesterday afternoon. This gave him an average of an even 213.

Otto Stein Jr. was second among the early finishers with 1655, followed by Chuck Healy, 1631, Hap Vierheller, 1620, and Larry Brock, 1614.

In going into first place, Whitehead had but two games under the 200 mark. He started with 201, followed with 238 and 234. He slipped a bit then and counted 192 and 185, only to come back with 213, 222 and 219.

In the last game, Whitehead had a "cherry" pick in the tenth frame, which reduced his score by some 10 pins.

Whitehead's total of 1704 sets a new record for the Peterson classic, as Forest Beye won a year ago with 1680.

The event will be concluded tomorrow.

JOHN A. HEYDLER.

1926 Was National League's Most Prosperous Season; Chicago Cubs Drew 800,000

Heydler Discloses Facts in Reports He Will Present at Meeting —Re-election of Landis Considered Certain.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Re-election of Baseball Commissioner Landis for another seven-year term at the joint major league meeting in Chicago next Thursday is regarded as a foregone conclusion by National League men gathering here today for their own annual meeting next Tuesday.

The National League already has gone on record as a unit in indorsing Landis' regime and in favor of keeping him in office. As a result, no further formal action is considered likely or necessary when the magnates go into session Tuesday.

Although baseball men as a whole do not anticipate much opposition to Landis, if any, from American League club owners, it was pointed out that a majority already is assured by the fact that President Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees and Charles Comiskey of the White Sox are committed to the commissioner's support.

Move for Earlier Closing.

Opposing points of view, however, may develop an issue over the closing dates for the 1927 major league season. Under the present law, favored by the American League and put into effect by the vote of Landis, the season must close on the last Saturday in September. This would end the coming campaigns on Sept. 25.

The National League, President John A. Heydler said today, while not against an early closing, is opposed to fixing the date arbitrarily, and feels that the Schedule Committee should not be restricted in arranging the playing dates.

Reports of the most prosperous season in its history have been prepared by President Heydler for submission to the club owners next week. Chicago, he disclosed today, led the entire circuit in attendance for 1926, with a total exceeding 800,000 spectators.

DEL MONTE, Cal., Dec. 11.—Playing flawless golf, Bill Melhorn, Chicago, turned in a 70, two under par, today, to maintain a substantial lead in the 72-hole $5000 Monterey Peninsula open championship.

The Chicagoan's card with yesterday's first round 72, gave him a total of 142, three strokes below the field.

Melhorn was deadly on his approaches and only once was he called upon to sink a putt more than four feet away from the hole. He finished the first nine in 33—three under par. A trio birdie, including a four on the 460-yard second hole; a two on the 60-yard fifth and a three on the 410-yard eighth were listed in the first nine.

The two teams finished in a tie in distance covered.

WILL USE GOOD OFFICES IN CONTRACT DISPUTE FOR GOOD OF BASEBALL

Head of National League Will Talk to Cardinal President in New York Tomorrow in Effort to Bring About Agreement With Manager of World Champions.

By J. Roy Stockton.

John A. Heydler, president of the National League, will use his good offices and influence to bring about an agreement between Sam Breadon, president and Rogers Hornsby, manager of the World Champion Cardinals, the Post-Dispatch has learned.

Breadon has offered Hornsby a one-year contract and Hornsby has requested a contract for three years, and since the offer was made and rejected Monday there has been no other meeting between the two biggest stockholders in the St. Louis National Baseball Club. Realizing that the future of the Cardinals and the future of the National League in St. Louis might be injured by failure of Breadon and Hornsby to reach an agreement, President Heydler has announced that he will confer with Breadon on the Cardinal president's arrival in New York tomorrow, in an effort to iron out the difficulty.

Hornsby and Breadon, at their first conference, following Breadon's return from Florida, discussed the possibility of Hornsby's being made vice president, the subject of interference with Hornsby's management and other things that caused discord during the 1926 season and mutual guarantees were exchanged, indicating that only the question of salary and contract remained to be settled.

Only Bone of Contention.

If Heydler could bring about an agreement on the question of contract and salary, all other points of possible dispute could be arranged without difficulty. The question of Hornsby's promotion to the vice presidency will be put up to the board of directors at the February meeting, and the fact that Hornsby is the second largest stockholder is likely to sway the board toward a favorable decision.

In discussing the contract question the subject of salary did not arise. Hornsby last year received $30,000 under his old contract as player. He received no extra remuneration for managing the team in 1925 and 1926, and in view of that, it is likely that a new contract, if one is signed, will call for an annual salary of approximately $50,000.

Hornsby, in objecting to a one-year contract and requesting one for three years, cited as a precedent the signing of Dan Howley by the Browns for three years. Hornsby feels the fact that he has made good to the extent of winning a pennant and a world's championship, entitles him to a three-year document. Breadon based his objection to the three-year term on the danger of tying up the club to a contract involving so much money. He said the club could afford to pay Hornsby a substantial salary for 1927, but that the club had had many lean years and no one could be sure what a year or two might bring in the fortune of the club.

Hornsby Remains at Home.

Because he is unsigned for 1927, Hornsby did not make the trip to New York for the annual meeting of the league. Last year he went to New York and attended the Golden Jubilee dinner of the senior major league. It was hoped that the contract question would be settled in time to permit Hornsby to attend the National and joint league meetings, where he might have snared a good catcher to share the backstopping duties with Bob O'Farrell next year.

BIG WEEK AHEAD FOR BASEBALL CHIEFS

CHRIST for the Hot Stove League is due to be flying all this week, with the three biggest meetings of baseball scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

On Tuesday the American League will meet in Chicago and much is expected in the way of trades. The National League will convene in New York Tuesday in what is expected to be largely a routine gathering.

The joint American and National League session is scheduled for Thursday in Chicago, and at this conclave it is expected the club owners will get an opportunity to vote on re-electing Kenesaw M. Landis as high commissioner of baseball. Landis' term will expire before the next annual joint meeting

Williams and McManus Among Men Likely to Be Traded by Browns

Manager Dan Howley of the Browns will depart for Chicago this afternoon to attend the American League and joint major league meetings in Chicago Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and it is expected that several deals, started at the minor league convention at Asheville, will be consummated before the magnates adjourn.

Howley and Bill Friel have declined to disclose the names of the players who will be traded and have remained silent also as to the players sought. It has been reported that Otis Miller and Billy Mullen, Toronto infielders, are among the players desired by the Browns, and the fact that Howley said yesterday that he expected to see Frank Navin soon after his arrival in Chicago strengthens the reports. Detroit and Toronto have been on intimate terms and Navin probably would have first call on the stars of the International League champions, managed last year by Howley.

Kenny Williams to Go.

It is certain that there will be many new faces at Sportsman's Park when the Browns start the season. It is a good guess that several veterans will be traded, and an excellent guess is that Kenneth Williams, Marty McManus and Gene Robertson will be sent to other clubs. Williams, the highest salaried outfielder on the Brownie roster for several seasons, still has several years of good baseball left

LISTS OF PLAYERS BROWNS PLAN TO TRADE OR RETAIN

BROWNIE officials have declined to disclose the men destined to be traded, but the following is a good guess on the fate of some of the players who were in Brownie uniforms and the property of the club last year:

TO BE TRADED—Kenneth Williams, Marty McManus, Gene Robertson, Tony Rego, Elam Vangilder, Dixie Davis, Joe Glard and Bill Porter.

TO BE RETAINED—George Sisler, Oscar Melillo, Walter Gerber, Bing Miller, Harry Rice, Herschel Bennett, Cedric Durst, Fritz Shulte, Wallie Schang, Steve O'Neill, Leo Dixon, Pinkie Hargrave, Milton Gaston, Win Ballou, Tom Zachary, Ernie Wingard, Ernie Nevers.

Other players on the club's reserve list and not mentioned above can be classed in the doubtful category.

and the expected change of scenery probably will help him.

McManus also probably will return to his best form after he is traded. Robertson, at his best, is a brilliant third sacker, but he was

WASHINGTON AND MISSOURI STILL YEAR APART ON NEXT GRID GAME

BEARS HOLDING OUT FOR 1927, TIGERS FOR 1928

Local Athletic Council Holds a Meeting and Withholds Announcement of Action, if Any.

Washington University's Athletic Council met yesterday afternoon at the request of Chancellor Hadley to consider late developments in the controversy over the question of whether the Bears will meet the Missouri University eleven on the football field in 1927. At the close of the meeting members of the council said announcement of the decision, if any, would be withheld pending further exchange of opinions between representatives of the two institutions.

Unofficial information from reliable sources was that Missouri University was opposed to a 1927 football game between the two schools, but in favor of continuing relations in other sports, basketball games between the two schools already being on the schedule.

Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of Missouri University, was in St. Louis yesterday to attend a meeting of the Missouri Rhodes scholarship committee. He talked with Chancellor Hadley over the telephone and later in the afternoon the meeting of the Washington Athletic Council was called. Dr. Bill Edmunds, Washington athletic director and a member of the council, declined to comment on the business of the meeting or the action taken.

Trouble at Columbia Game.

As is known, relations between the two schools were strained after the football game at Columbia. A Missouri player made an inflammatory speech the night before the game, questioning the courage of the Washington players. Washington supporters sent him a vulgar package and the result was that the game was rough. After the game Missourians captured the Bears' mascot, a young bear, painted him with yellow paint and marched him at the head of a parade, celebrating the Missouri victory.

A faction at Columbia advocated severance of relations between the two schools and at the Des Moines meeting of conference coaches, the Missouri schedule was filled with the limit of eight games. Oct. 15 was left open and later it was announced the two teams would meet next year on that date. The announcement later was said to have been premature.

Series of Conferences.

Wednesday Dr. Edmunds made a trip to Columbia, where the Missouri Athletic Council met without reaching a decision. Then C. L. Brewer, Missouri director of athletics, accompanied Dr. Edmunds to St. Louis and conferred with Chancellor Hadley, but announcement of the status of the 1927 game was deferred.

Washington alumni and students have wanted a game with Missouri, but in the last few days sentiment in favor of breaking relations has crystallized, because of the attitude of the Missouri officials and athletic council.

It is said the negotiations have reached the point where Missouri has offered a game in 1928, with Washington insisting on a 1927 game or a complete severance of relations.

NATIONAL LEAGUE HAD ITS GREATEST SEASON IN 1926

who can develop young talent as well as supply qualities of leadership largely has influenced the wholesale managerial shifts that have taken place since the close of the 1926 playing season, in the opinion of a majority of the baseball men gathering here.

William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, in pointing out the first-year success of his own manager, Joe McCarthy, said:

"It was in the development of young players that McCarthy helped the Cubs most this year, although at the same time he had the club up around the top most of the season. I hired McCarthy because of his success in developing young players in Louisville, rather than because he was winning pennants.

"The time has come when every league club must have a manager who can teach and train young players, not just lead them."

About Managers.

Realization of this, Veeck, and others believe, accounts for the retirement of such famous playing leaders as Sisler, Collins, Speaker and Cobb. Ray Schalk, another playing manager, has replaced Collins with the White Sox, but Moriarty and Dan Howley, bench pilots, have assumed the reins with the Tigers and Browns, respectively.

Donie Bush at Pittsburg is another new bench pilot, while the Boston Red Sox have called back Bill Carrigan to rebuild their team. Stuffy McInnis, new boss of the Phillies, also is likely to do most of his directing from the side lines.

Robins Release Bohne.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Brooklyn Nationals today announced the sale of Sammy Bohne, infielder, to the Minneapolis club of the American Association.

O'Farrell's Daring Work on Ruth's Bunt in First Game Did Much to Break Morale of Yankees

THE TEN GREAT PLAYS OF THE 1926 WORLD SERIES

John McGraw Tells How Cardinal Catcher's Great Throw Put Fear in Opponents' Hearts.

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the first of a series of 10 articles by John J. McGraw in which the manager of the Giants describes what he considers the "Ten Great Plays of the World Series." McGraw is recognized as one of the great strategists of baseball and in this series he tells of the plays which figured most prominently in the Cardinals' victory over the Yankees in the 1926 series for the baseball championship.

BY JOHN J. McGRAW,
Manager, New York Giants.

I GUESS the writers were surprised to see me half raise myself in the press box in the third inning of the first game and yell: "Look! He's got him! That'll stop 'em!"

To me it was a genuine thrill. Bob O'Farrell had made one of the quickest, most daring plays I ever saw. He was establishing himself as the best catcher of today right in the first game of the big series. As the games went on he proved it more conclusively every day.

I had an idea right along that O'Farrell was going to be a big star in the series. Here he had given me a thrill right at the start.

The score was tied at the time and one run meant a lot. Mark Koenig started the inning with a single. Ruth crossed everybody by dropping a bunt in front of the plate just as Koenig started for second.

O'Farrell was not caught by the ruse. His brain worked like an electric spark. He pounced on the ball in one long leap and, judging the distance and the speed of Koenig to inches, he ignored the easier play at first base and whipped the ball to Thevenow at second. Though Koenig was going fast he was caught cleanly. This was easily one of the most daring plays of the last World's Series. It had been so accurate that few catchers would have attempted it. Had it gone wrong the Yankees would have had two men on bases and none out. As it was, O'Farrell's brilliant play had spoiled Ruth's strategy and broken up the Yanks rally.

That play had a tremendous psychological effect on the Yankees for the rest of the series. In a flash they had learned to fear O'Farrell's deadly arm. They no longer had any doubt of his gameness; his willingness to take a chance. That play was felt in all the other games. It forced the Yanks to play with extreme caution on the bases. They stole just one base throughout the series and incidentally that was by Ruth.

Young ball players could take a lesson from O'Farrell in his marvelous concentration. He is so concentrated on every move in the game and so mechanically perfect in all the details that often he goes for innings without being noticed. He is like a piece of machinery that always works well. In this one game O'Farrell had sized up the speed of every runner on the Yanks club. He knew when he could nail them and they knew it too. He was like a weight dragging at their heels. They couldn't get away.

The motto for ball players that we could get from O'Farrell's work in the big series is: "Think quickly what to do and do it as you think. Don't hesitate."

Junior Boehmer Leads Boy Tennis Players of City

Committee Announces District Ratings—Tilden's Interest Encouraged Youth.

By Davison Obear.

Junior Boehmer of the Forest Park Tennis Club is the No. 1 ranking boy tennis player in the St. Louis District for 1926, according to the official list prepared by a special committee appointed by President Joseph L. Werner of the local tennis association. The committee named 15 players in the boys' singles and four teams in doubles.

The district singles title for boys was won by Boehmer who defeated Joyce Portney of Soldan High School in the final round. These two players formed a team in the district doubles and advanced to the final round where they lost to Charles and Adolph Rovin, Forest Park players.

In the National Clay Court championship for men held on the Triple A courts two years ago, Junior Boehmer served as a ball boy along with a number of other young tennis players. He attracted the attention of the former national champion, William T. Tilden, who took quite a liking to the lad. Tilden gave him some valuable pointers on the game. This was encouraging to Boehmer who immediately showed improvement in playing ability.

Boehmer made a good showing in the National Boys' championship at Chicago last summer, although it was his first attempt at grass court play. In the Men's District event at Triple A this year, Boehmer exhibited a splendid game. He was defeated by Karl Hodge, runner up in the Western Michigan tournament this year, although taking a set and forcing the third set to a close score.

Wellstons Meet Ben Millers in Feature Contest

Raticans Face Banners in Opening St. Louis League Game, Starting at 1:45.

Tate Brady's Wellston eleven, present leader in the St. Louis Soccer League, will oppose the Ben Millers, champions a year ago, in the second and feature game of the double-header at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. In the opener, starting at 1:45 o'clock, the White Banners tackle the Raticans.

The Wellstons have a clean record since the local league race was resumed, having defeated the Raticans and White Banners. The eleven has shown the greatest passing combination shown here in several years, but will face a real test in the Millers. Foley's aggregation is but a point behind, having downed the Raticans and tied the White Banners.

John Cradock and Paul Murphy will serve as referees.

Brickies May Come Here.

It was announced yesterday by President Winton Barker that efforts would be made to bring the Bricklayers of Chicago here for the Christmas holiday attractions. It was originally intended to bring a Canadian eleven here, but following requests from local followers, efforts will be made to bring the Brickies. The Chicagoans have a date in Cleveland, but if arrangements can be made, it is probable the eleven will come here.

During the term of the Western Soccer Cup Association, the Brickies took great delight in defeating the St. Louis teams.

If the Brickies come, the first and second elevens in the local race will face the visitors in clashes, Christmas day and Sunday. In this way, officials feel they will be able to find out whether the local teams are really under par or were out of condition when previous battles were played.

WILLIAMS, McMANUS AND OTHER BROWNIE VETERANS DUE TO GO

for from his best in 1925, and in 1926 Sisler used McManus at third in an effort to bolster that side of the infield.

Howley probably will retain Bing Miller as his veteran outfielder, with Harry Rice, Fritz Shulte, Herschel Bennett and Cedric Durst as other outfield candidates. Rice should be one of the stars of baseball under Howley's management, and Bennett and Durst, extremely fast men, probably will fit very well in the scheme of play of Howley, who likes speed and hustle and who believes in the value of a tight defense. Rice, certainly, will not be traded, as there is nobody in the league who is a better prospect. Durst, a star in the minors, may arrive as a big league star this year and Howley probably will take that chance, especially as the Texan probably would not bring much on the open market.

Four Catchers on Club.

Howley is fairly well fortified behind the bat, with Steve O'Neill and Wallie Schang, the veterans, and Leo Dixon and Pinky Hargrave two promising youngsters.

Undoubtedly many of the Brownie pitchers will be offered for trade. Dixie Davis, Elam Vangilder and Joe Giard would make good trading material and need a change of scenery. That they will get it is a good bet.

Sisler, Melillo, Gerber and somebody to be obtained in trade probably will form the Browns' infield at the start of the season, with some youngster trying to take Walter Gerber's job away from him. Gerber is as good as most shortstops and probably will be kept as insurance that the team will have a reliable men at short. Walter is not as fast as he once was but he is still a very capable shortstop.

PREPARATORY LEAGUE PRESENTED WITH LANCE

The Preparatory School League has been presented by Col. Jackson of Western with a captured German lance. This lance will be a trophy that will visit every school. The conditions of the competition are that the winner of the preceding year's sports gets the trophy at the start of the season. The first team defeating the trophy holder gets the trophy, and so on. Each school, if winning in a sport, puts a silver plaque on the lance, while each school winning a game puts its colors on it. The lance will be the permanent possession of the team winning the Lane Trophy permanently.

FIVE WESTERN STARS GET PLACES ON PERRY'S ALL-AMERICA TEAM

Friedman, Kaer, Baker and Joesting Selected for Backfield—Slagle Not on Eleven Because of Injuries.

(Lawrence Perry, author of the following article, is the country's outstanding critic of college football and amateur athletics. He is better qualified than any other one man to make comparisons between leading football players in all sections of the country.)

By Lawrence Perry.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—An all-American eleven is purely and simply a roll of honor. Places are awarded to the various players on the basis of their proficiency in their respective positions.

The writer has never selected a team of this sort with any reference to its effectiveness as an actual playing combination. For various reasons, it could never be assembled for play, and even if this galaxy of stars were to be brought together they could not do themselves justice without a more or less extensive period of preparation under the guidance and instruction of a competent coach. And even so, there would be no assurance that this stellar outfit could defeat any one of the season's leading elevens, it being well understood that something more than star players is necessary for a winning organization.

This 1926 eleven, therefore, is picked not at all upon what the members might do in combination, but what they have done as individuals.

An interesting fact is that while the number of players throughout the country who stand out from among their fellows is not so great as in former years, yet the men who compose this mythical aggregation are certain to impress the follower of football as bearing favorable comparison to any All-America team ever set down on paper.

Picks Alternates for Places.

So closely allied in respect to ability are the 22 players the writer has segregated from the mass of their fellow-players that he has decided to name no second team, but to pick as a matter of fairness and justice 11 alternates to those awarded positions on the All-America team. These alternates are to be regarded as but a shade below the quality of the All-Americans, in fact, practically as good as almost every respect.

As a matter of justice, too, it should here be stated that Slagle of Princeton is not named because his injured knee permitted him to play only about two and a half hours of competitive football. The writer, however, has no hesitation in pronouncing him to be the greatest back in the game and it is a pity that fate contrived to keep him off the gridiron.

Of the All-America ends, nothing can be said about Hanson that has not been said about him in past seasons. He fills every requirement of his position and besides has a wonderful football mind and a magnetic personality. He is selected as captain of the team. Winslett of Alabama is a great defensive end and on attack a superfine ball carrier, being used as a back on offense.

Smith One of the Greats.

At the tackles, Smith of Brown plays his position defensively and offense plays the guard position. He is one of the great linemen of all time. Wickhorst of the Navy is a rounded tackle, a rock on defense and on attack a thunderbolt. Of the guards, Connaughton of Georgetown is the ideal lineman, a giant endowed with the quickness of a boxer and the speed of a sprinter. Sturhahn of Yale is a mental genius in action, knows all the modern requirements of his position and is fast, strong and hard hitting.

Boeringer of Notre Dame is another heady type, a man who passes without error and then does damage as an interferer. He is strong, fast and a diagnostician of high merit.

Friedman of Michigan fully meets the highest conception of what a quarterback should be. Uniting with the forward pass, a fine goal kicker, an excellent runner and a great field general, no man is better qualified to run a team.

Hyland Best Back on Coast.

Hyland of Stanford is far and away the best back on the Pacific coast and one of the best in the country. Though light, he is rugged and about as elusive as Slagle at his best. He is a dependable safety man and can drop a punt on a 10-cent piece. In 38 plays, Hyland averaged 11½ yards for each attempt, which is some ball carrying. Baker of Northwestern runs, punts, passes and does everything that is expected of a high-class triple threat man. Kaer of University of Southern California was one of the great backs of the country, a splendid all-round performer, but like Flanagan of Notre Dame, a great deal of his blazing success was due to splendid interference.

Joesting of Minnesota ranks with the great fullbacks of any season as a ball carrier. He has an eye for openings, and when they do exist his ferocious charge shatters the line without assistance.

The following Roll of Honor is made up of players all of whom are great in their various positions:

Ends—Towle, Brown; Thayer, Penn; Grube, Lafayette; Oosterbaan, Michigan; Morris, Utah; Bacchus, Missouri; Lindenmeyer, Missouri; Kassell, Illinois; Marshall, Georgia Tech.; Saltonstall, Harvard; Lloyd, Navy; Horn, Army; Ed Walker, Stanford; Flora, Michigan.

Tackles—Pratt, Harvard; Pickard, Alabama; Stiner, Nebraska; Eddy, Navy; Dixon, U. of Southern California; Luckie, Georgia; Lindford, Utah Aggies; Richards, Yale.

Guards—Shively, Illinois; Maher, Notre Dame; Dart, Northwestern; Schmidt, Army; Brown, Vanderbilt; Davis, Princeton; Mackall, Virginia; Lucas, Missouri; Hanson, Hodge, Brown; Lassman, New York U.; Johnson, Northwestern; Yoder, Minnesota; Gibbons, Utah Aggies; Carey, Cornell.

Centers—Daly, Army; Butler, Penn.; Wallace, Oklahoma; Gamache, Harvard; Cravath, U. of Southern California; Bettercourt, St. Mary's (California).

Quarterbacks—Caulkins, Princeton; Randall, Brown; Meeker, Washington State; Nydahl, Minnesota; Connor, New York U.; Kelly, Montana; Moore, Layola (New Orleans); Harpster, Carnegie Tech; Barnes, Alabama; Ralls, Furman; Harding, Army; Mahler, Colgate; O'Keefe, Marquette.

Halfbacks—Kaer, U. of Southern California; Flanagan, Notre Dame; Howell, Nebraska; Presnell, Nebraska; Dahman, Notre Dame; Eby, Ohio State; Peplaw, Minnesota; McPhail, Dartmouth; Shapley, Navy; Cagle, Army; Nork, Georgetown; Clark, Missouri; Mishel, Brown; Wilson, Army; Welch, Pittsburg; Morrison, West Virginia; Gilbert, Michigan; Rogers, Penn; Caldwell and Ransford, Navy; Morton, Georgia; Rauber, Washington and Lee; Howells, Utah; Mildrexter, Denver U.; Kirkleski, Lafayette; Potts, Oklahoma; Baruch, Princeton; Guaranaccia, Harvard; Marek, Ohio State; Weston, Boston College; Borelli, Muhlenberg; Murrell, Army.

Fullbacks — Amos, Washington and Jefferson; Dodson, Tennessee; Rankin, Colorado Aggies; Feathers, Kansas Aggies; Kline, Yale; Hoffman, Stanford; Hamilton, Navy; Lewis, Northwestern; Shaughnessy, Colgate; O'Neill, Georgetown.

There are undoubtedly other men in various positions entitled to be on this roll, but the writer has set down those who either came under his personal observation in the course of some 12,000 miles of travel throughout the country this season or whose work attracted the attention of qualified observers whose opinions and judgment the writer trusts.

THE HUNTING - - CALL - -

By ALEC MERMOD

ANOTHER gloomy week-end to be "chalked up" in our hunting diary. We have had four bad Sundays and a great many shooters have been disappointed.

Either staying at home or else going out with great hopes, but not any great expectation of bringing home any considerable bag.

One ardent sportsman was heard making the following remark about his last week's shooting trip:

"I only had two thrills all day. One was when driving out early in the morning filled with hope, and the other was when I reached home and had a seat next to the radiator."

Notwithstanding the fact that we have had miserable weather for shooting, some good bags have been made, but ony in a few localities.

Quail Are Scarce.

Within a radius of 50 miles quail are scarce, and owing to the weather, what few are left are hard to locate.

Some people claim that birds are plentiful, and in territory that I have covered this fall with very poor success, I have been told that there were just as many birds as in former years.

I realize that on such days that I have been out it is difficult for the best dogs to make much of a showing, but when one covers several hundred acres and fails to find a single roosting place, it is pretty good evidence that quail are scarce.

No doubt as many quail were hatched and reached maturity as in former years, but owing to drouth in the summer and high water in the fall, a great many birds moved out of their breeding places and have not returned.

Hard to Find Stubble.

In each section of the country I have hunted this fall I found the conditions the same, no stubble, as the farmers have put in a big acreage of winter wheat, then there are a great many farms that have been vacant for years, that have grown up in sedge grass, which contains no food.

In no instance has any of the farmers I visited left any food for the birds this coming winter, still he objects to anyone shooting quail for he is the farmers' friend. Nice (?) way to treat a friend, letting him starve or freeze to death.

Watch out for adverse legislation when House and Senate convene next year, for it is almost a certainty that an attempt will be made to run through a bill putting a closed season on quail for five years.

This has been attempted several times but through the efforts of sportsmen and their friends the bill has been defeated.

Farmer Can Help.

If the farmer could only see the actual facts and realize that it is not the hunter that is exterminating the quail, he could, with very little effort change conditions to such an extent that it would be profitable to himself and be of vast benefit to the sportsman.

If the farmers in different localities would band together and leave plenty of food patches scattered around in different places (these patches could be left in places which are difficult to cultivate) also leave some natural corn along the fence rows and the edge of the timbar, they would have no difficulty in selling shooting rights to a few responsible sportsmen who would be perfectly willing to pay a fair price for good shooting.

Besides the revenue derived from this source, the farmers could dispose of all their eggs during the shooting season without having the trouble of shipping. Besides the eggs other produce would be bought, for men enjoy taking something home other than game.

Many Sign Agreement.

Instead of doing as suggested above, farmers in many sections have organized and signed a castiron agreement to permit no quail shooting. If the truth were known, this arrangement hasn't worked out very satisfactorily, for there are not as many birds on these restricted farms as formerly.

That part of our game code permitting any county to vote a closed season of two years has been pronounced illegal, and if any are arrested for shooting quail in one of these counties he has a fair chance of beating the case should he care to take it into court.

As each shooting season comes around the city hunter finds conditions getting worse, and in a few years the men of moderate means are going to have a hard time finding any place to shoot.

Evolution of the Shotgun.

After the invention of gun powder the first weapons made to use this "devil's stuff" were canno and mortars, then came the shoulder arm, intended only as weapons of war. Fowling pieces or shotguns were not in general use until early in the nineteenth century.

Joseph Manton was the gunmaker of that time and made some handsome double-barrel muzzle-loading guns. Percussion caps were, of course, used to discharge the gun.

A Scotch clergyman by the name of Forsyth is credited with the idea of discharging fire arms by means of fulminate. His patent was recorded April 11, 1807.

In 1814 copper caps were made and by 1816 were in general use. Joe Manton still held his leadership and turned out some handsome guns.

The sportsmen of today with the up-to-date breech loaders have no conception of the difficulties under which the gunner of early days labored.

Besides the inconveniences there was more or less danger in handling and shooting the early muzzle-loader. The hammers were not cupped on any of the first guns made. Consequently the caps would burst and pieces would fly in all directions. Many a man has lost an eye in this manner.

Danger Eliminated.

W. Greener in 1858 brought out a beautiful fowling piece with cupped hammers so that the danger of the exploded cap was eliminated. Once in a while a man loading his gun in a hurry would place both charges in one barrel, the early models when so loaded and fired would burst with disastrous results.

Powder flasks and shot pouches were made, so that one did not need to guess at the amount of powder and shot he was using.

The most troublesome thing was the placing of the cap on the nipple, especially on a cold day, and many a hunter has spoiled his day by spilling the contents of his cap box in the snow.

Old paper was used for wadding, and the popular idea was that the wadding over the powder should be rammed exceedingly hard, while that over the shot should be tamped just enough to keep it in place. In the early days of the perfected muzzle-loader many breech-loading guns were made, but none proved popular.

A French gunsmith along in 1847 patented the pin-fire cartridge case, and then began the improvements in gun making.

Breech-Loading Guns.

Another Frenchman by the name of Lefaucheux made the first breech-loading shotguns that caught the interest of the sportsmen of the early days, but it was a long time after really good breech-loaders were on the market that muzzle-loaders were discarded.

When I was a youngster, old enough to shoot, anyone who owned a breech-loader was considered a millionaire, and the boy who was allowed to touch one of these "wonder guns" was quite a hero.

Good Teams Make Better Students, Says School Head

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO Dec. 11.

"THE value of athletics should not be underestimated," the Rev. Matthew Walsh, president of the University of Notre Dame, told the Irish Fellowship Club here today.

"The enthusiasm aroused in the student body through the success of its team is capitalized in all school activities," he said. "At Notre Dame we were particularly successful at football the last three years and scholarship was markedly higher than in previous years, when the success and corresponding enthusiasm and spirit were not so great."

Two Westminster Football Stars Held Ineligible

Missouri College Union Upholds Decision Against White and Iba.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 11.—The Missouri College Athletic Union today formally declared that two members of the championship Westminster College football eleven, Fulton, Mo., had been ineligible throughout this season.

Westminster College was automatically dropped from membership of the union but since the resolution placing the stigma on the two players also carried a clause absolving college officials of all blame, the school was immediately invited to rejoin the conference and accepted the invitation.

It was the annual meeting of faculty representatives of the union, and was fraught with tense feeling, although the championship is a mythical honor, not officially recognized.

Russell R. White, star Bluejay backfield man, was not only declared ineligible but found guilty of professionalism, while Henry Iba, another star, was declared ineligible on scholastic grounds.

Culmer's Decision Upheld.

The decision of the union sustained a previous ruling of J. A. Culmer, of Central College, arbiter of eligibility.

The meeting was held behind closed doors, after a request by Westminster representatives that the matter be given a public airing in view of the previous publicity in connection with the case, was overruled.

J. E. Pixlee, athletic director of the Fulton school, declared after the session that he had come to the meeting armed with affidavits and other evidence in support of the eligibility of the players but had not been allowed to present a defense.

"I am going to advise White to bring suit against the union," said Pixlee. "They have charged him with being a professional, thus ending his athletic career, and they must prove their charges to him. They refused to do it today."

Dean G. B. Sweazey, of Westminster, president of the union since its formation, was not re-elected today, his post going to S. R. Braden, of Missouri Valley college.

Two Hydroplane Records Broken By Spitfire II

Midget Speedster Travels 5-Mile Course in 6 Minutes, 52 Seconds.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 11.—Smashing two world's records for hydroplanes, Spitfire VI, 151-class boat, owned by James H. Rand Jr., of Buffalo, N. Y., and driven by Stanley L. Reed, of Detroit, led all entries here today in the opening program of a speed regatta which has attracted to San Diego the fastest craft of their kind in the world.

In the third heat, Reed drove the Midget speedster over the five mile oval course in 6 minutes and 52 seconds, or at the rate of 43.67 miles an hour. This breaks the former record of 42.42 miles an hour for the same distance on an oval course, held by Spitfire V and also the world's record for straightaway, held by General, owned by Lionel Barsson of Los Angeles, which made a former mark of 43.06 miles an hour.

Jake F. Lemm, driving Boots II, owned by Waugh Brothers of Peoria, Ill., missed reaching the former 1926 record, hanging up a mark of 42.38 miles an hour for the five-mile course, which he covered in 7 minutes, 4.7 seconds.

Right behind Reed was Harry Miller of Los Angeles, driving his own Los Angeles I. Miller covered the five-mile course in 7 minutes, 8.2 seconds, or at the rate of 42.04 miles an hour.

In making the new world's record, Spitfire VI jumped into the lead in the third heat immediately after crossing the starting line, and by the time she had made the first turn and straightened out, she was so far in front that observers looked for a broken record despite the fact that the race was only one quarter finished.

The hydroplanes will race three heats again tomorrow.

Spitfire VI also won the other two heats of the day, the first in the time of 7:05.2 for a speed of 42.33 miles per hour, and the second in 7:07.9 or 42.07 miles per hour.

Rexalls Defeat Page.

The Rexalls football team defeated the Page Athletic Club outfit, 28 to 0, at Rankin Field yesterday afternoon.

DEMPSEY GIVES HIS VERSION OF ORIGIN OF "POISON" STORY

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11.—Jack Dempsey's own story of his "poisoning" at the time of the bout in Philadelphia which cost him his heavyweight title, was told by the former champion here today. Stories quoting attaches of the Dempsey camp and Dempsey himself that he was poisoned at the time of the bout have resulted in repeated denials by the boxer.

A contagious rash with which Dempsey was afflicted the day after the championship fight and which had broken out in his camp in training days, was given by him as the basis for "all this fuss about being poisoned."

"Fifteen days before the fight one of my sparring partners, Frankie Carpenter, showed up for work with a 'rope burn' on his shoulder," explained Dempsey. "It was raw and bleeding a little bit. It was given medical attention, I think. About a week later Carpenter took part in a fight show and apparently was all right.

"Just three days before the big fight, I was sparring with Carpenter and he took off his jersey after the first round. His body had broken out in a rash and I sent him to the hospital at once. A few days later another member of the camp broke out with the rash. The day after the fight, my doctor found the same rash on my body. It was a very contagious infection—I can't think of the name of it. Where Carpenter got it is a mystery that never bothered any of us. Reports of my being poisoned before, after or during the fight are all hokum."

Dempsey reiterated his intention of meeting Tunney in the ring again and his confidence that he can win back his title.

"If we meet again, I can name the round the heavyweight title will come back to me," he said.

Roosevelt Quint Is Favorite As Practice Starts

Large Squads Working Out at High Schools With Basket Season to Open Jan. 8.

Practice for the opening of the league basketball schedule is well under way at the five public high schools, large squads having reported to all the coaches. The opening round, set for Jan. 8, matches Cleveland with Soldan and Central with Roosevelt. Beaumont drew the bye and will open a week later against Coach Lorenzen's Roosevelt quintet.

Coach White's Soldan team already has a victory to its credit having defeated McBride High 18 to 13, after Central lost a hard fought game to the same outfit, 19-16. Only Constance, a forward, and Pulford, guard, returned this year at Soldan. Wolf, another veteran guard, will be ineligible for play this year. With an abundance of green material, White may be able to fill the vacant positions in good style before the league opening. In addition to Constance, Gelbers and Dorris are the present leading candidates for the forward positions, with Gordon and Joyce most likely to land the guards. Coach White intends to give his team plenty of action before the regular season opens and has scheduled games with Principia, Ranken, Wellston and St. Louis U. High, for this month and intends to book a game for Dec. 22, his only open date.

Callan Reduces Squad.

Coach Callan has given his squad its first cut, reducing the initial turnout of some 80 candidates to less than half. Willits, center, is the only seasoned member of this year's team, the rest of the 1925 champion combination having been lost through graduation. Schumacher, Erhlich and Koch, of this year's football squad, are among the leading claimants for regular berths. Howard, Simpson and Gayle, the last having scored three field goals against McBride, are other promising men. Practice at Central was slow in getting under way owing to the limited dimensions of the old Yeatman High gym, but Doc Callan has obtained use of Holy Name Hall where work has begun in earnest.

Roosevelt High is the pre season favorite to take the title this year with Sauselle and Jarret, regulars of last year's team, and Meier and Carroll who were reserves, returning. Lorenzen's team finished third in last season's race, and with a wealth of material to fill vacated positions is likely to be in the thick of the fight all season. Cleveland, runners up to Central and the second hope of South St. Louis, retains Mowry, Coover, and Hahn, of the 1925 squad, and it should not be difficult to find two additional men to complete a strong quintet.

ADRIA WINS FEATURE RACE ON OPENING DAY AT HAVANA TRACK

PAT STANTON'S THREE-SIXTY IN SECOND PLACE

Favorites Generally Have Good Day—Adria Pays but 6 to 5 and Extreme Pays Only 1 to 2.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVANA, Dec. 11.—The Havana-American Jockey Club, which operates the Oriental Park race track, opened its 90-day stand here today. The Inaugural Handicap for 3-year-olds and up, was the feature race. It drew nine starters.

Adria, owned by the Cuba National Stable and ridden by Jockey O. Pernia, won the event in a romp from Pat Stanton's Three-Sixty. A. G. Dunlap's Queen Towton finished third. St. John and Bud Bud, running in the colors of H. C. Fisher, were well liked by the players, but were never prominent during the running of the race.

Adria, off to a good start, increased his lead after three-quarters and won going away by three lengths. Three-Sixty was driving hard to outstay Queen Towton. The five and one-half furlongs was run in 1:06 2-5. The winner paid 6 to 5.

C. Caferelli's Extreme, odds-on favorite, won the fourth race in a gallop from a cheap lot. He was given an excellent ride by Frank Catrone. Belle of Elizabethtown finished second, far behind the winner. Sunny Girl finished second, Extreme paid 1 to 2.

Seth's Hope, owned by J. A. Parsons, went to the post in the second race as second choice. He rewarded his backers by winning easily and paying 2 to 1. King David was second and Actaeon third.

O. L. Foster's Theo Fay, ridden by C. E. Allen, won the second race in a drive from Teluride. Little Trump finished third two lengths behind Teluride.

Pigeon Wing II Wins Seminola Feature Race

Reputation Is Second, Deputy Closes Fast to Take Show Place.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONGWOOD, Fla., Dec. 11.—The Seminola Purse, $1200 added, for all ages at five furlongs, was the feature on the opening day card at Seminola Park today. The race was won by Sanola Stock Farm's speedy colt, Pigeon Wing II, with Harned Bros.' Reputation second and Deputy, owned by Tisdledown Stable, third. The time was 1:12 2-5.

C. McCrossen had the leg up on Pigeon Wing and got him off with the bunch. He followed the leaders to the stretch turn, where he made his bid. McCrossen squeezed through on the rail and outgamed Reputation, which was tiring. Deputy outgamed Ball Gee. for the show end.

Pigeon Wing II is a French-bred colt, being by Maintenon-Pigeon Pie. He was bred in France by A. K. Macomber.

J. Reed, trainer of the Harned Bros.' horses, saddled one winner and two place horses on the card today. Reed sent Agnes Call to the post in the third race. Agnes Call got off in front and won eased up by a length and a half. Joe Campbell raced second all the way and finished one length ahead of Cup o' Tea. Reed also saddled Colleen O., which finished second to the favorite, Fly Hawk, in the second race, a dash for 2-year-olds. Fly Hawk runs in the colors of Bliss Maher and was driven hard to beat Colleen O.

Dean H., which paid $39.40 for a $2 ticket, won the opening race on the card for C. Drake. Sweetums was second and Quanah third.

Roy Holmes, by shooting games of 218, 215 and 204 for a scratch total of 632, which with his handicap of 63 pins, gave him a grand total of 695, took the lead in the Handicap sweepstakes at the Washington alleys last night.

Second place is held by T. Bolen, who shot 628, which included a handicap of 48 pins. Mrs. Jim Wilson is resting in third place, having shot a total of 620. Mrs. Wilson had 548 scratch and received 72 pins handicap. Fourth place shows R. Strickland, the popular secretary of the St. Louis Handicap League, with 605, and M. Purpura fifth with 597.

Four squads of six bowlers each shot last night and there will be five more squads shooting tonight with the first squad rolling at 6 p. m.

Six prizes will be awarded: First, 30 per cent; second, 22 per cent; third, 18 per cent; fourth, 15 per cent; fifth, 10 per cent, and high individual game, including handicap, out of the money will receive 5 per cent.

CLASSIC TO BE HELD FOR BOWLERS WITH AN AVERAGE OF 180 OR LESS

Now that the open bowling classics have had their introduction to local bowling fans, the next big attraction to hold their attention will be rolled at the Rogers alleys on next Saturday and Sunday, when a closed individual classic will be held exclusively for league bowlers whose averages are 180 and under. Four games will be rolled across eight alleys with squads starting on each day of the contest at 7, 8:15 and 9:30 p. m.

The regular place prizes will be arranged according to the numbers of entries and in addition there will be several feature prizes. Bowlers who are members of more than one league will be eligible of the combined averages with the provision that they do not go over the 180 figures.

Reservations can be made at the alleys or by phoning CEntral 7179.

Tunney's Act Not Illegal

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Attorney-General Albert Ottinger, in an opinion forwarded to the State Athletic Commission today, said that the appearance in a vaudeville boxing exhibition of Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, was not in violation of the State boxing law. The champion was arrested Nov. 29, on a charge of appearing in an unlicensed exhibition during a vaudeville performance in a local theater, and a hearing was set for Dec. 22.

While Attorney-General Ottinger cannot intervene in the case, his opinion as to the legality of the exhibition had been asked by the State Athletic Commission and by District Attorney Banton.

"I am of the opinion," said Mr. Ottinger, "that brief theatrical exhibitions or demonstrations lasting a few seconds showing a man's physical fitness and ability to engage in the sport of boxing or sparring are not a misdemeanor under the New York State boxing law.

"An injunction rather than a criminal proceeding would be the remedy if such a theatrical exhibition requires a license," says Mr. Ottinger later in his written opinion.

MY LIFE AND FIGHTING CAREER —By Gene Tunney, New Heavyweight Champion

Watched Dempsey Box Others, Preparing for His Chance at Title

Gene Believes He Gave Jack Impression He Needed a Doctor More Than a Boxing License When They Met After His Illness.

By Gene Tunney
World's Heavyweight Champion.
CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE first time I ever saw Jack Dempsey in the flesh was in 1920 at the ringside of the Wills-Fulton fight in Newark. I was introduced to Dempsey by Alex Sullivan, New York writer. My first visit with him occurred on a ferry boat when we were coming across from New Jersey to New York City.

Dempsey and I were on our way to file application for boxing licenses with the New York Boxing Commission. Dempsey had come from Long Branch. We had traveled on the same train but did not know it until later. At Jersey City we stepped aboard a ferry and I recognized the champion.

I was just recovering from an attack of ptomaine poisoning. I had been confined to my bed for three days. This was the only illness I ever experienced. I had lost considerable weight. I was anaemic and weak. Dempsey sized me up quickly and I thought I could read his thoughts in his kindly, though searching glance.

"Humph!" he seemed to be saying to himself, "that fellow looks as though he needed a couple of doctors instead of a boxing license."

Yet, this truly great champion was most democratic and painstaking in his analyses of the men he had fought and those with whom he was scheduled to mix. But he got that first impression of my being a weakling physically. First impressions, indeed, often are lasting ones, and I firmly believe that in thinking of me in later years and up to the very ringside at Philadelphia, Dempsey couldn't rid his mind of the impression that I was comparatively fragile.

Studied Dempsey's Style.

I ATTENDED Dempsey's fights with Brennan and Carpentier and Firpo. I wanted to get as many "peeks" as possible at the man whom I felt in my heart was destined to be my opponent some day. I differ in this respect from many athletes, particularly boxers, who do not want to watch possible antagonists at all.

I cannot see what harm can come from studying a man's style while he is in action against someone other than yourself. In this way, I often have been able to formulate a scheme and plan of battle that has confirmed me in my procedure.

Although I really went into training a year before the Dempsey bout, my actual active period was but 7 weeks, divided between Speculator, N. Y., and Stroudsburg, Pa. I weighed 186 pounds when I began this 10 weeks' siege. The amazing part of it, in the opinion of some experts, is that I weighed exactly the same when I entered the ring as I did when I started out to condition myself.

Through the long legal battles, feats and mixups, I managed to keep my mind utterly clear and calm. I did this partly by reading, relaxing in the beautiful woodlands of the Adirondack Mountains and by associating with men who knew things and who could impart that knowledge.

My chief mentor, a man whom I love as though he were my own father, was William McCabe of Poughkeepsie, who is connected with the Prison Welfare Board. McCabe is 65 years old. For eight years he believed I would be champion and it was the ambition of his life that I win the title.

There are few spots as beautiful to me as the country about Speculator, where I opened my active training for Dempsey. The village itself is nothing more than a mountain hamlet, consisting of a few scattered dwellings, a drug store, a general store, a barber shop and a Saturday night movie. Lake Pleasant, a mirror four miles long, is to the south of village.

The hills surround this body of water and the nearest railroad is 60 miles away from it. A sawmill nearby drones a daily, buzzing song and the air is bracing and youth-giving. In that environment I became, not a challenger for a pugilistic title, but a carefree young man.

Training for Champion.

WHEN I went to Speculator, I was in the doldrums for the first time in my life, but my nature soon responded to the surroundings and I snapped out of it. I did a great amount of road work and for the first two weeks boxed nine or 10 rounds each day. I have said that I began at 186 pounds and finished at that same weight. However, I must tell you that I first had to PUT ON FIVE POUNDS so as to have a "working margin" for my training. Thus, I built up and then trained down during the 10-weeks' course.

I would run at top speed for 10 minutes and then finish by running a quarter of a mile backward to give me balance. This greatly disturbed McCabe and Billy Gibson, who were worried lest I fall and injure my spine. I always started my road work with a brisk walk, then a jog, then a trot and finally a long, driving sprint. During the road work I shadow boxed and trained hooking with my left and, most of all, driving a short right, the punch which I figured would beat Dempsey and which did. I would shadow box for 10 minutes at a stretch. I usually spent from two or two and one-half hours on the road.

Roadwork is the best of conditioners. As I was not anxious to lessen my fighting poundage, I worked in light clothing. Any weight that I took off, once I had reached 186 pounds again, I immediately put on by partaking freely of raw milk in the evening.

At Stroudsburg, Pa., where my last leg of training was negotiated, I got down more firmly to business, always practicing that right, because I knew it would mean Dempsey's downfall. He always had been "meat" for a right, as witness the Firpo fight, and I was banking on this blow to win. You see, in studying Dempsey, I figured him out to be strictly a rushing, hard-punching man, who moved mostly in straight lines. He has a funny, pigeon-toed stance that does not permit of much moving about against fast men. Slow men, however, were made to order for him. So I planned to circle about, popping rights as he charged.

Eddie O'Neill And Ghnouly in Boxing Feature

Best Amateur Flyweights in St. Louis Meet Thursday Night.

Eddie O'Neill of the Sherman Park Community Center, and Joe Ghnouly of the South Broadway A. C., have been matched for the flyweight feature of an amateur boxing tournament to be held next Thursday night at the South Broadway A. C. The contest will unofficially involve Western A. A. U. championship honors, as O'Neill holds the district crown, while Ghouly is recognized as his most dangerous rival in the local field.

Prior to the district title meet last winter in which O'Neill captured finalist honors, the Sherman Park midget was outpointed by Ghnouly in a special match. Ghnouly also holds a decision over Tony Pirrone, runner-up in the last championship tourney. But for a severe illness, which forced him to retire from fistic competition for a period of several months, Ghnouly would have been a strong favorite in the district meet.

Ghnouly is 16 years old and a student at McKinley High School. He entered the amateur boxing game about two years ago as a member of the Rock Springs Turnverein team, transferring later to the South Broadway club at the invitation of Freddy Gilmaster, boxing instructor for that organization, who recognized his championship possibilities.

Matchmakers Miller and Herbst are endeavoring to book two more special bouts to round out the interclub card for Thursday night's tourney. John Schwake, Webster Groves heavyweight, and Frank Power, district champion middleweight are among the fighters under consideration for special events. Schwake has recuperated from an illness which forced him to cancel a match with Jack Walton of Granite City, a month ago, and announces that he is now ready to take Walton on.

Nineteen entries have been received by the South Side club for the open events of various weight divisions to be held as preliminaries of Thursday night's card.

WERNER-WERNER WILL PLAY M'KENDREE FIVE

The McKendree College basketball aggregation will be put to a test Monday night when they clash with the flashy Werner-Werner quintet, who are champions of the Municipal League of St. Louis. The Missouri team is given the edge in Monday's affair but with the past season's offense, consisting of Brown and Magill, forwards, and Jacks, center, in form, the McKendree cagers will have an outside chance to win the initial home game of the season. Coach Filley's real problem will be the stopping of the flashy offense of the St. Louis outfit. G. Magill and Gould will probably represent the defensive department with Sturat and McHenry in reserve.

15-MILE MARATHON FROM EDWARDSVILLE TO GRANITE CITY

The Granite City Athletic Club will conduct a 15-mile foot race New Year's day from the Edwardsville Courthouse to Granite City, in which 25 amateurs will participate, five of them from St. Louis University.

Barnhill Is Honored.

Roper Selects All-Princeton Eleven

Slagle and Calkins Are Given Places

Coach Declares That Quarterback on 1926 Team Is Best Field General He Ever Directed.

CHAPTER XV.
"MY 25 YEARS ON THE GRIDIRON."
By W. W. "Bill" Roper.

IT is almost as difficult a job to pick an All-Princeton eleven from the men I have coached and from those who coached with me as it is to count the stars in the heavens. I consider myself very fortunate in having had the opportunity of being identified with Princeton football and I hope I will have the good fortune to be connected with it for many years to come.

I have never met a better crowd of fellows. They do not make them any better. Every man who has represented Princeton since I have been coaching has given his all in every game. And surely no coach would ask any more. They have been good sportsmen when they won and even better sportsmen when they lost.

In selecting this team I am not attempting to make any invidious comparisons but merely wish to pay a well-deserved tribute to some of the outstanding players the game has produced. It is:

End	Winn,	1919
Tackle	Treat,	1922
Guard	Hart,	1912
Center	McMillan,	1926
Guard	Keck,	1921
Tackle	Beattie,	1925
End	Le Gendre,	1921
Quarterback	Caulkins,	1927
Halfback	Trimble,	1920
Halfback	Slagle,	1927
Fullback	Gilroy,	1923

Three Centers Stand Out.

THREE centers stand out in my coaching experience at Princeton: Mike Callahan, Al Wittmer and Ed McMillan. Callahan played on the 1919 eleven and was captain of the team in 1920. In both years he played a steady, aggressive game. For his weight, Wittmer is one of the greatest centers the game has produced. During his sophomore and junior years he played fullback. In his senior year he was shifted to center. During that summer he taught himself to pass by constant practice with a football at odd moments. He got so accurate he never made a poor pass all season. On defense he was a tower of strength and was particularly effective out of the line. He was a great center with only one year's experience at the position. McMillan had the advantage of at least 30 pounds on Wittmer. And this is the only reason I have given him the call.

I have selected Eddie Hart, captain of the 1911 team, and Stan Keck, leader of the 1921 eleven, to fill the guard positions. Hart played tackle and halfback at college, but his real position should have been guard. He was one of the strongest men who has ever played football—with a terrific charge. Keck was a great tackle and could play guard equally as well. Curtis McGraw, captain of the 1919 team, and Mel Dickinson, leader in 1922, were good guards, as were Dick Baldwin and John Davis, guards in '25 and '26; Herb Dillon, captain in 1906, and Tom Wilson, guard in 1910 and 1911.

Keck Best Lineman.

FIVE tackles stand out prominently in the roster: Jim Cooney, who played on the 1906 team; Puffy Bigler, a slashing tackle in 1919; Stan Keck, captain of the 1921 team; Herb Treat of the 1922 undefeated eleven, and Bob Beattie, tackle in 1924. For all around ability I would select Keck and Beattie. Keck is the greatest offensive linesman I have ever seen, except I think the team would be stronger with Keck at guard and Treat at tackle; I doubt if there has ever been his equal in the history of the game. Beattie is a close second to Keck. His play against Harvard and Yale in 1924 was an inspiration. In his sophomore and junior year Beattie played in the back field. Had he played in the line during his entire undergraduate days there is no telling how good he would have been. Herb Treat was a great defensive tackle—there was none better. For his size Bigler was a wonder. He weighed just 165 pounds against Yale at New Haven in 1919. Jim Cooney's name is always associated with Princeton's tackle play. He was a member of the first team I coached and a sterling player on defense and attack.

BILL ROPER.

Caulkins His General.

FOR the end positions I would select Winn and LeGendre. The latter played on the 1920 team. He was a beautiful defensive player and very fast down the field on kicks. Jack Winn, who has coached the ends of Princeton for several years, was as good a player as he is a coach and that is saying a lot.

I would choose from a wealth of material a backfield composed of Caulkins, quarterback; Jake Slagle and Maury Trimble, halves, and Ralph Gilroy, fullback. Caulkins, quarterback on the 1925 and 1926 teams, is the best field general I have ever coached. He is a sure punt catcher and a fine interferer. Slagle and Trimble cannot be improved upon for the halfback positions. They both can run, kick and pass. This would give the team two triple threat men of exceptional ability. Ralph Gilroy, fullback on the 1920 and 1921 teams, was a splendid line bucker and a fine interferer. He could always be counted on to gain a couple of yards. His selection would give the team the necessary weight and interfering strength.

I have coached so many sterling ends and backs that it is impossible to name them all.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The decision of the Senate by a vote of 70 to 7 to investigate the title of Arthur R. Gould of Maine to a seat in the Senate, brings again to the front a question which has been debated for generations. The question is whether the Senate, under the constitutional provision making it the judge of the "elections, returns and qualifications of its own members," has the right to take into account any other qualifications than the three prescribed by the Constitution as to citizenship, age and residence in a state.

In other words, has the Senate the power to consider the general fitness, moral or otherwise, of a man elected to membership? A related question is whether the Senate, in the case of such unfitness, can vacate the seat of the accused Senator by a majority vote or must act under the rule requiring a two-thirds vote for expulsion.

Both questions have a bearing on the cases of Senators-elect Vare of Pennsylvania and Smith of Illinois, whose right to seats in the next Congress also have been challenged on the ground of taint in the primaries in which they were nominated.

Bribery Charge Against Gould Is 15 Years Old

In the Gould case, the concrete question is whether the Senate in determining the question of his qualifications, has the right to take cognizance of charges that he paid a bribe of $100,000, 15 years ago, to the Premier of New Brunswick in connection with the building of a railroad which Gould promoted. Gould was directly accused of bribery by a Canadian Judge in an opinion on a case arising out of the railroad contract.

The resolution adopted by the Senate, on the motion of Senator Walsh of Montana, directs the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections to inquire into the truth of the charges and report its findings, together with recommendations for such action by the Senate as the committee shall think warranted.

"The committee," Walsh explained, "is asked to report whether there is anything that the Senate can do or ought to do in the premises; and if it reports that the Senate has the power to do anything, what it should do.

"Similar questions have been before the Senate as well as before the House on many occasions. A study of the precedents leaves one in a state of utter confusion as to the right of either House under circumstances of the character here represented and as to the number of members whose concurrence is necessary to secure anything but negative action."

Senator Walsh Cites Precedents in the Case

Without undertaking himself to resolve the two questions involved, Walsh cited a line of precedents and opinions in favor of the broad view of a Senator's qualifications. The subject, he said, was one that had engaged the earnest attention of some of the greatest men who had sat in the Senate.

The subject was debated extensively in the case of Roach, who was elected 33 years ago as a Senator from North Dakota. It was represented at the time of his election that in his early life he had embezzled the funds of a bank with which he was connected. The deficiency was made good and he was not prosecuted. He went West, led an exemplary life and eventually was elected to the Senate.

Upon the publication of the old charges against him the Senate began an inquiry into his right to a seat. In some way or other, according to Senator Walsh's review of the case, the proceedings were discontinued, and

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The decision of the Senate by a vote of 70 to 7 to investigate the title of Arthur R. Gould of Maine to a seat in the Senate, brings again to the front a question which has been debated for generations. The question is whether the Senate, under the constitutional provision making it the judge of the "elections, returns and qualifications of its own members," has the right to take into account any other qualifications than the three prescribed by the Constitution as to citizenship, age and residence in a state.

In other words, has the Senate the power to consider the general fitness, moral or otherwise, of a man elected to membership? A related question is whether the Senate, in the case of such unfitness, can vacate the seat of the accused Senator by a majority vote or must act under the rule requiring a two-thirds vote for expulsion.

Both questions have a bearing on the cases of Senators-elect Vare of Pennsylvania and Smith of Illinois, whose right to seats in the next Congress also have been challenged on the ground of taint in the primaries in which they were nominated.

Bribery Charge Against Gould Is 15 Years Old

In the Gould case, the concrete question is whether the Senate in determining the question of his qualifications, has the right to take cognizance of charges that he paid a bribe of $100,000, 15 years ago, to the Premier of New Brunswick in connection with the building of a railroad which Gould promoted. Gould was directly accused of bribery by a Canadian Judge in an opinion on a case arising out of the railroad contract.

The resolution adopted by the Senate, on the motion of Senator Walsh of Montana, directs the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections to inquire into the truth of the charges and report its findings, together with recommendations for such action by the Senate as the committee shall think warranted.

"The committee," Walsh explained, "is asked to report whether there is anything that the Senate can do or ought to do in the premises; and if it reports that the Senate has the power to do anything, what it should do.

"Similar questions have been before the Senate as well as before the House on many occasions. A study of the precedents leaves one in a state of utter confusion as to the right of either House under circumstances of the character here represented and as to the number of members whose concurrence is necessary to secure anything but negative action."

Senator Walsh Cites Precedents in the Case

Without undertaking himself to resolve the two questions involved, Walsh cited a line of precedents and opinions in favor of the broad view of a Senator's qualifications. The subject, he said, was one that had engaged the earnest attention of some of the greatest men who had sat in the Senate.

The subject was debated extensively in the case of Roach, who was elected 33 years ago as a Senator from North Dakota. It was represented at the time of his election that in his early life he had embezzled the funds of a bank with which he was connected. The deficiency was made good and he was not prosecuted. He went West, led an exemplary life and eventually was elected to the Senate.

Upon the publication of the old charges against him the Senate began an inquiry into his right to a seat. In some way or other according to Senator Walsh's review of the case, the proceedings were discontinued, and the important question on which they turned was left unsettled.

"The question," Walsh added, "is one of the most profound importance. So far as I have been able to discover it, it has never been authoritatively determined by the Senate."

Argument on Charges Against Senator Roach

The case against Roach was argued strongly by such distinguished and able members as Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, Senator Chandler of New Hampshire and Senator Platt of Connecticut.

Chandler said: "It is only possible to defeat the resolution for investigation which is now before us by laying down in the American Senate in this year 1892 the rule that no matter what crime may have been committed by a person occupying a seat in this chamber, no matter under what circumstances of atrocity, it is not within the constitutional power of the Senate even so much as to appoint a committee to make an investigation into the facts and circumstances of that conduct and of that crime.

"This proposition can not be sustained upon any correct view either of English parliamentary law or of the constitutional of parliamentary law of the United States."

After citing precedents, Chandler concluded.

"1. In England members of the House of Commons have been expelled indiscriminately for acts done before as well as after their elections.

"2. The principle has been to preserve the purity, honor and high character of the legislative body; and the members have been expelled both before and after conviction of crime, and whether legal prosecutions have or have not been instituted.

"3. In the United States there have been almost no actual expulsions from Congress except for disloyalty, and apparently, not one for an offense committed before election.

"4. The advocates of expulsion have asserted the principle of the English cases—the necessity of preserving the character of the Legislature—in language broad enough to cover offenses committed before as well as after election. The opponents of expulsions have gradually argued against the right of expelling for acts done before the election.

"5. The decided weight of American opinion is in favor of the right and duty to expel for offenses committed before election which, in the judgment of the Legislature, render the person an unfit member thereof.

"6. Numerous investigations have been made into the conduct of members before their election, and it is believed that in all cases where an investigation has been seriously demanded it has been ordered, and the decision to expel or not to expel has been made in full view of all the facts, except in one case, where the facts appeared upon the request for investigation and were not deserving of consideration."

Vigorous View Taken by John Quincy Adams

Senator Chandler in his brief quoted and emphasized the following opinion by John Quincy Adams: "The power of expelling a member must, in its nature, be discretionary, and in its exercise always more summary than the tardy process of judicial tribunals.

"The power of expelling a member for misconduct results, on the principles of common sense, from the interest of the nation, that the high trust of legislation should be invested in pure hands. When the trust is elective, it is not to be presumed that the constituent body will commit the deposit to the keeping of worthless characters. But when a man whom his fellow citizens have honored with their confidence, on the pledge of a spotless reputation, has degraded himself by the commission of infamous crimes which become suddenly and unexpectedly revealed to the world, defective, indeed, would be that institution which should be impotent to discard from its bosom the contagion of such a member; which should have no remedy of amputation to apply until the poison had reached the heart."

Roberts Excluded on Charge of Polygamy

Coming nearer to the present, Senator Walsh cited the case of Brigham H. Roberts of Utah. There was no charge whatever of any impropriety in his election to the House, the sole charge being that he had violated the law against polygamous marriage. This gave rise to a protracted debate in the House, resulting to the exclusion of Roberts.

In its final report, the committee in charge of the case warmly attacked the theory that the House was required to admit Roberts because he fulfilled the three constitutional requirements as to age, citizenship and residence in Utah. To this the committee replied:

"1. That the language of the constitutional provision, the history of its framing in the constitutional convention and its context clearly show that it can not be construed to prevent disqualification for crime.

"2. That the overwhelming authority of text-book writers on the Constitution is to the effect that such disqualification may be imposed by the House, and no commentator on the constitution specifically denies it. Especial reference is made to the words of Cushing, Pomeroy, Throop, Burgess and Miller.

"3. The courts of several states in construing analogous provisions, have the practical unanimity declared against such narrow construction of such constitutional provisions.

"4. The House of Representatives has never denied that it had the right to exclude a member-elect, even when he had the three constitutional requirements.

"5. In many instances it has distinctly asserted its right so to do in cases of disloyalty and crime."

Senator Walsh also called attention to the cases which arose immediately after the civil war, when Senators-elect presented themselves from the States which had been in rebellion against the Union. Each of these men was over 30 years old, each was a citizen of the United States and each was a resident of the State from which he came. Nevertheless, in every case where "disloyalty" during the Civil War was proved, the claimant was excluded.

In appealing for adoption of his resolution, Senator Walsh said it was imperative that the Committee on Privileges and Elections should make some recommendation for the guidance of the State.

"I appreciate that in some quarters offenses of this character are regarded as trivialities," he said. "I can not believe any such view will prevail in this body. The integrity of our Government, the rights of our people, our liberties, indeed, are all bound up in this question.

"It is a matter of no consequence that the acts complained of were perpetrated beyond the jurisdiction of the United States. They are of such nature that they are condemned by the opinion of the civilized world, and perhaps, there is no nation which does not legislate against them, even in those countries in which they are denounced by what might be regarded as the common law of civilized nations."

Borah Says Majority Can Expel Smith and Vare

Senator Borah, who ranks on the same high plane with Walsh as a logician and interpreter of the Constitution, told the correspondent that beyond any doubt Congress had the right to examine fully into the qualifications of its members and to expel for any cause. Borah said that the precedents cited by Walsh were valid and binding. They demonstrated clearly, he said, that the word "qualifications" as used in Article 1, Section 5, of the Constitution had a broader meaning than mere qualifications as to age, citizenship and residence.

The Constitution gives the Senate the right to expel a member by a two-thirds vote. Borah was asked for his view on the theory that this rule applies in the Smith and Vare cases.

"It does not," he replied with decision. "The seat of either of these Senators-elect may be vacated by a majority vote, since the ground on which they are attacked relates directly to the election process."

Borah told the Senate, in the debate on the Walsh resolution calling for an investigation of the charges against Senator Gould, that he did not want to be understood "as being influenced in any way by the theory that the vote in the State of Maine had anything to do with the vindication of the Senator, so far as the question here presented is concerned."

"Does the Senator claim that there is any precedent for expelling a member from this body for a crime supposed to have been committed before the election?" asked Senator Reed of Pennsylvania.

"I have not a particle of doubt," replied Borah, "that we have the power to expel a member for any reason that the Senate, in its own judgment, thinks sufficient. This is not a power which belongs to the States; it is a power which was specifically reserved to the members of either body (the House or the Senate) by the provisions of the Constitution itself.

Claims Right to Pass on Pre-Election Offenses

"If the doctrine which is now announced were followed to its logical conclusion, the Senate would have no power to pass upon qualifications of its members, regardless of what acts of corruption they might have been guilty of, or regardless of the fact that they might have purchased their seats here, or regardless of the fact that they might have committed all kinds of crimes before they got here. That doctrine has never heretofore prevailed, and I trust that the exigencies of the situation will not cause it to be established as a precedent now."

It is one of Senator Borah's major premises that a primary election is an integral part of the election process, and that Congress therefore, under the constitutional grant of Federal authority to regulate the "manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives," has the right to regulate primaries.

"The primaries are a part of the election machinery," he said. "They constitute the method by which the whole machinery is put in action. Without them there would be no candidates, and without candidates no election. How can it be contended that laws safeguarding primaries are not laws reasonable and necessary for safeguarding and insuring clean elections?"

In discussing the subject with the correspondent, Borah again, as in the recent Senate debate, cited the Newberry decision of the United States Supreme Court. He pointed out the fallacy of the common belief that this decision held that Congress had no power to deal with primaries.

How Supreme Court Stood on the Question

"Though the entire court held that the judgment of the lower court in the Newberry case should be reversed," Borah said, "the opinion was not unanimous as to the power of Congress over primaries.

"Four of the nine Justices held that Congress had such power, four held that it lacked the power and one justice reserved his decision. In other words, four held that the primary was a part of the election process and four that it was not."

The statement of Senator Broah regarding the line-up in the Newberry case, decided May 2, 1921, is correct.

Justice McReynolds, speaking for himself, Holmes, Day and Van Devanter, denied that the primary was a part of the election within the meaning of the Constitution. This section of the court therefore found that the Federal corrupt practices act was unconstitutional insofar as it sought to regulate primary elections for the Senate. It is to be noted, however—as Borah does not fail to note—that this decision was upon a statute passed prior to the adoption of the seventeenth amendment, which provides for the direct election of Senators.

"The Supreme Court," said Borah, "did not decide the question as it will be presented under the seventeenth amendment."

The four who held the primary to be a part of the election machinery were Chief Justice White and Justices Pitney, Brandeis and Clarke. Justice McKenna concurred in the McReynolds opinion as applied to the statute under consideration, but "reserved the question of the powers of Congress under the seventeenth amendment."

Argues for Senate's Authority Over Primary

Though concurring in the reversal of the lower court in the Newberry case, Chief Justice White, in a separate opinion vigorously dissented from the conclusion that Congress could not regulate primaries. This was his language: "I find it impossible to say that the admitted power of Congress to control and regulate the election of Senators does not embrace, as appropriate to that power, the authority to regulate the primary held under State authority."

Equally strong was the opinion of Justice Pitney, in which Brandeis and Clarke concurred. This opinion agreed that the Newberry case should be reversed, but not on the ground of any want of power on the part of Congress to deal with primaries.

"Why," asked Justice Pitney, "should this provision of the Constitution (the provision giving Congress power over elections), so vital to the very structure of the Government, be so narrowly construed? It is said primaries were unknown when the Constitution was adopted. So were the steam railway and the electric telegraph. But the authority of Congress to regulate commerce among the several States was extended over these instrumentalities, because it was recognized that the manner of conducting the commerce was not essential.

"It seems to me too clear for discussion that primary elections and nominating conventions are so closely related to the final election and their proper regulation so essential to effective regulation of the latter, so vital to representative government, that power to regulate them is within the general authority of Congress."

Of the nine justices who participated in the Newberry decision, only four are still on the bench—Brandeis, McReynolds, Holmes and Van Devanter.

2000 LIVES LOST THIS YEAR GETTING COAL OUT OF MINES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.

MORE than 2000 have been killed in the coal mines of the United States this year, but this record, deplorable as it is, does not constitute the "black" year of the industry. In 1907 the total number killed in the mines was 3342 and that was the worst year for which any records are available. In 1910 the number killed was 2821 and the third worst year was 1913 when 2785 of the underground workers lost their lives.

The really sad part of the mine statistics is that while the major disasters attract solicitude, the great majority of deaths in the mines are unheralded and are due to workaday causes. For instance, in the first ten months of this year, for which complete records are available, the total number of deaths from all causes was 2018. Of this number only 307 were killed in major explosions.

The death list for the latest explosion at Francisco, Ind. has not been completed. Taken together with an explosion at Moundsville, W. Va., on Nov. 15, it may add 27 to 30 fatalities to the major explosions class. The worst disaster of 1926 occurred at Wilburton, Ok., Jan. 13, when 59 men were killed. The next worst was at Clymer, Pa., Aug. 26, when 44 men were killed.

The worst mine disaster in the history of the United States was at Monongah, W. Va., Dec. 6, 1907, when 361 lives were snuffed out in a dust explosion. The country had hardly recovered from this shocking tragedy when an explosion occurred at Jacob's Creek, Pa., in which 239 men were killed. These two major accidents made 1907 the black year for all time so far as the United States is concerned.

But far worse mining disasters have occurred in the coal workings of other countries. At Courriers, France, in 1906, there was an explosion in which more than 1100 persons were killed. England and Japan also have had far greater disasters than any recorded in the United States.

Nevertheless there have been 16 major disasters in the mines of this country compared to 14 in 1925, and while they will account for 335 to 337 of the total number killed this year the percentage to the total of more than 2000 deaths will be small. More than 50 per cent of the deaths annually occurring in coal mines are due to falling roofs.

In the Government records kept by W. W. Adams, statistician of the Bureau of Mines in the Department of Commerce, deaths in the mining industry, are figured on a percentage basis of coal produced. This may sound cold-blooded to an extent, but it is the only satisfactory method of comparison which has been devised because mining is more or less of a sporadic industry.

The fatality rate of the first 10 months of this year in the bituminous mines was 3.60 per million tons of coal produced as compared to 3.48 in 1925. In the anthracite regions the death rate was 5.16 per million tons as compared to 6.38 in 1925. Of the total deaths during the first 10 months of this year, 1067 occurred in bituminous mines and 361 in the anthracite diggings.

Is Farm Relief a Myth or Misnomer?
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IS there any practical or feasible solution to present hysterical financial conditions that prevail among farmers at the present time?

Certainly there is a remedy, and when the farmers and laborers gain wisdom enough to apply political remedy, they can obtain justice. This is a political government, not economic or industrial. The Constitution was made by 55 men, the majority of whom were attorneys; not a single farmer, mechanic or laborer, and attorneys have made and dominated all laws in both state and nation from the making of the Constitution until the present time. Seemingly everyone has a cure or remedy for the financial disease that affects people of today. Co-operation of farmers in the purchase of elevators, produce and hardware stores and small banks at cross roads, landing in iron-bound corporations, avail the farmer nothing.

The farm clubs of the Missouri Farmers' Federated Bureau and all farm meetings in Missouri, Iowa and Illinois have availed nothing. The farmers and laborers must banish partisan prejudice and abandon fear of holding office. Send farmers to State Senate and Congress from agricultural districts, and laborers to same offices from manufacturing districts, thereby eliminating attorneys and bankers. As a rule, farmers are political cowards. The farmer and laborer can change conditions at once and protect themselves from false and unjust legislation. Everyone concedes there is more honesty needed in politics.

"Singing Bunk to the Herd."
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN the "cow-punchers" of 40 years ago had rounded up a fine bunch of fat steers and started toward the nearest slaughter pen, all was anxiety. The slightest incident would disturb the herd and off they would go in all directions. In other words they would stampede. The only thing that would hold them was propaganda, and the cow-men soon learned to keep outriders who, at the slightest sign of uneasiness, would begin to sing and circle the herd until it became a mass, moving in a circle and could not stampede. Old outriders would become famous for the brand of propaganda they could furnish, and when the cattle were delivered and slaughtered the owner of the herd would reward them with easy jobs until the next herd was ready to deliver.

We all consent that there are cattle, owners and outriders, but when an Assistant Secretary of State is caught singing bunk to the herd we naturally inquire, where are the owners and what will become of the beef. We know that the secretary will hold his job or get a better one. MARION S. PARSONS.

Natural Resources Squandered.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ACCORDING to published reports the United States uses 20,000,000 gallons of gasoline daily, and if this is true, it seems that 75,000,000 gallons of crude oil is taken from the earth daily. We sprinkle the streets with it. The oil-burning craze has spread to the factory and residence alike. It seems that by 1936 we will have taken from under our feet more than 100,000,000 cubic feet of oil. A law to control the use of oil is quite necessary. It seems also that the country should be prepared to take over the natural power sites instead of giving them away to corporations or individuals.

More Small Industries.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN your writeup of the double-deck boulevard for Third street, you mentioned theaters and office buildings for that district.

Allow me to suggest that fireproof buildings with modern conveniences for business and light manufacturing should replace the old, out-of-date buildings there now. Manufacturing plants, employing 50 or 100 men or women, "reports" say, are more valuable to a city than 10 or 12 story office buildings and theaters. What St. Louis needs are more light manufacturing plants that produce values for her citizens both in commodities and wages, rather than more theaters at present.

Attractive business and manufacturing buildings could be built in this territory and would not detract from the proposed boulevard and highway, both for traffic and pleasure, trucks, automobiles and busses, that could use both decks of the proposed improvement, which I hope to see started and completed soon.

Illinois Debtor Law.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I AM an Illinoisan, and as East St. Louis and Belleville are in Illinois and as Illinois is in the United States, I am wondering what kind of justice the man of East St. Louis is receiving in having to serve a jail sentence for a debt. Looks like the debt has little to do with him. Seems that it gives his creditor an unfair privilege so long as the creditor can pay $1 per day. Does any law make provision for justice being limited in the event the creditor should become bankrupt, or would that lessen the crime and turn debtor loose with justice served? C. L.

THE FETISH OF EFFICIENCY.

In the recent Oregon Postmaster case, wherein a majority of the Supreme Court affirmed the uncontrolled power of the President to dismiss any or all of his appointees at any time, without regard to the Senate or Congress, there is this significant paragraph in the dissenting opinion of Justice Brandeis:

> The doctrine of the separation of powers was adopted by the convention of 1787 not to promote efficiency but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power. The purpose was not to avoid friction, but by means of inevitable friction incident to the distribution of the governmental powers among three departments, to save the people from autocracy.

This truth is asserted again and again by the founders in the most vehement exhortation to their posterity. Yet everywhere today, in private and public life, there is a constant cry for "efficient government." The Supreme Court, in many other recent cases, has yielded to this fetish. Thus, to render the Volstead act more effective, it has decided that a stolen automobile discovered in the transportation of liquor, may be confiscated, though the owner is wholly innocent. Again, in the interest of more effective law enforcement, Congress and the Federal courts have all but destroyed trial by jury in prohibition cases.

The rage for efficiency has obsessed the American Bar Association and the several state bar associations to a point where all state legislatures are to be besieged to abolish the existing checks upon judicial tyranny, in the hope of accelerating criminal justice. They would confer upon Judges the right to tell a jury that an accused is guilty, though they do not yet propose to give Judges that complementary power to fine and imprison jurors who refuse to do their bidding. But that is the next step in "efficient justice."

You cannot have an efficient government that is free government. Efficiency connotes the power in government to act, promptly and on all occasions, in its own discretion. Freedom connotes the absence of just such quality in government. As Lord Erskine long ago declared:

> It is of the nature of everything that is great and useful, both in the animate and inanimate world, to be wild and irregular, and we must be content to take them with the alloys which belong to them, or live without them. * * * Liberty herself, the last and best gift of God to his creatures, must be taken just as she is. You might pare her down into bashful regularity, shape her into a perfect model of severe, scrupulous law; but she would then be Liberty no longer; and you must be content to die under the lash of this inexorable justice which you have exchanged for the banners of freedom.

THE PEACE PRIZES.

The Nobel peace prize for 1925 has been awarded to Vice President Dawes and to Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Sir Austen Chamberlain's part in the Locarno treaties is a contribution to peace of the first order. The luster of that service, to be sure, was somewhat dimmed by the unhappy aftermath which culminated in the Geneva impasse where Germany's expectation of entering the League of Nations encountered a bitter disappointment that savored of treachery somewhere and for a time threatened disaster. The difficulty was later composed and the spirit of Locarno is now a leaven in the affairs of Europe.

Vice President Dawes was given this honor because of the vitally important work he did in the preparation of the Dawes plan and the effective executive ability he displayed in procuring its adoption. The Dawes plan, it is held by many economic experts, will never complete its allotted span, but it has functioned competently for two years, and if it were to be abandoned tomorrow it still would have to be accounted a measure of great merit that met a desperate emergency.

The ultimate verdict of history on the two efforts cannot be predicted. The Nobel peace prize does not presume to do so. It is the contemporaneous judgment of practical statesmanship grappling with pressing problems. By that token the distinction has, we believe, been well bestowed in both instances.

Arkansas seems to have been a land of bondage.

CAL AND THE CONSTITUTION FRAMERS.

We are indebted to the Washington correspondent of The Independent for a most delicious expose of the cool and consistent master mind in the White House.

It is 4 o'clock one afternoon last winter, while the administration's Fess farm relief bill is pending. The correspondents have just arrived for their semi-weekly conference with the White House spokesman. The President arises for the arduous ordeal of answering the usual two or three hollow and meaningless questions. But today one of the interviewers, obviously tired of the banal performances, violates all precedents by asking whether the President will support any plan of farm relief. Thereupon the great man, no longer cool, replies:

> As I have repeatedly said at these conferences, I make it a practice never to interfere with the work of Congress. The framers of the Constitution carefully divided the functions of the Government between the executive, the legislative and the judicial branches. As you know, I never attempt to dictate to the leaders or the individual members how they should vote.

The newspaper men depart at about 4:20. At 4:21, according to the Independent correspondent, the telephone rings in the office of Senator Oddie of Nevada. The Senator, not having been the recipient of either patronage or social favors from the White House, is amazed to find that the President is on the wire.

"Senator Oddie? This is Mr. Coolidge, at the White House, talking. Yes, the President. I want you to vote for the Fess farm relief bill. What's that? You can't? You are already pledged to the McNary bill? . . . Well, you've got to vote for the Fess bill. It's important for the administration that the Fess bill go through. . . . You can't?"

The following day the newspapers carried the headlines:

COOLIDGE REFUSES TO DICTATE TO CONGRESS ON FARM RELIEF

Where, oh, where, we should like to know, does that leave the framers?

THE MYSTERIOUS MR. BORAH.

Little by little the cryptic character of Senator Borah emerges. We discover to our surprise that we have not known the man. He has been in the United States Senate since 1907, but not even his fellow Senators have made him out. He has been and is the Senate imponderable.

What an opportunity for those who write the mirrors and etch for us in bewitching terms the personalities of Washington! They are all eagerly availing themselves of it. It is a life class—and such a life class. There poses the picturesque Senator from Idaho, his eyes glistening, his mane flowing, his fine face wistfully upturned—easily the outstanding intellect and the most fascinating figure in the Senate.

But who knows what Borah is? Nobody. One by one the word painters fold up their easels and give him up. He is a riddle. He is a liberal—but how far? Did he ever follow any cause or any man out of his party? Not he. Yet the conservatives have no more confidence in him than the liberals have. He can dish them as easily as he can dish the insurgents. There was a time when Borah was regarded as a safe man for the Old Guard. Aldrich counted him an acquisition and gave him an important committee post; but Borah very soon jumped the traces. He enjoys now the reputation of being liberal; but nobody saw him follow the third party under La Follette, any more than he was caught following the Bull Moose party under Roosevelt. Borah goes boldly only so far. He is the political prairie dog of American politics—never more than 30 feet from his hole.

Yet Borah lasts. Perhaps no other man in the Senate is so envied. Certainly none other is so widely admired.

You cannot beat Borah. He is both the North and South poles. He is the sun and the moon. He is the East and the West. Borah going meets Borah coming. Is it any wonder that of all the scores who try it none can tell us what he is like? He is just Borah—a delightful mystery who weaves as he will through the drama of our national life, always gracing the stage and always sure of a hand. Perhaps after him we shall hear Borah's rollicking laughter that we were ever quite sure of anything—a mistake he never made.

We take it that in future slot machine offenders will seek a change of venue to the Juvenile Court.

TOYS NEVER GROW OLD.

Any child who owns a plush pussy-cat which has, in the vicissitudes of a long and honorable career, lost an eye or suffered indignities to its tail, will resent the imputation of grown-ups that toys grow old. Collectors of toys for the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival this year have, for lack of a better word, asked donations of "old toys." But we must search for a juster and more delicate adjective.

A lead soldier back from the wars may have a broken musket or a cracked tibula, but he is not old. A doll may lose her hair in some horrendous escapade, or suffer astigmatism from an ill-advised operation, yet can we call her a crone? Toys are eternally young. It is the children, alas, who grow old. As long as their love lasts it flames more fiercely for the battered toys than for the new; they do not forsake playthings because of time-dimmed paint or decrepit wheels. Their loyalty flickers out in the mutations of adolescence, and their abandoned toys, still youthful and possessed of charms for younger hearts, are laid upon the shelf.

Hundreds of toys are thus entombed, outrageously, among furs and petticoats and umbrellas of a bygone age in the attic. It is a cruel exile. It is unwarranted disgrace. Somewhere, always, there are chubby hands which would reclaim them for another exciting life. If adults would release these prisoners with faith in their perpetual newness the ragged doll might again keep watch at the pillow of a crib and the ramshackle fire engine once more would race to conflagrations terrible at the foot of the stairs. For toys there should be no old age—only ultimate dissolution after lives of activity in Happyland.

The news that General Dawes won the Nobel peace prize should not be passed over without mentioning the fact that Owen D. Young was co-author of the Dawes plan and deserves a good deal of the credit.

THE WATSON CONTEST.

The late Thomas R. Marshall, who was the swan song of all that was fine and noble in Indiana politics before it was monopolized by the Klan and Anti-saloon League, once indulged his disconcerting habit of saying exactly what he thought by stating that if Lake County were suddenly to slide into Lake Michigan, the event would be a great blessing to the people of Indiana. This blunt assertion of the Hoosier philosopher is just now being voiced by the overwhelming majority of the citizens of the State. Lake County, the stench of whose steel mills and gasoline distilleries has never equaled the stink of its politics, has now the distinction of having sent the Hon. Jim Watson back to the Senate after the rest of the State had repudiated him, and, in addition, the further honor of having done so under conditions of such a suspicious character that R. Earl Peters, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, is reported to be preparing to go to Washington shortly in order to investigate the possibility of a contest.

Though here may be a scandal that might easily assume considerable proportions, it must appear almost an heirloom to the scandal-hardened people of Indiana. For Lake County has always been to Hoosier Republicanism what Philadelphia has been to the Grand Old Party of Pennsylvania. Made up almost entirely of voters of comparatively recent naturalization, and consequently of no training in the responsibilities of citizenship, it is a pliant tool in the hands of a political machine which has controlled the State long enough to have unlimited resources of both money and jobs.

Indiana at last seems likely to have one of her scandals aired on the floor of the Senate. Perhaps, if there is real substance behind the affidavits which have come to Mr. Peters from Lake and many other counties of Indiana, the people of the State will at last realize the moral bankruptcy of their politics.

It is true that the Fall-Doheny trial lacks sex appeal, but it's a corking six-reeler at that.

REVELRY IN ARKANSAS.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

JUDGES DISSENT ON LIMITING MEDICAL PRESCRIPTIONS.

From the United States Daily.

THE dissenting opinion (in the United States Supreme Court decision that Congress has the right to limit physicians' prescriptions of liquor, written by Justice Sutherland and concurred in by Justices McReynolds, Butler and Stone) held that Congress by prohibiting the medicinal use of malt intoxicating liquors and permitting the use, in limited quantities, of spiritous intoxicating liquor, had acknowledged the medicinal qualities of the latter.

Justice Sutherland referred to testimony given at a congressional hearing on the subject of the amounts of liquor physicians deemed advisable to prescribe for medicinal purposes, and concluded that at best the question remained "debatable."

"The naked question, then," he said, "simply comes to this: Conceding these liquors to be valuable medicines, has Congress the power, under the constitutional provision prohibiting traffic in intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, to limit their prescription in good faith and consequently their necessary use, for medicinal purposes, to a quantity which, under allegations taken as true, is inadequate for such purposes?

"To me the answer seems plain. If Congress cannot altogether prohibit the prescription for medicinal use, it cannot limit the prescription to an inadequate quantity.

"If the power exists to limit the quantity to a tablespoonful or teaspoonful or a few drops during the same or any other arbitrary period of time, with the result in substance and effect that the definite limitation of the prohibitory power of the words 'for beverage purposes' vanishes altogether."

AL SMITH AND THE PROPHETS.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, the indefatigable editor and long-range political prophet of Emporia, Kan., has been scanning the horizon, reading the stars and considering the election returns. As a result he predicts that Governor Smith of New York will be the Democratic candidate for President in 1928. He also says this will be a very excellent thing for the Republican party, an opinion in which a great many Republicans will cheerfully coincide. It is Mr. White's idea that the nomination of Mr. Smith will effectually break up the solid South, thus getting rid of what he describes as a political nuisance of long standing. It hardly requires a prophet or the son of a prophet to arrive at that conclusion. Governor Smith's views on prohibition as well as his religious affiliations are bound to cause serious defections from the Democratic ranks in the politically dry South where religious intolerance flourishes more than elsewhere in the Nation. Mr. White thinks that with Smith as a candidate the Democratic party might have a fighting chance even with the solid South broken. Without Smith, he asserts, the Democrats might as well quit before they start. Just how the pronouncements of this oracle will be received by some distinguished Democrats remains to be seen. Our own guess is that it will hardly meet the approval of Mr. McAdoo, Mr. Pomerene or even Pat Harrison, or Joe Robinson. But then, of course, a Republican prophet can hardly be expected to meet Democratic approval completely.

WHO'S WHO.

By H. L. MENCKEN in The American Mercury.

THE fourteenth edition of "Who's Who in America," comes out in a new format. The biographies are arranged in three columns instead of the familiar two, the page is increased in size from seven and a half by five and a half inches to nine by seven, and the number of pages is reduced by nearly a half. There is another innovation: In the case of notables who have achieved the reward of viable offspring, the Christian names of their children are given. One learns, with polite surprise, that Congressman Balderdash has four sons, Theodore R., G. Dewey, Winfield and Oreste. One learns with even more surprise that Mrs. Margaret Sanger, the birth controller, has two. Altogether, there are 26,915 names listed, 1558 more than in the last volume. Among them I note that of Rodolpho Alfonzo Raffaelo Pierre Filibert Guglielmi di Valentina d'Antonguolla, alias Valentino, lamentably deceased since the work went to press. But, as usual, many other notables are strangely missing. Where is Jack Dempsey? Where is John S. Sumner, the successor to Comstock? Where is Capt. Hartley of the Leviathan? Where is the Honorable Horace J. Donnelly, the Comstock of the Postoffice? Where is Roger N. Baldwin of the American Civil Liberties Union? His wife is there, under her maiden name, but Roger himself is non est. Henry Ford is present to the extent of 31 lines, but not Edsel. Can it be that Edsel is under suspicion of red leanings?

IN PAGAN OHIO.

From the Baltimore Sun.

PAGAN influences are at work in rural Ohio, where the father and brother of the girl who won in a church beauty contest at Pomeroy have been shot by the father of the runner-up. It was a beauty contest with an apple as a prize that gave Prince Paris his start and led to the Trojan war—and Pomeroy means "king apple." The lass who lost in Pomeroy is named Eva in memory of another whom old Satan got into trouble over an apple. And the winner bears the name of Opal, of ominous significance. The sinister elements are clear to students of the occult. But who would have thought it of Ohio?

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

A Dynamic Idea

"Holism and Evolution." By General the Right Honorable J. C. Smuts. (Macmillan.)

IT is one of the rarest experiences in the life of a book reviewer to come upon what may be termed a dynamic idea—one capable of clarifying and reshaping the reader's whole world-view. Even in this day of eager groping after new things, such ideas remain extremely scarce, considering the volume and scope of contemporary speculation. Bergson's "Creative Evolution," Dewey's "Reconstruction in Philosophy," Korzybski's "Manhood of Humanity," Ouspensky's "Tertium Organum" and Spengler's "Decline of the West" present such ideas. The others that have appeared in the literature of the past 15 years would hardly require half one's fingers for the counting.

"Holism and Evolution," by Gen. Smuts, the distinguished South African soldier and statesman, contains a dynamic idea that, if it could be generally grasped, would profoundly affect the whole social fabric of the world, from its root in economics to its flower in religion, ethics, literature and the arts.

There is one fact about our time that cannot be overemphasized. Being distinctly scientific, in a sense that must same day come to seem extremely narrow, our faith has been placed very largely in analysis—a practical means of understanding our physical environment and compelling it to serve our needs and desires. No one will deny that great benefits have resulted from the analytical method: but it should be apparent that those benefits are costing us rather heavily in human values at the moment. By analysis men may arrive at facts of great usefulness; but the livable truth about men and things can be conceived only through the opposite process. Our generation very naturally lacks the synthetic temper. It is evident in many ways that we are individualistic to the verge of anarchy. The fragmentary, the impressionistic view dominates and is painfully apparent in our literature. Characteristically we see pieces, not the wholes to which the pieces belong and in which alone they can have real significance. There is abroad among us no large general unifying conception of life by which the individual may adjust himself to society conceived as an organic unity.

It is such a unifying conception that Gen. Smuts offers in his theory of Holism. (The word, it may be noted, is from a Greek word meaning "whole.) Everywhere he looks, whether in the physical world, as revealed by astronomy, physics, biology, or in the realm of human personality, as revealed by psychology, or in the social process, as revealed by history, he finds one great principle in action, which he states as follows: "The creation of wholes, and ever more highly organized wholes and of wholeness generally as characteristic of existence, is an inherent character of the universe."

With this principle in view as a guiding thread running through the maze of knowledge now available, he offers a necessarily tentative, but nevertheless highly suggestive outline of the evolutionry process through what he regards as the three fundamental structures, the atom, the living cell and mind, arriving at human personality, which he believes to be the flower of the process. At each step he shows the same organizing principle at work, the same tendency to unite fragments into wholes, and these into still more comprehensive organisms. In each case, the newly resulting whole is seen to have a significance not to be explained by considering merely the separate significance of each component part. Something new results from the creative combination in each case. According to Gen. Smuts' view, it is as though the whole cosmos, in all its manifestations of ceaseless change, were consciously striving to become a unity.

The idea is, of course, very ancient. It is the author's restatement of it in terms of contemporary thinking and its wide application to the affairs of the modern world that restores to the ancient idea a new dynamic quality for us now. That there is such a fundamental principle to be observed in everything can scarcely be doubted by anyone who pauses to think about it. That this principle is not generally considered in our characteristically "modern" activities must be granted also. To understand it, as a general proposition, is to have what we, as a society, conspicuously lack—a dependable standard for creative criticism of all human relations and activities; for, surely, to be right, to be in harmony with the great process of which we are a part, insofar as we are able to understand it, is the supreme human need. (It is that need out of which all religion has grown.)

The application of the principle to literary criticism would be devastating to very much that is now commonly acclaimed as notable; for the literary emphasis would then be placed upon the significance of creative wholes and the "over values" that are to be found in wholes, as opposed to the impressionistic, fragmentary conceits now in fashion; upon the wider social view of life, as opposed to the prevalent personal view.

DIES FOUR DAYS AFTER HER NECK IS BROKEN

Mrs. Anna Cottrell of Glen Carbon, Ill., Suffered Injury in Auto Accident.

After surviving four days with a broken neck, Mrs. Anna Cottrell, 35 years old, of Glen Carbon, Ill., died in St. Joseph's Hospital at Alton yesterday. She was injured in an automobile accident last Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Cottrell and her sister, Miss Florence Hinnen, also of Glen Carbon, were driving to work at the Western Cartridge Company's plant at East Alton when, at a point near Wanda, their Ford roadster skidded off the highway, which had been made slippery by the rain and freeze of the previous night. The car overturned in a ditch.

Members of the crew of an Illinois Central train which was passing at the time saw the plight of the sisters and sent back a relief party and ambulance from the next station. Mrs. Cottrell was unconscious and suffered complete paralysis as a result of her injury. Little hope was held for her recovery. Miss Hinnen suffered bruises but was not seriously hurt.

Mrs. Cottrell's case was similar to that of William Schaefer of Edwardsville, who died of a broken neck two weeks ago. He also was injured in an automobile accident and lived for two days afterward.

Funeral services for William Marc Chauvenet, veteran St. Louis chemist and mineralogist, who died at St. Luke's Hospital Friday, will be held tomorrow from the residence of Philip C. Scanlan, 4450 Lindell boulevard.

Mr. Chauvenet, who was 71 years old, succumbed to heart disease. He lived in a bachelor apartment at 3737 Washington boulevard. He was the son of William Chauvenet, a former chancellor of Washington University and one of the founders of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. He was born in the Naval Academy and came to St. Louis when his father became chancellor of Washington.

About 1885 he entered a partnership with his brother, Regis, as an analytical chemist and consulting engineer in St. Louis. Regis later went to Colorado to take charge of the Colorado School of Mines. In recent years Mr. Chauvenet has been known widely in St. Louis for his interest in art and literature. For friends and for his own enjoyment he did considerable painting and clay modeling and also wrote some poetry. His office and laboratory were at 620 Chestnut street.

SMOKE LEAGUE EYES SMALL HEAT PLANTS

Mishandling of Home Furnaces Largely Responsible for Nuisance, Organization Says.

Efforts of the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League, to reduce smoke in St. Louis, are to be concentrated on the numerous small heating plants of homes and other places, rather than on industrial plants and other large sources of smoke. The latter class is reached by the work of the City Smoke Commissioner, whose forces, however, are limited.

A great cause of the smoke that periodically enshrouds the city is the improper handling of small heating equipment, the league believes. A free school for instruction in smokeless and economical firing of furnaces and boilers is maintained by the League at Olive Street road and Hodiamont avenue. Another of its efforts to reduce smoke lies in pamphlets which are available to the public at the league's office in the Chamber of Commerce Building and at the firing school.

A statement issued by the league yesterday said:

"The smaller plants, represented more especially by the household heating equipment and small apartment, have not received the attention that has been given to larger plants. For this reason and also from the fact that there are so many individual plants of this class, they constitute the largest part of the smoke problem in any city dependent on bituminous coal for its fuel, as St. Louis is. Whereas large power plants and high pressure plants in general have worked out standard designs of furnaces and stokers which will handle soft coals without objectionable smoke, firing methods in ordinary use in the small heating plants are no better now than they were 50 or 100 years ago."

AGREEMENT ON FRANCHISE

Kansas City Street Railways to Have Fixed Income.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 11.—A modified franchise for the Kansas City Street Railways Co. was agreed upon today by a special Franchise Committee of the City Council. It provides for an unhampered company income of $2,000,000, based on 8 per cent earnings on a valuation of $25,000,000 on the rehabilitated property.

When earnings, if ever, move about the 8 per cent return, reductions are to be made in ticket fares at the rate of 1-6 of a cent reduction for each $100,000 gain in net annual income. The ticket fare now, continued from a recent franchise extension ordinance, is 15 tickets for $1, or 6 2-3 cents each. The franchise is for 30 years.

$6000 SUBSCRIBED TO AID WORK OF MGR. DEMPSEY

Christmas Present of $100,000 as Testimonial to Priest's Charity Efforts Planned by Committee.

SPONSORED BY MORE THAN 100 CITIZENS

Organization of the Campaign Perfected With Headquarters in Federal Commerce Trust Building

Contributions totaling $6000 have been reported in the campaign to raise $100,000 to be presented at Christmas to Father Tim Dempsey as a testimonial to his 20 years of charity work and to enable him to continue and expand his philanthropies. The donations included $500 each from Walter Freund and the Teamsters' Union.

A committee of more than 100 representative citizens is sponsoring the movement. Headquarters are at 1508 Federal Commerce Trust Building.

Organization of the campaign was perfected Friday at a meeting of the committee at Hotel Statler. In the absence of Col. Bennett C. Clark, chairman of the committee, George S. Johns presided, and outlined the object of the movement. Other speakers were Louis P. Aloe, who declared the community at large should help along the movement; Isaac Hedges, former Judge Samuel Rosenfeld, Jack Ryan, Walter Freund, Pat Price and Daniel Murphy.

Purpose of Movement.

Outlining the purposes of the movement, Mr. Johns said:

"We are here today for the purpose of organizing an effort to give a suitable Christmas gift to Msgr. Timothy Dempsey, 'Father Tim' as he is lovingly called by his friends and those who know about his work in St. Patrick's parish. The movement was started by a few friends of Father Tim—men of several races and creeds—who loved the man and were familiar with his labors and sacrifices for the poor and unfortunate among the 'submerged tenth' of his parish, a section of the city where the poor and unfortunate are as thick as blackberries.

"The gift was designed to be a recognition of the humane work Father Dempsey had done and is still doing, and to supply him with resources to maintain the philanthropic institutions he has founded, and to carry out his benevolent purposes towards the poor.

Priest's Work Reviewed.

"For 28 years in St. Patrick's Parish, once peopled mostly by Irish and Catholics, now peopled mostly by everyone else in the way of race and creed, mostly poor, Father Tim has ministered to the spiritual and material needs of the people. All, no matter what their race or creed, are welcome to his bounty and his personal service.

"Twenty years ago, seeing the need of the destitute and the ill-paid workers in his neighborhood, he opened a hotel for workingmen, where homeless men, employed or unemployed, could find shelter and wholesome food. The charges were fitted to meager purses and those without purses were welcome. More than 100,000 men have been sheltered there.

"Then he opened a hotel for working girls, where they could live in comfort on small pay, secure from the temptations of the street.

"To these institutions have been added a day nursery, to care for the babies of working women and a convalescent home for women.

Fill Fields of Usefulness.

"All thees institutions have been enlarged as the needs increased, maintained and have filled fields of the highest usefulness in giving comfort and aid to those who suffer from poverty or misfortune. Father Tim himself is a St. Louis institution.

"Father Tim started these institutions without capital of his own. They have been built and kept going by his own personal faith and service, and the aid of those who admired and sympathized with his good work. He built them on credit and trusted to the Lord to find the cash.

"I am inclined to think that Father Tim's maximum is 'trust in God and go in debt.' He falls in debt as easily as a baby falls off a bed. When he is picked up out of one ditch of debt, he straightway falls into another. He has an incurable debt habit. His debts, however, are not contracted for his own benefit, but for the benefit of the erring, the poor, the unfortunate—to help others out of ditches of misfortune.

Worth the Benediction.

"It took a terrible nightmare, peopled with ghosts, to convince old Scrooge that Christmas good will and good cheer were not 'bosh' and 'humbug.' But when the spirit of meanness was exorcised from the old man's heart, and he was converted to the Christmas spirit, it was 'Tiny Tim' who hailed the day of happiness with the cry of 'God bless us all.' That is what we want Big Tim to say on Christmas day, and it will be worth all we can do towards filling his ample stocking—to hear the benediction fall from his lips. It will not be meaningless. Everyone who is in need within his reach will share in the blessing, to the full extent of the resources we put in his hand.

"Those of us who do not know Father Tim, who have not basked in the light of his beaming face, nor caught the merry twinkle of his eye, nor revelled in the bubbling spring of his kindly humor, nor felt the exaltation of his generous spirit of helpfulness have missed one of the most inspiring and delightful experiences that can come to a human being.

"All of us know the character of the man and his work. We know the good he does.

"None ever heard Father Tim yell for the police when he found a sinner. He took care of the sinner.

Renders Aid Immediately.

"No one ever heard him call for a charity organization, and an investigation when an unfortunate came to his door. He took care of the unfortunate.

"He has boundless faith in God and man. His faith has been justified, and we hope with all our hearts it always will be. We can justify it.

"Like the door of his church, the door of his house, and the door of his heart are always open to all those with 'unfed sides and looped and windowed raggedness' who seek succor.

"Even the gunmen respect Father Tim. When he declares a truce of God between them, they quit shooting.

"Both employers and employed seek his potent aid in settling their conflicts and bringing peace.

Should Strengthen His Arm.

"It is for us to see that within Father Tim's door there are ample means of relief. Let us strengthen his arm to carry out the kindly impulses of his great heart. Let us prove that we are as generous as he is.

"We know that every dollar we give to Father Tim will go to those that need it most. There is no costly overhead; no big salaries; no administration expense in his charities.

"If we fill Father Tim's stocking to overflowing on Christmas day there will not be an empty stocking in St. Patrick's parish, nor anywhere else in St. Louis where Father Tim's hands can reach.

"Father Tim is big all over, big head, big body, big heart, big hand. Let us make his Christmas gift as big as the man."

2 YEARS FOR ASSAULTING GIRL

Joe Drecoe Convicted by Jury That Is Out All Night.

Joe Drecoe, 24 years old, of 5253 Cooper street, a clothes presser, yesterday was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for criminal assault on a girl on July 5. The jury, in Circuit Judge Landwehr's court, received the case Friday afternoon and reported its verdict yesterday morning.

The prosecuting witness, who was 15 years old then but is 16 now, testified she was attacked by Drecoe in an automobile on Skinker boulevard.

Loans!

Do you know how easy it is for you to borrow $50 to $1000 on your car as security? It makes no difference what you want the money for. Just drive up, bring your title, get the money and drive away. No signers or endorsers. Everything private. Maybe your monthly payments now on the car are too high. Yahlem will reduce these payments for you and lend you more money. Pay back as little as $10 per month. Yahlem Finance Corp., 1035 N. Grand. Open Nites Till Nine.

SAFES IN 3 LAUNDRIES ARE ROBBED OF $3100

Payment Is Stopped on Payroll Checks Taken From One Office on South Side.

Cracksmen moved across the alley separating three affiliated laundries, Friday night, in order to break open three safes and a vault in the establishments.

They obtained a sum estimated at between $2900 and $3100, the exact amount being subject to a check of the books. The places robbed were the Excelsior-Leader Laundry Co., 2325 Texas avenue, the Cascade Wet Wash Laundry Co. and the Victor Linen & Towel Co., both at 2655 Victor street. The vault and one safe were in the Excelsior-Leader Laundry and the other safes in the other office. Ownership of the three companies is virtually the same.

About $2000 was taken from the Excelsior-Leader Laundry, it was estimated by George W. Burley, secretary-treasurer; $500 to $600 from the Cascade Laundry and $400 to $500 from the towel company.

The robbers scattered numerous papers over the floors in going through the contents of the safes. Burley said that notes for $1000 held by his company were missing but might be found among these papers. A number of payroll checks were taken also, but payment was stopped on these.

ASSERTS MANY CASES NEED SERVICE OF WOMEN JURORS

League of Women Voters Bulletin Explains Stand of Organization.

Why the League of Women Voters is supporting jury service for women is explained briefly in the following statement in this week's League Bulletin:

"The League of Women Voters is not supporting jury service for women because women do or do not want to serve on juries. We advocate jury service for women because Missouri is wasting so valuable an asset: because women themselves are losing one of the great openings for service to the State; because, above all, the many cases in which women and children are involved desperately need women as jurors."

At a meeting of the league at the Town Club at 11 a. m. tomorrow, Charles E. Miner, executive secretary of the Missouri Social Hygiene Association, will discuss the bill for repression of commercialized vice, to be presented to the Legislature next month, and State Superintendent of Schools Lee will talk about the bill to be introduced for the schools of the State.

MRS. HAZEL BAILEY RELEASED ON BOND

Court Accepts $10,000 Security of Professional Bondsmen Who Give Service Free.

Following complaints sent to newspapers, Mrs. Hazel Bailey, charged with the murder of her husband, Clarence, last Monday night, was released yesterday on $10,000 bond which three professional bondsmen volunteered to sign without cost to Mrs. Bailey.

The showing at the Coroner's inquest had indicated grounds for a first degree murder charge against Mrs. Bailey and Circuit Attorney Sidener ordered her held in jail pending action by the grand jury.

Citizens in sympathy for Mrs. Bailey, who is poor and has two small children, one 6 months old, protested in letters to the press that she should be admitted to bail. With this view the Circuit Attorney's office concurred and allowed John Kelly, John Keegan and Clarence Owens to sign the bond, which was accepted by Judge Gayer.

QUESTION VALIDITY OF PHONE RATE EXTENSION

Eight St. Louis Firms Attack Public Service Commission's Orders in Petition.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 11.—Validity of two orders issued by the State Public Service Commission, extending increased rates of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. on business telephones in St. Louis, is attacked in an application for a writ of certiorari, filed in Supreme Court today by eight St. Louis business firms.

The petition asserts the original rate increase order, which would have expired July 31 last, no longer is operative, and charges that the company illegally has been collecting $75,000 a month from telephone subscribers in St. Louis. An appeal by the city of St. Louis from the original increase order now is pending in Supreme Court.

Firms filing the petition are the Campbell Iron Co., Goodfellow Lumber Co., J. S. Merrill Drug Co., Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., International Shoe Co., Lubrite Refining Co., Shapleigh Hardware Co. and Woodward & Tiernan Printing Co.

City Appealed Case.

The city did not join in the application for review of the case, as its legal department consented to the two extensions of three months each. The rates are effective until Jan. 31, under the second extension order.

The original rate increase was granted by the commission for a test period of 13 months, expiring July 31 last, and involved an increase of about $890,000 a year in the rates of business telephone subscribers. The city took the case into St. Louis Circuit Court on an application for a writ of certiorari for review of the commission's findings. The Circuit Court sustained the commission, and the city took an appeal to Supreme Court before the expiration of the test period.

On July 23 last the commission granted an extension of three months, as an audit of the results of the rate increase still was in progress. Another three months' extension was granted Oct. 29 last.

Questions Rates' Validity.

In the application filed today it is contended the commission was without jurisdiction to grant the extension orders while the appeal was pending in Supreme Court, and that therefore the rates charged under these extension orders are invalid.

At the request of the city, a hearing was held by the commission Nov. 17 last, on the audit made by the commission accountants of the results of the increase. In this hearing it developed that the city had taken an appeal. The commission immediately terminated the hearing and stated it would take no further steps pending termination of the appeal in the Supreme Court.

Alexanderson, consulting engineer for the Radio Corporation of America, an authority upon the radio, will be speaker Tuesday noon at the weekly luncheon of the St. Louis Electrical Board of Trade in Hotel Statler. HERBOTH HEIRS PROFIT BY HIS STOCK DEALS Realize $100,000 on $75,000 Equity in Margined Speculations.

Records on file in Probate Court show that of $525,310 (par value) worth of stocks listed in an inventory of the Charles Herboth estate, $492,810 (par value) were carried on margin with Paul Brown & Co. brokers, and the rest was owned outright. Herboth's equity in the stocks carried on margin was approximately $75,000.

Herboth owed Paul Brown & Co. the difference between $75,000 and the market value of the stock. In liquidating his estate, his executors foun dthat Herboth had traded wisely, for his marginal stocks had advanced in value, and about $100,000 was realized on the $75,000 equity.

The difference between the par value, $492,810, and the $100,000 obtained for the equity is the major reason why the whole estate, inventoried at $742,282, has a real value of between $300,000 and $350,000.

Herboth had traded for years in listed stocks of all classifications and was known as shrewd and conservative. His holdings at the time of his death included a few worthless stocks and some of little value, but these were offset by others. It is understood Herboth, who died in January, 1924, made most of his fortune in the Herboth Mercantile Co., 1436 North Broadway, his stock speculations being a sideline.

Executors of his estate are Mrs. Anna Herboth, his widow; Mansfield White, a plastering contractor, and James Webb, a partner in Paul Brown & Co., Forest P. Tralles is attorney for the executors.

Final settlement of the estate will be made this month. Mrs. Herboth inherited one-half of the estate, various relatives shared one-fourth, and eight employes shared the other fourth. The employes will receive about $10,000 each, of which $7000 already has been paid.

GOITRE

A new treatment for goitre has been developed by the W. T. E. Laboratories, 942 Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Battle Creek, Michigan, which many believe will prove to be the long-sought specific for this unsightly and dangerous disease. Many of the largest and most hideous goitres begin to recede almost in a day. They gradually get smaller, and in many cases are entirely gone in a few weeks. It is equally efficient in cases of toxic and so-called inside goitre. The treatment is harmless and anyone can use it with perfect safety at home.

A 48-page illustrated booklet on the Causes, Dangers and Non-Surgical Treatment of Goitre, issued by the Laboratories, fully explains the new treatment and will be mailed free to any interested sufferer.

WILBUR REPORTS NAVY NEEDS MORE MEN AND MONEY

Shortage of Funds Forces Concentration on Repairs Rather Than Essential Improvements.

SERIOUS PROBLEM TO FIND OFFICERS

Flights to Train Pilots to Be Reduced — Anti-Aircraft Gunnery Said to Gain Efficiency.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—A plea for a loosening of the Government purse-strings so that the Navy may maintain the full strength provided by law, was made by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur today in his annual report to President Coolidge. With limited funds at hand it has been necessary to concentrate on repairs rather than on alterations required to keep first line ships up to essential military standards for fleet service, Wilbur said.

In 1925, Wilbur said, the Navy got along with a personnel of 5160 line officers, the authorized strength being 5499. Lack of funds also made impossible the maintenance of the "required" 86,000 enlisted strength, the average for the year being nearly 4000 under that figure.

Navy Needs More Officers.

He gave it as his view that reduction of the Naval Academy enrollment had brought the navy to face a serious question as to how it could function with an insufficient number of officers. He urged that each member of Congress have five appointments to Annapolis again instead of the three necessitated by recent cuts in the budget.

Destroyer Squadron No. 2 was mentioned as one in which improvements had been deferred because of the cost. Economy was also exercised by striking from the list small craft and wooden vessels acquired in 1918 and 1919 which "require extensive repairs."

Since funds have not yet been appropriated, the report said work on the Navy's projected new airships of 6,000,000 cubic feet has not been started. Some concern was noted among air officers in this connection because the supply of helium obtainable from the Fort Worth, Tex., plant has been dwindling.

Illustrating the variety and scope of the Navy's work in peacetimes, Wilbur pointed to the activities of warships in protecting life in China, Central America and elsewhere, and of the Navy's part in aiding in the relief of Florida hurricane sufferers.

Will Cut Number of Flights.

As to aviation, the report said a study of requirements of aviation material had shown the percentage of rejections, due to failure to meet physical standards, coupled with those due to eliminations during flight training, remained high, at about 70 per cent. The question of flight eliminations was investigated and it was decided that they should be reduced by more careful preliminary selection of student material.

A notable improvement in anti-aircraft gunnery was recorded, and it was pointed out that operation of aircraft units for the fleet had reached a still higher rate of efficiency.

Powder-propelled catapults are being installed on battleships for launching observation and scouting planes, and an amphibian plane has been successfully launched from catapults.

General health in the Navy was reported to be excellent, with the daily average of personnel on the sick list less than three.

EBERT SIGNED TREATY ENDING WAR AGAINST OWN WISHES

New Biographical Novel Discloses Fear That German Republic Would Be Wrecked.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—New light on the attitude of leaders of democracy in Germany toward the Versailles treaty, which they feared might wreck the republic, has been thrown by Emil Felden in a biographical novel of Friedrich Ebert, Socialist, first President. Ebert detested the peace pact to such an extent, Felden says, that he signed it with a new pen and penholder, which he never used again.

"This is the bitter end," the stanch advocate of the republic is quoted as having said when the treaty, paragraph upon paragraph, was transmitted to him by wire on his silver wedding anniversary, May 9, 1919. "The terms cannot be fulfilled."

Ebert, Felden asserts, groped for a way out. Even Field Marshal von Hindenburg, it is revealed, advised against armed resistance. Gen. Groener said another war against the allies would mean civil war and the destruction of the nation. Thus, Ebert signed with a heavy heart, Felden declares, and could not bear the sight of the pen with which he affixed his signature.

$400 Fine for Killing a Rabbit.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The most expensive rabbit in France is the one shot by one of three men recently arrested at Bourg and fined 14,600 francs (approximately $400) for poaching. The high-priced rabbit also emphasized the increasing importance attached to violation of the hunting regulations by the Government. The three men tried to bag bunnies by training their automobile headlights on the game at night. Frightened rabbits, caught in the beam of light, seemed unable to get out of it, and ran back and forth, dazed in the glare of the lamps, until captured or killed.

The moon rocket on which engineers nad savants are the moon in 10 hours, propelled through space at the rate of a little more than six miles a second by a series of powder explosions within.

When the rocket lands the impact is intended to explode a huge chemical bomb, the blaze of which is to be sufficiently brilliant to be observed from the earth.

Way to Stop Dinner Speaker.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—A new sure-fire scheme of red and green lights for stopping after-dinner speakers has been applied effectively in England. When a post-prandial orator has talked four minutes, or his allotted time, a big green electric light glows near the toastmaster's place. After another minute a red light flares. Then the guests, by previous instruction, applaud until the speaker sits down.

VITAMIN-STARVED?

Everybody needs vitamins every day of life, but more so when Nature withholds the health-imparting rays of sunlight.

During the winter a child's diet should be enriched daily with Scott's Emulsion, rich in cod-liver oil vitamins.

Where there is a tendency to rickets, weak bones, unsound teeth, or there is susceptibility to winter ills—the cough and cold, its wealth of vitamin-nourishment is a wonderful help.

If vitamin-starved take Scott's Emulsion. It's cod-liver oil at its best; pure, palatable—easy to take.

QUESTIONNAIRE SHOWS MEN LIKE SLENDER GIRLS

Of 159 Girls, 109 Boys and 109 Married Pairs, Majority Say Health Is Chief Requisite of Marriage.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 11. — What is regarded as normal outlook of the average American on marriage is believed to have been discovered through a survey conducted in Indiana by Dr. Jesse E. Adams of the College of Education, University of Kentucky, in this city.

It was shown by this study that health is the quality desired most by men and women alike in the person whom they expect to wed. Seventy-five per cent of the men likewise want slender wives. It is possible that surveys may be made in other states, but the one in Indiana is regarded as typically American.

Doctor Adams' survey was conducted among an educated group including 159 single girls, 109 single boys and 109 married pairs. Doctor Adams points out that his survey gives a fair indication of the qualities desired in a husband or wife by the average educated group rather than the qualities desired by a group selected at random on the streets of any city.

The medium age of the single man questioned by Doctor Adams was 22 years, at which age, he says, matrimony is being seriously considered and therefore the questions were answered by persons who had given considerable thought to the matter. The girl most desired by these 109 young men is 65 inches tall, with blue eyes, brown hair, fair complexion and slenderly built, weighing 125 pounds and two or three years younger than her husband. She must possess musical interest and in all probability literary interest.

Gentlemen Prefer Slender Girls.

Of the 109 single men questioned, not one wanted a wife more than 70 inches tall or less than 60 inches. One hundred and four men answered the question as to the color eyes they desired their wife to have. Forty-eight want women with blue eyes, 41 brown eyes, 12 dark and two black. The slender girls have it all over their stout sisters when it comes to matrimonial prospects if the answers of the 109 single men questioned can be taken as an indication. Only two out of 109 men want a wife weighing more than 150 pounds. Three want wives weighing between 100 and 109 pounds but the majority like girls weighing between 120 and 129 pounds.

Brown hair is a two-to-one favorite over all other shades. Black hair is second in the list, dark third and light fourth. Only two of the 109 questioned want red-headed girls. It has been believed by many that red hair is gaining in popularity, but from the answers received few men want to marry women with red hair.

Dr. Adams declares that the fact that only two men out of 109 want red-haired girls does not mean that the red-haired girls have a smaller chance to get married than those with brown hair, however, as only two of the girls answering the questionnaires have red hair. In fact, it appears that red-haired women have the best of it as 72 per cent of the girls questioned have brown hair and only 43 per cent of the boys express a preference for brown hair. While only two per cent of the boys want red-haired women only two per cent of the girls have red hair, according to the survey.

Desires Fair Complexions!

More than 90 per cent of the men want women with fair complexions. Eleven want women with a brunette complexion and four like a medium complexion. Not one of the 109 men want women older than themselves, most of them desiring women two years their junior. One of the older men questioned wanted a woman 10 years his junior.

Ninety-eight per cent of the men want women who are interested in music. Other intellectual traits and the percentage of men desiring them are: Literary interest, 81; mechanically inclined, 4; agriculturalinterests, 14; average mentality, 55; above average mentality, 45; scientific interest, 25; public speaking, 42.

One of the most unusual phases of the survey is the fact that what the men want and the typical girl among the 159 questioned are nearly identical. The typical girl, according to the 159 included in the survey, weighs 125 pounds, is 64 inches tall, with blue eyes, brown hair and fair complexion, is slenderly built and has musical and literary interests. Forty-eight per cent of the men want girls with blue eyes and 43 per cent of the girls have blue eyes. There is an oversupply of brown hair, however, as 43 per cent of the men want brown hair and 72 per cent of the girls have brown hair. Only 14 per cent of the girls have light hair and 14 per cent of the men want light hair. There is also a shortage of girls with black and dark hair compared with the expressed desires of the 109 men.

The desired man, according to the wants of the 159 girls questioned, is 69 inches tall, weighs 165 pounds, has brown or blue eyes, brown or black hair, light complexion and slender build, is two years older than the girl and has musical and literary interests. The typical man, according to the answers of the 109 men questioned, is 69 inches tall, weighs 155 pounds, has blue eyes, brown hair, slender build, fair complexion and average mentality.

According to the wants of the girls, a man less than 65 inches in height is about out of the running as far as getting married is concerned. In age the girls apparently like them young as only 11 out of the 159 want a husband who is more than 27 years old. Between 20 and 25 years is the desired age, according to the answers of the girls, with most of them expressing a preference for those nearer 20 than 25. The girls want their husbands to be two or three years older than they are with few exceptions. One of these exceptions is in the case of a woman 40 years old who wants a man 30 years old.

POINCARE CONTROLS DEPUTIES BY MAJORITY OF 200 VOTES

Premier Has Acquired Remarkable Influence in Face of Early Antagonism of Foes.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The "politician tamer" is the title Premier Poincare can now add to his collection. He has been thus called by Deputies because of the skilful way in which he has mastered a hostile majority in the Chamber. When anyone suggested that a certain appropriation in the budget just arranged should be increased, Poincare, in a voice like the crack of a whip, exclaimed: "The Government rejects the proposed amendment and makes it a question of confidence."

Sometimes it never even got to a vote. When it did, Poincare obtained a majority of 200 out of about 575 voting.

The influence which the Premier has acquired over this Parliament "of the lefts" is declared to mark the most complete reversal of political fortune the country has ever seen; not excepting the return to public affairs of Joseph Caillaux, once ordered exiled for treason.

This Parliament was elected in May, 1924, on political issues diagonally opposed to those of the former President of the republic. The Premier was one of the foremost among the men marked for political ostracism by the new majority, yet he has thoroughly conquered his political enemies. He is driving the present Chamber with whip and spur, making the Deputies dance to his own music. And, what is more, they seem to like it.

No Soap On My Face

I clean the pores

By Edna Wallace Hopper

My complexion is the marvel of millions. After my 40 years as a stage star, it is still like a child's.

One reason is a liquid cleanser which I found in France. Lucie Lauteine, the famous Parisian beauty, first showed me its results. Great French scientists explained the reason for them.

This cleanser contains no animal, no vegetable fat. It cannot assimilate in any way with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. All the grime, excess oil, dead skin and clogging matter depart with it.

I never knew what a clean skin meant until I found this cleanser. Now beauty experts the world over advise and use this formula, but they charge too much. Most women could not afford it.

Now I am placing this cleanser within reach of all. All toilet counters supply it as Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth. Price 75 cents per bottle.

Get a bottle today. Let it show you what Facial Youth does for the skin. You will be as delighted as I was to find it. New beauty comes immediately when the face is really cleaned.

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup

Better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this home-made syrup, easy prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and it is splendid for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DEATH RATE FROM TUBERCULOSIS CUT ONE-HALF IN U. S.

This Record Has Been Made Since First Christmas Health Seal Sale Was Held.

IDEA ORIGINATED BY DANISH CLERK

St. Louis Society Gives History of Movement in Appeal for Support for Its Campaign.

Eight years have been added to the span of man's life since the first penny Christmas Health Seal was sold, the research department of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis asserts. Not only is the anti-tuberculosis movement helping to prolong the life of man, but it is making it possible today for children to grow up who 10 years ago would have died, and is building thousands of little underweight boys and girls into strong, sturdy children. Nor is the woman power of the nation forgotten in this crusade for health. Hundreds of self-supporting girls are restored to health at the Night and Day Rest Camp.

Perhaps, however, the greatest immediate accomplishment is the rapid decline of the tuberculosis death rate. Since the first Christmas health seal was sold, the death rate in the United States has been cut one-half. This means that each year 100,000 people in this country fail to die who would have died if the death rate had remained what it was when the Christmas health seal was first issued.

On the Half Way Mark.

"We are on the halfway mark," says the report, "but we cannot stop there. While the disease has dropped from first to fifth place as a cause of death among persons of all ages, it nevertheless remains the chief cause of death among persons from 15 to 35 years of age, the most productive period of life."

The directors of the society met in special session yesterday and prepared the following account of the origin of the seal, according to Dr. Selig Simon, chairman of the educational committee of the society.

In 1905, Einar Hoelbell, then an obscure postal clerk of Denmark, hit upon the idea of selling Christmas stamps to relieve tuberculosis patients. Copenhagen needed a hospital for tuberculosis children, and Einar Hoelbell was daily canceling thousands of postage stamps on holiday greeting cards. Why, so he reasoned, should not this flood of mail sent out in the spirit of "peace on earth, good will to men" do a double service, and carry a needed Christmas gift to the sick. The co-operation of the Danish royal family and of influential officials was enlisted, and out of this came, in 1904, the first tuberculosis Christmas seal sale. So successful was it, that other European countries speedily adopted the idea, and soon Christmas seal sales became an established custom on the continent.

The Seal Reaches America.

In 1907, Jacob Riis, one of America's pioneer social service leaders, received a letter from Denmark, his mother country, on which he noticed one of the little stamps bearing a health message. The American Red Cross, to whose attention the matter was called, immediately recognized the value of the Christmas seal idea, and in 1908, the first national sale of Christmas health seals in this country was held under its direction.

The Red Cross, however, was not primarily interested in organizing tuberculosis work, and so, in 1910, it drew up an agreement with the National Tuberculosis Association for the continuance of the seal sale. The latter was a struggling organization with limited funds and an ambitious program, and the Red Cross, therefore, agreed to give to the undertaking its name, its emblem, and sufficient capital for financing the Christmas seal sale as its share in the partnership.

The National Tuberculosis Association, on the other hand, agreed to organize the sale and direct the expenditure of the funds that would be realized through it. In order to insure the Red Cross against financial loss, the latter was to receive a small percentage of the total contributions. All seal sale money was to be expended only for antituberculosis work to meet local, state and national needs under the direction of the National Tuberculosis Association.

This partnership lasted until 1920, when the Red Cross decided to confine its appeal to the annual Roll Call, begun in the years of the great war. The National Tuberculosis Association had grown into a thriving organization with state and local societies all over the country, and was quite able to conduct the sale without aid, and since 1920 has been sole proprietor of the Christmas seal, and the Red Cross emblem has been supplanted by the crimson double barred cross.

This year's sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals is now well under way in every section of the country.

VON HINDENBURG PRISONER BECAUSE OF HIS GREAT HEIGHT

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—First citizen and yet virtually a prisoner is the fate of President von Hindenburg, who finds himself unable to do so simple a thing as look into a shop window. With the approach of Christmas and Berlin's shops vieing in attractive displays, there is nothing the soldier-President would like to do more than mix among the shopping crowds and gaze at the window exhibits.

Such a diversion is denied him, however, because his mere appearance on foot would mean the stopping of all traffic. An incognito is impossible. His is the privilege enjoyed by King Saul of old of whom the Scriptures say, "When he stood among people, he was higher than any of the people from his shoulders upward."

The President's huge frame, and his striking face cannot be disguised, even from the smallest street urchin. Close friends say he realizes he is paying a stiff price for popularity. Though he has lived in Berlin a year and a half, he has never walked outside the presidential gardens. What little he sees of Berlin is through the windows of his automobile.

Wales Interested in Women's Coats.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Prince of Wales displayed keen interest in a number of beautiful women's fur coats shown at the Empire Products Exhibition. A special mannequin parade was held for him and he engaged one of the most charming mannequins present in conversation. After a few inquiries about the prevailing fashions, he thanked her for her display of dresses.

AUTO INFORMATION

PAGE 8 — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 12, 1926.

GRAVELING UPON ROAD TO ST. CLAIR IS BEING RUSHED

Paving on No. 40 West of Mineola Is Reported Open — Detour at Flint Hill on No. 61.

The Federal highway sign-posting program through St. Louis was completed the past week under supervision of Reyburn Hoffman, City Traffic Engineer, and Matt. F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri. As has been told, the marking of Federal Highway No. 40 and 61, north and south, were completed about 10 days ago. The last highways to be marked are U. S. No. 50 and 66 over the following route: Enter St. Louis via the Free Bridge, west on Chouteau avenue, north on Boyle avenue, west on Clayton avenue through Forest Park, south on McCausland avenue, west on Manchester avenue. These routes are the same as far west as Gray's Summit, where they separate, No. 66 going to Rolla, Springfield and Joplin, and No. 50 going through Jefferson City to Kansas City.

Making No. 66 All-Weather.

Of interest to motorists is the announcement obtained by the Automobile Club of Missouri yesterday from the State Highway Department that rapid progress is being made in preparing the bad stretch on No. 66 at Gray's Summit for all-winter traffic. The section of graded road running west from Gray's Summit is being graveled as far west as the end of the concrete.

Between the end of the graded roadway and the old gravel road to Union and St. Clair, where a 500-foot stretch of new concrete was laid recently, the one-way cinder runabout alongside the new concrete has been replaced by a plank road laid over the slab. This was done because the cinder roadway proved inadequate for traffic.

The concrete mixer which formely obstructed the east end of the newly laid slab has been removed.

Pavement Opened on No. 40

The Highway Department reports that the new pavement on No. 40 (the airline route from St. Louis to Kansas City) over the river bottoms west of Mineola was opened to traffic Friday. The department said that this ends the danger of high water again blocking traffic at that point.

Construction projects on Federal No. 61 (St. Louis to Hannibal) at Flint Hill have necessitated a detour between that point and Moscow Mills. An inspection trip over this highway made yesterday by George E. Drummond, manager of the Touring Department of the Automobile Club, and Sam Rudder, divisional highway engineer, revealed that the detour is narrow in places, but that the Highway Department is bringing it into good condition. The road is graveled and in fair to good condition. Several narrow bridges are encountered and careful driving is necessary at these places as well as at several other points where the roadway is narrow.

Federal No. 61 leaves the concrete of No. 40 a mile west of Gilmore, and from there to Flint Hill No. 61 markers are followed. This stretch is a temporary route, but is in very good condition. Traffic is detoured out of Flint Hill to the right, then angles north to Moscow Mills over the detour. No difficulty should be experienced in traveling this detour in any weather.

SURVEY OF AUTO MARKET IS READY FOR DEALERS

Possibility of 4,000,000 New Motor Car Sales in 1927 to Be Threshed Out.

Is a 4,000,000 car market possible in America? This question will be answered with facts on past performances of the market, put together to present a true picture, by James Dalton, industrial authority, in the annual district meeting of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, at the Commodore Hotel, New York, Jan. 10 and 11, during auto show week.

It is a question that has been raised by statements and predictions of statisticians. The National Automobile Dealers' Association discusses it from a merchandising viewpoint and the possibility of dealer net profit rather than from the possibility of the factories producing that number of cars.

In the last five years, automobile production has been steadily mounting. Year after year, the National Automobile Dealers' Association has been promoting the idea that dealer net profit must be improved in the same degree that factory production is increased. Dalton will discuss economic factors that make this possible or impossible.

NEW MOUNTAIN ROUTE IS OPEN IN CALIFORNIA

Runs Through Sierra Nevada Range Making Another Highway to West Coast.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11.—With the dedication of the new Kern River highway cutting through the highest mountain range in this country, the Sierra Nevada, California has made available to the country's motorists another passageway to the Pacific Coast connecting with several transcontinental trails. With the lowest altitude of any pass through the high Sierras at 5248 feet above sea level, this route is the only artery through the range for 175 miles.

Completion of this road through a rugged river gorge opens a route stretching 205 miles across the State and connecting its three main trunk highways. It also brings closer the long-dreamed-of highway up the 14,500-foot Mount Whitney, highest peak in the United States.

Rivalling the Columbia River highway in scenery the newly completed smooth, wide highway runs through a gap in the mountains and the Kern flows just below the road.

More than three years of work went to cutting this new route through the narrow canyon. Convict labor was employed. In many places drillers had to be lowered over the sides of the granite cliffs to bore holes for blasts. In places the canyon walls were hardly a dozen feet apart.

Unlimited hunting, fishing and outing possibilities, never before reached by automobile, are made available with the opening of the Kern River route.

NEW DEVICE SAID TO MAKE SPARK PLUGS WORK BETTER

A new development is the Lepel converter, a small electrical device, fitting over a spark plug, which is said to eliminate spark-plug troubles. It is said to have proved its value on hundreds of thousands of cars, trucks, tractors, motor cycles and airplanes. It has been adopted after tests as municipal equipment by fire departments, police departments and bus lines.

"The converter keeps the spark plug clean, so that it cannot oxidize," says a statement from the maker of the device. Its immediate effect, however, is to produce a more concentrated and hotter spark. A shower of initial sparks is thrown from the plug points into the combustion chamber instead of a single spark. This enables one to get a more forceful explosion and results in increased power. Faster pickup, lower idling speeds and increased gasoline mileage are among other advantages claimed.

"Lepel converters are easy to attach and will not harm or disarrange the electrical system."

AUTOMOTIVE BOOSTERS TO GIVE YULETIDE PARTY DEC. 18

The St. Louis chapter of the Automotive Boosters' Club, Mississippi Valley No. 14, will entertain friends in the trade at its annual Christmas party on the evening of Dec. 18 at 8 o'clock and a dinner dance at Hotel Chase.

Preparations have been made for 250 guests, members of the Automotive Wholesale Trade Club and their wives.

This Christmas party is an annual event with almost every club in the United States and Canada and is usually participated in by the trade which buys from the members of the Boosters' Club. Since the Boosters' Club is co-operating so closely with the merchandising program of the A. E. A., it means that guests at these affairs are recognized members of the wholesale trade.

Officers of the St. Louis chapter are: J. T. Hughes, president; R. G. Torrance, vice president; J. K. Courim, treasurer; Harry G. Wedler, secretary, and George Andrews, assistant secretary.

REPORT ON ROADS RAMIFYING OUT OF SPRINGFIELD

Conditions on Federal and Main State Routes in Missouri Highway Division No. 8.

The fifth of the surveys of highway divisions of Missouri made by the Automobile Club of Missouri is based on Division No. 8, with headquarters at Springfield. This division includes 11 counties in southwestern Missouri. Nos. 60, 65, 66 and 63 are the Federal highways running through this division. The other highways, 15 in number, are all State routes.

Chief interest in this division, of course, center on No. 66, the St. Louis - Springfield - Joplin route which, in this division, runs from the Crawford County line, 18 miles northeast of Rolla, west through Springfield to Carthage, where Division No. 7 begins.

Condition of No. 66.

The highway is in good condition In Division No. 8 several weeks ago a stretch of concrete west out of Springfield, 70 miles in length, was opened to traffic. There is also a 23-mile stretch of slab on No. 66 between Springfield and Lebanon. The balance of No. 66 in this division is of gravel and semi-gravel.

From the Crawford County line west through Rolla and Waynesville into Lebanon, No. 66 is graveled. From that point to the Webster County line, it is semi-gravel, and thereafter for 23 miles through Marshfield to the Greene County line concrete is traversed. From the Green County line to Springfield the highway is gravel and in good condition. From Springfield to Carthage, the motorist again finds concrete.

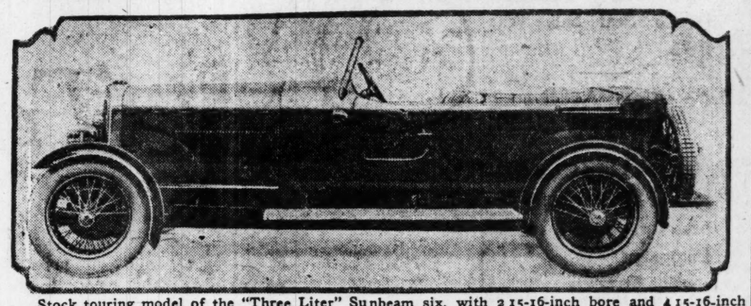
Facts on Speed of European Cars

What Fastest of Stock and "Sports Models" of Standard Makes of Autos Can Do on Road—"Guaranteed" and "Claimed" Performance.



Stock touring model of the "Three Liter" Sunbeam six, with 2 15-16-inch bore and 4 15-16-inch stroke, which has done better than 90 miles per hour on the road.

THE following account of the speedier European motor cars was written for the Post-Dispatch by a well-known British automotive expert who has won a reputation for adherence to facts in his news stories. It covers standard and "sports" models sold to the general public, not special machines similar in type to the Duesenberg and Miler cars that race on the speedways of this country.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 21 (By Mail).—Only three European makers this year definitely guarantee a specified maximum speed for all examples of stock cars. These are the Italian Alfa-Romeo, the British Alvis and the British Vauxhall. In the first two cases the cars carrying the guarantee are known as "sports" models. But several other makes are as speedy, if not actually faster.

The Alfa-Romeo, in fact, is termed a "super-sports" model, which may be taken to imply that it is not far short of a racing chassis with bodywork suitable for use on the road. This Italian car has a small four-passenger open body; its engine is a three liter six (3x 4¼ inches bore and stroke) and it sells in England for $5000. The wheelbase is 123 inches and the track 57 inches. Valves are overhead and twin carburetors are fitted. Guaranteed speed on the level under normal conditions is 85 miles per hour.

Two Fast British Cars.

The Alvis has a four-cylinder 1½ liter engine (2-11-16x4 inches), and a guarantee of 80 miles per hour accompanies the chassis with a two-seated body finished in polished aluminum with a pronounced "tail." This make is also represented by a front wheel drive eight (also 1½ liter) and this model, which is not yet seriously in production, will be guaranteed to do 100 miles per hour with a body similar to that of the other type.

The Vauxhall car with a guaranteed speed is a model known as the 30-98 horsepower. It has a four-cylinder, overhead valve engine developing 120 brake horsepower, the piston displacement being 4¼ liters (90x140 m. m., or approximately 3⅝x5½ inch bore and stroke). A definite guarantee is given that the maximum speed with a four-passenger touring body "will not be less than 80-85 miles per hour," or that with a racing body it will cover a circuit of Brooklands track at 100 miles per hour.

Laps Track at 104 M. P. H.

Practically all these Vauxhall cars are finally tested at Brooklands, and certificates relating to three examples recently finished specify 84, 88 and 85¾ miles per hour respectively with touring bodies, while two with racing bodies had a lap speed of 102½ and 104½. The touring cars gave the speeds mentioned without special adjustment, the tests being merely part of the ordinary routine. Obviously still higher speeds will be obtained when the chassis and engine have been run in.

Although, as stated above, only three European makers actually guarantee a definite maximum speed, there are several others that claim certain speed capabilities for their cars, and it is difficult to distinguish the moral and legal differences between "claiming" and "guaranteeing." In fact, according to the law of some countries (England, for instance) the maker who specifies a given speed in his catalog would be held by the courts to have guaranteed that speed, unless it was clearly stated that the claim implied no guarantee.

The Supercharged Mercedes.

Among cars with "claimed" maximum speeds is the 33-180 h. p. Mercedes sports model, which has a six-cylinder engine of 94x 150 m. m. (approximately 3¾x6 inches) with an overhead camshaft and a supercharger. In the latter respect it resembles the standard model, and the only difference between the sports chassis and that sold for seven-passenger sedans is its shorter wheelbase of 134 inches. This car with a four-passenger open body, having low seats and low sides is claimed in the Mercedes catalogue to have a maximum speed of 100 m. p. h., which equals 3000 r. p. m.

It has been officially timed at Brooklands track to average 95.43 m. p. h. over a kilometer with a "flying" start, that speed being the mean of two runs in opposite directions. In one direction the certified speed was nearly 97 m. p. h. The car weighed 4977 pounds and was run in "touring trim," with two spare wheels and tires, fenders, small windshield and lamps.

Big Renault Has Best Record.

Renault believes that his 45 h. p. six-cylinder (4 5-16x6 5-16 inch) 9 liter car is the fastest stock car in the world, and without actually guaranteeing any definite maximum speed, is prepared to substantiate a claim that this car, according to the type of body fitted, will do 80 to 100 m. p. h. A stock sedan tested at Brooklands last fall averaged 86 m. p. h. and an open sports four-passenger 103 m. p. h., while the normal five-passenger phaeton has been shown to do 90 m. p. h.—timed electrically, not by speedometer.

The 45 h. p. Renault that won the 24 hours' world record in July last on the Montlhery track, near Paris, covered 2591 miles in the period, an average of 108.3 m. p. h. The chassis was a stock job, with three exceptions: It had a larger carburetor than the standard, a higher gear ratio, and a single seated sedan body, variations which account for the 5 m. p. h. or so greater speed than the "sports" four-passenger showed at Brooklands. Moreover, with a 24 hours' run in view, it was not driven "all-out" during the whole of the time and there were several stops for replenishing fuel.

Another car associated with the 24 hours' record, though it has

FIGHT TO RESCIND WAR TAX ON CARS REVIVED BY A. A. A.

Appeal Made to Coolidge for Complete Repeal of Impost as Unjust to Motorists.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—[illegible] renewal by organized car owners of America of the fight for complete repeal of the automotive war excise tax in indicated by reaction of American Automobile Association officials to recent White House statements regarding the tax in question.

The attitude of the national motoring body is set forth in an editorial in the December issue of the American Motorist entitled, "This Is Over, Mr. President!" The [illegible] follows:

"Recent press dispatches represent President Coolidge as taking the position that notwithstanding the surplus in the Treasury, he would not favor, for the present at least, the repeal of the 3 per cent war excise tax on automobiles. . . . we see it the weak link in the administration's position in this respect is that it should favor the continuation of this class levy not primarily because the Government needs the money but, forsooth, because the car owners of the country derive a special advantage from the money expended by the Government on Federal aid.

"It would be difficult to conceive of a more flagrant confusion of ideas and principles than this linking of Federal aid and the automotive excise tax. Federal aid is a national policy, inaugurated in the interest of the nation as a whole and at no time predicated on the advantage it would confer on particular classes. It is almost universally admitted that curtailment

NEW FORD CLOSED CARS COME IN THREE COLORS

Gasoline Vaporizer Standard on All Models and Wire Wheels on Fordors.

Notable improvements have been recently made on Ford cars. There are now color options, standardization of the gasoline vaporizer on all Ford models, and standardization of Ford wire wheels on Fordor sedans. Selection from three colors is now possible when buying coupes, Tudor and Fordor sedans. Choice of two colors may be made when buying touring cars and roadsters.

The three colors for the closed models are: Highland green with cream stripe, fawn gray with cream stripe, and royal maroon with vermillion stripe. Open-car colors are gunmetal blue and Phoenix brown.

All colors will be pyroxylin lacquer applied in two coats with an air brush over primer and glazing coats.

Roadsters assembled with pickup bodies will be painted green. Pickup bodies for service will be black as at present.

Truck cabs, stake and express bodies will all be furnished in commerical green pyroxylin.

Hoods to Match Bodies.

Hoods will be furnished to match bodies. Radiator shells are unchanged, i. e., nickel-plated on closed bodies, black on open bodies.

Branches have been arranging for dealers' drive-aways to leave the branches in groups, whenever possible, thus displaying the new colors on various models until, one by one, the drivers leave the group to proceed to the individual dealers' places of business.

Standard equipment on Fordor sedans now includes Ford "one-piece," drop center wire wheels—one of the strongest wheels ever built.

Since making balloon tires standard equipment on all models, June 19, 1926, the popularity of Ford wire wheels has continued to increase. This wheel is perfectly adapted to balloon tires and considerably improves the appearance of the car.

The standard Fordor equipment will includes five of these wheels, a spare wheel carrier, a special speed wrench for changing wheels, and four balloon tires and tubes, all with no extra charge over the list price of $545, f. o. b. Detroit.

All assembly branches have now received instructions covering the priming and finish painting of these wheels and the cementing in place of the liner with linoleum cement.

Cost of Car Increased.

Instructions for correctly mounting balloon tires on drop center (wire) wheels have been received by all branches. A copy of these instructions will be included in the new service manual now in preparation. Until the manual is printed, folders giving full instructions for mountaing balloon tires will be placed in each Fordor sedan tool kit.

All balloon tires supplied by the company will fit either demountable or drop center rims. Tire beads should be carefully put in the proper place before inflating when mounting balloon tires on wire wheels.

Although standardization of the vaporizer on all Ford models materially increases the cost of the car, experiments and observation with more than 100,000 of these vaporizers convinced the company that the additional cost of adding them to all models was justified by the increase in engine efficiency which accompanied their installation.

Installation of this vaporizer on a gasoline engine produces many strikingly noticeable improvements in the motor's performance.

New Use for Big Bus Chassis

A trend in branch factory operation and medium length hauling of freight is illustrated by the use of a large enclosed van body on a Pierce-Arrow bus chassis by the Brown Shoe Co. This large bus, with 220-inch wheelbase, is capable of touring car speed for long distances and at the same time can carry a very large load.

In fact, "Putsy," as the machine is called, makes daily round trips between St. Louis and the Brown company factory at Charleston, Ill., a distance of 140 miles, leaving Charleston in the morning and delivering a load of shoes here in the early afternoon. The bus can carry 7200 pairs of shoes in a load. Through its use, the shoe company is able to ship shoes from the Charleston plant to its jobbers the same day.

The truck is mounted on pneumatic tires, singles in front and duals on the rear. It is operated for the Brown company by Ben Gutman. The body was built by the Herman Body Co., which has just opened a new plant at 4420 Clayton avenue, St. Louis. This new factory has 30,000 square feet of floor space and 50,000 square feet of paved yard.

Facts About Speed Of European Autos

failed thus far to recover that honor since the latter was wrested from it by the Renault, is the British 3-liter Bentley. This is a stock car known as the "speed model." The chassis that averaged 95 m. p. h. for 24 hours had a four-passenger open body (sports type, of course), and in no way did it differ from the standard production. Subsequently, in attacking the Renault record, it ran for 17½ hours at an averaged speed of 102 m. p. h. Nevertheless the makers refuse to give any definite guarantee as to speed and merely refer inquirers to public performances of the model.

Panhard 8 Very Speedy.

The eight-cylinder Panhard, which has a piston displacement of 6.3 liters (3⅜x5½-inch bore and stroke), has a claimed speed of "over 85 m. p. h." with a seven-seated sedan body; in fact, the British agents guarantee it will attain that maximum and do "over 90 m. p. h." with a five-passenger touring body. This was the chassis model used when Panhard beat the 50 miles world's (European) record in October, averaging 129.6 m. p. h. But it was then fitted with a racing body and its cylinders were bored to a slightly larger diameter than usual, though the same casting was used.

Another Panhard model which the British agents guarantee as to maximum speed is the 28-80 h. p. four-cylinder (4⅛x5½-inch), the speed specified being "over 85 m. p. h." with a four-passenger body. All Panhard cars have sleeve valve engines of the Knight type.

Hispano-Suiza Claims 105 M. P. H.

Without actual guarantee, but by reference to certified performances with stock models of Brooklands track, the British agents for the French Hispano-Suiza cars (Not to be confused with the Spanish cars of the same name) claim 90 m. p. h. for their 37 h. p. model (six cylinders, 3-15-16x5½ inch.) 105 m. p. h. for the sports model 45 h. p. car, the engine of which has a larger bore than the other, viz., 4¼ inches. The body in this case is an extremely comfortable three-seater of the boat-like shape.

Bugatti Said to Show 108 M. P. H.

Bugatti, winner of the world's (European) championship in 1926, specializes in speed models, but will not give a definite guarantee as to speed. His fastest stock car is known as the modified Grand Prix model; it has an eight-cylinder engine of less than 2 liters capacity (2⅝x3½ inch bore and stroke) and when fitted with a "super sports" two-seated body has a claimed speed of 108 m. p. h.

Voisin Four One of Fastest.

One of the dozen fastest stock cars made in Europe is the 18-90 h. p., four-cylinder Voisin (3¾x5½ inches) but its makers give no guarantee as to speed. As a reason for not doing so they say they have found that fast cars get into the hands of owners who, while not expert themselves, expect to get as high a speed out of their cars as the driver who really is expert. It is undoubtedly the case that the maximum speed of any car depends a great deal on the way it is driven, but even those makers who give a guarantee do not undertake that anybody can get the specified speed; they merely guarantee to prove that it can be done by the car sold to any buyer.

Sunbeam Betters 90 M. P. H.

An English car with which the writer has personal experience is the 3-liter Sunbeam. This is a high-efficiency model, and although the makers give no guarantee as to speed, the writer has evidence that it will exceed 90 m. p. h. on the road with four passengers in a comfortable and roomy open body in full touring trim. Its six-cylinder engine has a bore and stroke of 2 15-16x4 15-16 inches (75x110 m. m.).

Two Other Speedy Makes.

Another stock model of British manufacture with a definitely "claimed," as distinct from guaranteed, speed is the new 12-cylinder Daimler, in which John N. Willys has shown such interest as to secure the selling rights in the United States. It has a piston displacement of over 7 liters (3¼x4½ inches, bore and stroke) and its makers state that it will run on high gear at speeds ranging "from 2 to 82 m. p. h."

A speed model with a name that has always been associated with high-efficiency engines is the 19-100 horsepower Austro-Daimler. It has a six-cylinder engine of three liters capacity (3x4 7-16 inch bore and stroke); with a four-passenger open body having fabric panels, a streamline tail providing luggage accommodation, disappearing top and a chassis with a wheelbase of 137 inches. It is claimed to have a road speed of 100 miles per hour.

This car has several unusual features of design. For example, the cylinder block is an all-aluminum casting with steel liners for the pistons; the overhead camshaft as well as the crankshaft is fitted with a torsional vibration damper, the gasoline feed is duplicated, being by both vacuum and pressure, and the oil pressure indicator is electrically operated.

Does 5000 Miles at 73 M. P. H.

Sensational is the word that describes the introduction of the Invicta car, a British make that was unknown to all except a few persons until it did 5000 miles on the Montlhery track in France, at an average speed of 73.8 miles per hour and 10,000 miles at 56.5 miles per hour on two different occasions in 1926. The particular points of note about this performance are that it was driven mainly by a woman, Miss Violet Cordery, who owns the manufacturing plant, that it was an absolutely stock chassis in every detail, and that a touring four-passenger body was used.

Miss Cordery does not sell complete cars, only bare chassis, so gives no guarantee as to maximum speed. But she has demonstrated that a stock chassis with an open four-passenger body weighing 850 pounds with normal equipment will travel 80 miles per hour on the road. This car has a six-cylinder engine of three liters capacity (2⅞ x4¾ inches).

For her 5000-mile run at Montlhery Miss Cordery has been awarded the Dewar trophy by the (British) Royal Automobile Club, which is given annually for the most meritorious performance of the year.

from Cross Timbers through Springfield to the Arkansas line, travels through a picturesque section of the Missouri Ozarks highlands. It meanders along the course of the White River through the Branson-Hollister resort country. Except for a 13-mile slab directly south of Springfield, this highway is of dirt and gravel. The dirt stretches, while well graded and maintained, are slippery when wet. This, with the fact that several large creeks must be forded between Urbana and Springfield, sometimes renders the highway impassable. Along the White River at Branson-Hollister, though narrow and hazardous in bad weather.

Only 45 miles of U. S. No. 60, running east out of Springfield, are found in Division No. 8. For seven miles east from Springfield, the motorist finds this a concrete road, but, thereafter to the Wright County lines, the end of Division No. 8, this highway is graveled.

U. S. No. 63 runs in Division No. 8 from Hawkins Store through St. James and Rolla to the Texas County line. It is either graveled or of dirt in Division No. 8, no concrete being found. From Hawkins Store to St. James the road is dirt. Gravel is found from St. James to the Texas County line, except for an eight-mile dirt stretch from the Texas County line north. This stretch is hazardous in wet weather and travel over it at such times is not recommended.

The main route of No. 63 from Vienna to Rolla is not being used at present because of the lack of a bridge over the Gasconade River north of Rolla. The route given is temporary and is so marked.

The principal State highway in Division No. 8 is No. 5 running from the Camden County line to Lebanon and thence to the Wright County line. Construction work near the Camden County line has resulted in the slowing up of traffic at this point. Construction, however, is being carried on only over a 2.5 mile stretch and the balance of the highway is of gravel and semigravel and in fair to good condition.

Between Dunnegan and Fairplay, on State Highway No. 13, there is a six-mile earth detour which is practically impassable in wet weather. From Collins, the beginning of this highway in Division No. 8, to Dunnegan, a distance of 22 miles, the highway is of gravel and dirt. From Fairplay, the end of the detour, to Springfield, a distance of 43 miles, the highway is gravel in good condition.

Effort to Prevent Mishaps Urged.

Fall and winter being the worst seasons for traffic mishaps, motorists are called upon to exert every precaution against accidents which usually are more serious than at any other time of the year. This is the warning sounded by Matt. F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, in urging car owners to see that no safety device on automobiles are allowed to function inefficiently during the next few months.

KOENIG CO., CHRYSLER DEALER, TO OPEN BRANCH SALESROOM

The Koenig Motor Co., 2631 Lafayette avenue, dealer in Chrysler cars, has leased a building on the northeast corner of Grand boulevard and Potomac street, where it will open a branch salesroom today. This two-story structure, which has 9600 square feet of floor space, formerly was occupied by the South Side Buick Auto Co.

This concern, of which Joseph F. Koenig is president, was the first dealer in Chrysler cars in St. Louis. It was organized 14 years ago, and located in Webster Groves until 1920, when it moved to St. Louis. The company has on display a full line of new Chrysler models, and maintains a complete service station for those cars.

A more generous gift it is impossible to imagine —a beautiful Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan..Will this princely gift be "theirs" on Christmas morning?

A complete catalog of all Sedans of all makes in the luxury group would reveal, in this Great Six Sedan, more features of convenience and control and a greater serving of comfort for women-drivers than could be found in practically any other.

A TRULY fine motor-car—what woman wouldn't thrill at the thought of having it?

What mother, wife, or daughter wouldn't everlastingly be grateful for such magnificent evidence of your Christmas generosity?

The Willys-Knight Great Six is a real Christmas Car, regally luxurious, extraordinarily comfortable, beautiful almost beyond expression.

A very powerful car, very fast, exceedingly active. Modernly engineered, modernly designed. The Willys-Knight Great Six was the first to present the most advanced engineering practices of Europe combined with wholly new and greatly improved American performance standards.

To the American owner, this distinguished automobile brings the same type of power-plant used in the most costly cars made abroad—the French Panhard and Voisin, the Belgian Minerva, the British Daimler-Knight...

This great feature—the Knight sleeve-valve engine is patented, protected, exclusive. It is a feature other manufacturers would pay millions to get. Because it is an engine you'll never wear out. You never have to lay it up for carbon cleaning. It has no valves to grind. It is the only automobile engine in the world that actually improves with use. The only engine that grows quieter, smoother and more powerful with every mile.

Why not decide today to make this the most memorable Christmas those nearest and dearest have ever experienced? The way is clear. On the morning of the 25th, let there be awaiting them at the door a gloriously beautiful Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan.

Willys-Knight Great Six prices from $1750 to $2295. Prices f. o. b. factory and specifications subject to change without notice.

All Willys-Knight Great Sixes now are equipped with silent Belflex shackles—a tremendous engineering advance over the noisy metal shackles of other cars. Belflex stops all chassis rattles and squeaks, deadens road-vibration, completely eliminates the need for chassis lubrication. A noiseless, flexible fabric — shock-absorbing, wear-resisting, rubberized—Belflex now gives permanent chassis silence, diminishing wear at every point of the car.

USED CAR PROBLEMS DISCUSSED BY WEBER

President of Auto Dealers' Association Suggests Ways to Solve Them.

Concerted action among automobile dealers to solve the question: "Why is a used car a losing proposition?" was advocated by George Weber in an address at a meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association at the Claridge Hotel Wednesday.

Weber, who is president of the association, and also head of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., said that shortly after beginning the acceptance of used cars as part payment for new cars, in 1910, the older automobiles were sold at an additional profit. Up to 1919, he recalled, there was a demand for used cars and there was nothing to worry about, because handling them helped net profit considerably. The first losses on used cars came in 1920 and since then have been the chief cause of failures of automobile dealers, Weber declared.

Cites Causes of Losses.

Causes of such losses he pointed out as follows: Deliberate overallowance for a used car by a dealer to deprive a competitor of a sale; misjudging the value of a used car and the expense of reconditioning and repairs before it is sold; misjudging the credit of a buyer, which often results in repossession of a car; making selling terms too easy and accepting a used car as first payment instead of requiring part cash; trading in more used cars than the market can absorb and keeping them on hand more than 90 days.

Remedies that Weber suggested were: Each automobile dealer should decide on a fixed policy on used cars and carry it out; dealers should not trade for more used cars than the market can absorb; salesmen should be instructed to sell new cars on their merits and not on allowances for used cars; amount of allowance should be limited to a maximum; overallowance to sell an obsolete model should never be made.

Urges Educating the Buyer.

Weber advised the dealers to get the buyer to think rightly along the same lines as they do, to gain more trade in the eight good months of the year, and then not worry about the four lean ones. Referring to the large amount of money represented in the automobile industry, he said, "It is no credit to dealers, unless they make a profit."

He expressed the hope that the loss on used cars would be eliminated, and that later sales would bring enough gain to carry the overhead expense and subsequently make a net profit for dealers.

The meeting adjourned until next Wednesday when the second of a series of six sessions will be held to listen to a talk on this problem.

Whippet Climbs High Mountain

Lawton and Ed Hughes above the snow line with the Overland Whippet in which they climbed from the lowest accessible point in America to the highest point ever reached by a motor car on the Pacific slope. The Whippet climbed from 284 feet below sea level to an attitude of 13,150 feet. The air-line distance from the lowest point in Death Valley to the point reached by the Whippet is 150 miles, but it was necessary to drive 250 miles to reach the peak.

JOINT SESSION OF AUTOMOBILE MEN

The first joint meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association and the Automtoive Accessories Association, held recently at the City Club, was attended by 792 executives and salesmen. The meeting was opened by Robert E. Lee, who introduced Lynn M. Shaw, assistant general manager of the National Automobile Association, as chairman.

George Weber, as president of the dealers' organization, in a brief talk brought a message of optimism for this winter, the hardest time of the year for automobile sales. He also expressed hope for a 12 months' selling season for motor cars and predicted better automobile conditions next year than in 1926.

G. H. Ford of the National Automobile Association urged dealers to create reserve funds for possible depression and to establish credit with local bankers to finance their own paper after selling cars on the deferred-payment plan. He showed that by this method dealers might make additional profits by borrowing money at the same rates finance companies pay. He also suggested that dealers keep a strict account of their business to satisfy bankers that they are financially sound.

Henry Kirkland of the Automotive Equipment Association showed how dealers might make additional profits by selling automobile accessories and equipment and operating up-to-date service stations in connection with their regular business.

FIGHT TO RESCIND WAR TAX ON CARS REVIVED BY A. A. A.

of it until the Federal aid system is completed, would be nothing short of a national disaster, but there is no connection whatever between this proposition and the excise tax placed on motor vehicles as an emergency war measure, and part of which is still in effect eight years after the conclusion of the war and several years after the war tax on every other type of transportation has been repealed.

"This exception is singular enough in itself but it is by no means the most important factor in the case for the repeal of the automotive excise tax. Let us concede that a very real advantage does accrue to the car owners from the construction of the roads and from the aid given by the Government. The administration apparently takes the position that the car owners should pay for this special advantage and that the excise tax is a convenient way of making them pay. The answer to all this is that they have already paid in full. To realize the lack of potency in this "special advantage" argument it is only necessary to point out that up to June 30, 1926, the car owners paid into the Treasury in war excise taxes more money than the Government will expend up to and including 1930, the year tentatively designated for the completion of the initial construction on the Federal aid system.

"Taxes paid by car owners up to June 30, 1926—$1,100,865,983.

Total of Federal aid expeditures up to June 30, 1926—$499,200,535.

"Total Federal aid authorized up to June 30, 1929—$840,000,000.

"At the moment, therefore, motorists have a balance of $600,000,000 to their credit in the Treasury. If the excise tax were to be forthwith repealed and payments to the Government on account of it stopped on Jan. 1, 1927, the car owners would still have a balance of $100,000,000 in the Treasury on June 30, 1930. They have paid their way. Think it over, Mr. President, for here is a case where there is a very apparent need for further review of the premises."

ROAD BONDS SOUGHT FOR RANDOLPH COUNTY

Program to Spend $750,000 Building State Highways and Laterals.

At a meeting of members of the Randolph County Chamber of Commerce, held at Moberly, Mo., Thursday, a petition to the Randolph County Court was drafted requesting the calling of a special election to vote on a proposal for a county bond issue of $500,000 to complete the State highway system in Randolph County and $250,000 to construct four lateral county roads.

The prime motive for the $500,000 bond issue for State highways is the desire of the Chamber of Commerce to have completed that part of State highway No. 10 which runs through Randolph County. This highway will be designated as Federal highway No. 24, and will be a trunk highway between Pontiac, Mich., and Kansas City.

Louis M. McCabe, manager of the Moberly division of the Automobile Club of Missouri, presided as chairman of the meeting. McCabe, who is a fervent good roads advocate, was a leader in the bond issue movement.

John Malang, director of the Good Roads Bureau of the Automobile Club of Missouri, and Matt F. Morse, general manager of the club, spoke in favor of the bond issue, stressing the fact that such a bond issue would assure early completion of the highways in Randolph County and would not be a burden on the county taxpayers, as the State must reimburse every county which finances State road construction before the State Highway Department construction schedule permits of such road building.

STUDEBAKER GIVES GEM CASE WITH KEYS TO YULETIDE CAR

Another plan for Christmas giving is sponsored by the Studebaker Corporation, according to the Weber Motor Car Co., distributer.

The head of a family buys a new Studebaker automobile to give to his wife, daughter or entire family for Christmas. He arranges to have the car delivered at his home on Christmas morning. Then he is given a jewel case, in which are the two keys to the automobile he purchased. On Christmas morning the receiver of the car will find the box and outside the house the new Studebaker will be parked at the curb or in the driveway.

This Christmas giving plan is said to have practical advantages. In the first place, an automobile is a lasting gift, because it stretches Christmas out over the year. It also is a gift that the entire family enjoys and shares.

The placing in operation of a program to make the Missouri Ozarks a great summer resort is the stated purpose of the convention.

SPEAKS BEFORE DEALERS

At a recent meeting of the Automobile Dealers' Association at Mount Vernon, Ill., R. E. Tyler, sales promotion manager of the De Luxe Automobile Co., St. Louis, spoke on "The Need of Trained Salesmen." Tyler said that the day of the back-slapping, story-telling, cigar-passing automobile salesmen was gone, and that keener competition and increased production called for trained salesmen to merchandise automobiles today. R. E. Davis, chairman of the dealers' association, presided at the meeting.

4419 RETAIL DELIVERIES OF NEW DODGE UNITS IN A WEEK

Retail deliveries of 4419 new motor cars and trucks by Dodge Brothers dealers in the United States and Canada in the week ending Nov. 27 exceeded all previous weekly records established in the last quarter of any year. Compared with the previous week this year, the gain was 37 per cent and, compared with the corresponding week of 1925, when 2595 cars were sold, the gain was 70 per cent.

Deliveries in the four weeks of November totaled 14,676 units, a substantial increase over the preceding four weeks of October and a gain of 3854 units over the corresponding four weeks of November, 1925, or 35 per cent.

Production of motor cars and trucks in the United States and Canada in the first ten months of 1926 was 4,026,879, compared with 3,638,159 in the corresponding months of 1925, a gain of over 10 per cent. From Jan. 1 to Nov. 1, this year, Dodge Brothers produced and sold 308,641 motor vehicles, against 226,848 in the same period last year, a gain of 36 per cent. Comparing progress over a longer period, Dodge Brothers' gain over the first ten months of 1923 was 109.9 per cent; that of the industry, 16 per cent.

More Value than the Price Suggests

In the year just drawing to a close the price of Dodge Brothers Motor Cars was materially lowered.

Yet during this period more important improvements were incorporated than in any year in Dodge Brothers history. Advances were made in engineering and body designs. The cars possess a greater degree of smoothness, silence and ease. They are more comfortable, more beautiful.

Current prices—made possible, of course, by constantly mounting sales—are therefore not an obvious measure of value. Prices, in fact, have never told the full story of Dodge Brothers dependability and basic worth.

But now, more than ever before, there is far more value than the price suggests

MOTOR FUEL CAN BE OBTAINED FROM COAL

Four Methods to Convert It Into Gasoline or Substitutes Described.

Although the petroleum resources of the United States are not in imminent danger of exhaustion, almost inexhaustible supplies of motor fuel can be made from coal. A voluminous report by a committee of 11 members of the Board of the American Petroleum Institute published last spring estimates that 5,000,000,000 barrels of petroleum in fields that are known is available by present flowing and pumping methods and that 25,000,000,000 barrels will be left in the ground in these fields after the 5,000,000,000 barrels has been removed. Probably a large proportion of the oil left in the ground will become available in the future by the development of improved methods for mining the oil sands.

In addition to these large resources, the committee estimated that 545,000,000,000 barrels of petroleum substitutes can be obtained by processing bituminous and sub-bituminous coal.

Four known methods of converting coal into gasoline or substitutes for gasoline are described in the November issue of the Journal of the Society of Automotive Engineers by A. C. Fieldner, chief chemist of the U. S. Bureau of Mines. A standard method now in use is the high-temperature carbonization of coal in by-product coke ovens or gas retorts. By this method from two to three gallons of motor benzol is obtained from each ton of coal. This benzol has high antiknock properties and is usually blended with gasoline.

A second method is the low-temperature carbonization of coal. This is not yet a commercial process but is under experimental investigation on a large scale and gives a larger yield of crude petroleum substitute and similar yields of light oil suitable for motor vehicles.

One ton of petroleum-like liquid fuel can be obtained from two or three tons of coal by the Bergius process of hydrogenation, which consists in mixing pulverized coal with oil or coal tar into a thick paste, pumping this under high pressure into a steel retort containing hydrogen, and heating it to from 750 to 800 degrees Fahrenheit.

The fourth method embraces synthesizing processes of making alcohols and mixtures of alcohols and hydrocarbons from coal gases. Wood alcohol or methanol is made by one such process in Germany at a cost of from 15 to 20 cents per gallon. This alcohol is produced by introducing two volumes of hydrogen and one volume of carbon monoxide gas in a pressure tube and heating them to about 800 degrees under a pressure of from 150 to 250 atmospheres in the presence of a catalyst said to be zinc oxide. The two gases are produced by treating burning coal with steam. A water gas machine of 1,000,000 cubic feet capacity per day should make about 2500 gallons of methanol, equivalent to from 1250 to 1500 gallons of gasoline.

Methanol, however, will not blend with gasoline. A similar process using a different catalyst produces "synthol," which is similar to gasoline and will blend with both benzol and alcohol, so that the blend can be used in existing automotive engines.

Wood alcohol or methanol is made by one such process in Germany at a cost of from 15 to 20 cents per gallon. This alcohol is produced by introducing two volumes of hydrogen and one volume of carbon monoxide gas in a pressure tube and heating them to about 800 degrees under a pressure of from 150 to 250 atmospheres in the presence of a catalyst said to be zinc oxide. The two gases are produced by treating burning coal with steam. A water gas machine of 1,000,000 cubic feet capacity per day should make about 2500 gallons of methanol, equivalent to from 1250 to 1500 gallons of gasoline.

Methanol, however, will not blend with gasoline. A similar process using a different catalyst produces "synthol," which is similar to gasoline and will blend with both benzol and alcohol, so that the blend can be used in existing automotive engines.

New Ford Gasoline Vaporizer

Primary air, entering at A, is heated by passing through tube B. The air then picks up a charge of gasoline from the carburetor, carries it over hot plate C which thoroughly vaporizes the gasoline. This vapor is then picked up by the secondary cold air current at intake valve E and drawn into the intake manifold F from where it goes to the cylinders.

WILLYS-OVERLAND ADDS 1423 MEN TO ITS FACTORY FORCE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 11.—A statement given out by John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., today says that the factory force has been increased by 1423 men in the last three weeks.

Coming at the start of the winter season, this bears out the statement by Willys-Overland officials, that production plans for the coming year contemplate the largest output in the history of the organization.

Heavy production is under way of the Whippet. Willys-Overland products cover 95 per cent of the motor car price range.

Since 1922, Willys-Overland has increased its output of Willys-Knight cars 13 per cent, while the increase in the motor car industry as a whole has been 60 per cent, giving the Willys-Knight division a rating 78 per cent better than the industry as a whole.

In the Overland division the increase up to the introduction of the Whippet was 98 per cent, or 38 per cent better than all the industry.

GASOLINE VAPORIZER STANDARD ON ALL NEW FORD AUTOMOBILES

line—even the low gravity variety—much quicker than does the ordinary carburetor. This means less choking when starting.

The gas is also much more thoroughly vaporized by the hot-plate method. This permits more thorough combustion, greater power, greater speed, and greater economy of operation. Also, since the combustion is more complete, less dilution of the crankcase lubricant takes place, with a substantial saving of lubricant.

More thorough vaporization permits more even distribution of gas to the cylinders, which causes the engine to run smoother and to throttle down to a much slower speed—both while driving in city traffic and idling.

Complete vaporization, permitting no excess gasoline to enter the cylinders, as stated, further reduces the tendency of the heavy ends of the gasoline to carbonize. This effect is heightened by minimizing the necessity for using the engine choke.

While the effect of the vaporizer is most noticeable when low-grade gasoline is burned, the increased power from benzol and high-test gasoline is immediately apparent. Mileage is increased between three and four miles to the gallon of fuel.

PACKARD CARS COME IN WIDE VARIETY OF COLORS

The opportunity of unlimited choice of colors for Packard eight cars has been in effect more than three years. Literally thousands of color and upholstery combinations have been delivered. With the Packard six there is a wide choice of colors available to meet the increasing demand for light and gay effects.

Packard sixes with the new color combinations are being displayed now in many parts of the country. The paint schemes adopted were the selection of artists in such work and give a wide variety from which to choose.

Some of the colors now used in painting Packard sixes are: Black, old ivory, Packard blue, gold, Morocco maroon, Sheffield green, Bakst green, Pistach green, sage brush green deep, pigskin brown light, derby red light, Algerian blue, flake white, Bamballina blue, Ching blue, fawn gray, Ambato green, chickade green, drake green, copra drab, chicle drab, platinum, thrush brown, coot brown, oriole red, moleskin deep, beige brown light, cream color, light, Killarney gray, Dundee gray, helldiver gray, partridge drab, tanager scarlet, raven black and woodpecker red.

With its introduction more than three years ago unlimited choice of colors for the Packard eight has been possible. The Packard Co. announced that it would paint any eight with any kind of a color scheme that might be conceived.

NEW MOTOR OIL KNOWN AS ISO-VIS PLACED ON MARKET

Means Constant Viscosity of Lubricant in Crankcase, Standard Company Declares.

Constant viscosity of oil in the crankcase, with no dead batteries, scored cylinders and damaged bearings on zero mornings from "frozen" oil before the engine warms or from thinned oil after it heats up, is the discovery announced by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana in placing on the market a new line of motor oils to be known as Iso-Vis.

The new oil is unique in a literal sense, for although it is a petroleum product it bears no relationship to any other motor oils now on the market. Its preparation is based on what is known in the chemical-engineering world as the "theory of equilibrium dilution"—never until now applied to the practical manufacture of motor lubricants.

The practicability of such application after three years of intensive research was first reported by Standard Oil scientists to the Society of Automotive Engineers at their annual meeting last winter, and published in the February number of that association's journal; but not until now have its many possibilities been revealed to the layman and the motorist. For a year following its laboratory development, the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana has subjected it to a practical test by making use of the new oil in the company's great fleet of trucks and salesmen's cars.

Since the invention of the automobile, virtually all the well-known oils had all the qualities that go into making of a good motor oil, and there was not one but that possessed the supreme fault of being subject to dilution by the heavy "ends" of gasoline, particularly in winter.

The application of the "theory of equilibrium dilution" overcomes this supreme fault of all motor oils. Stripped of scientific verbiage it means this:

Oil in the crankcase can be diluted only up to a certain point. In the first 150 to 200 miles of operation, the ordinary oil under average operating conditions picks up about 15 per cent of diluent. After that, while the diluent still continues to enter the crankcase, it is driven off by the heat of the engine. But an oil that has accumulated 16 per cent of diluent has thereby lost two-thirds of its viscosity and if the oil was light or medium to begin with, it has been thinned to the danger point. If, in the beginning, it was a heavy oil, after it had acquired the 16 per cent of diluent it gave perfect lubrication, but during the 150 to 200 miles it took to acquire that diluent, it was too stiff for cold weather operation, and dead batteries, scored cylinders and damaged bearings were often the result.

MOON CO. BUILDING ANNEX TO ITS FINAL TEST DIVISION

The Moon Motor Car Co. has begun the erection of a large building as an annex to its final test division. The large increase in drive-out business in the last six months has necessitated this expansion, according to officials. With the new facilities, a greater number of dealers will be able to save freight charges by driving their cars from the factory.

The building will be at Second and Douglas streets and is being erected under supervision of Louis Nicolay, maintenance engineer of the company. It will be 150 feet long and 50 feet wide, and will be of the latest Monitor type construction. All Moon and Diana cars will be given the final inspection in the new building. The enlarged final test division will be under the supervision of Paul Henrie.

CHEVROLET RETAIL SALES IN NOVEMBER TOTAL 73,474

The November sales contest held by the Chevrolet Motor Co. throughout this country resulted in the sale of 73,474 cars and trucks at retail during the month. This total has been exceeded in only one month—last May, when 74,968 Chevrolet cars and trucks were sold.

NEW $1000 6-CYLINDER CAR NAMED FALCON-KNIGHT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—The name of the company recently organized in Detroit to manufacture a Knight motored six-cylinder passenger car is to be the Falcon Motors Corp. The car will be named the Falcon-Knight. It is said that the price of closed models will be around $1000.

The president of the new organization will be John A. Nichols, who, for 10 years was associated with Dodge Bros., and for a number of years prior to his resignation a few months ago, was vice-president. John N. Willys is financially supporting the corporation.

NEW GABRIEL SNUBBER

The Gabriel Snubber Co. has perfected an entirely new and more efficient snubber for low-pressure tires and more flexible springs. It involves positive mechanical means to prevent preloading springs. Pre-loading means tying down the car springs in a manner that restrains their action during certain limits of movement when they should be free and unhampered.

With the new Gabriel snubber this effect of pre-loading is impossible, it is said.

CHEVROLET SALES CHIEF NAMES A. W. L. GILPIN AS AID

In preparation for what promises to be another record year for the Chevrolet Motor Co., R. H. Grant, general sales manager, announces appointment of A. W. L. Gilpin as an assistant general sales manager.

Gilpin will work with C. E. Dawson and H. J. Klingler, present assistant general sales managers, in directing Chevrolet sales. Each of the three will have charge of two of the six regions into which this country is divided. Gilpin assumes charge of the Chicago and Cincinnati regions, Dawson of the Flint and Tarrytown regions and Klingler of the St. Louis and Oakland, Cal., regions.

TROPICAL SETTING FOR NEW YORK SHOW

Decorations to Be South American — Persian Effect for Chicago Exposition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—For the New York Automobile Show, in Grand Central Palace, from Jan. 8 to 15, a South American background has been selected. The decorations will begin in the lobby, which will be hung with draperies, the flags of South American countries, paintings and flowers. As a central piece at the entrance there will be a large painting, on which a well-known artist is now at work, depicting the friendship of the two Americas, and this will be flanked by two paintings, showing the advance in transportation through the ages and the improvement in standards of living brought about by the automobile.

For each of the four floors of the Palace there will be backgrounds showing scenes in the countries south of the equator. The many columns on each floor will be covered with Spanish gold cloth and from their tops will hang clusters of tropical flowers. All the colors will be warm and cheerful.

The floors will be covered with linoleum in imitation of red terra cotta tile. The space to be covered will require 30 carloads of this material.

For the Coliseum show in Chicago, from Jan. 29 to Feb. 5, a Persian setting has been selected.

NATIONAL REFINING CO. CONVENTION HELD HERE

For the third consecutive year, the National Refining Co. of Cleveland has brought its district sales managers from all parts of the United States to St. Louis for their annual sales conference. There were over 50 men in the convention at the Chase Hotel the past week.

W. E. MacEwen, vice president and general manager of the company, said: "We selected St. Louis rather than our home city, Cleveland, for our sales meetings again this year, because of its central location. Again we seem to get a little closer touch with our actual problems away from the home office. St. Louis, where we have large growing properties and extensive business, seems to be so ideal that we have about made up our minds to make it a permanent meeting place."

"Managers are optimistic for 1927," he said. "The National Refining Co. has just passed through the largest year in its history—particularly large increases in sales of White Rose gasoline and En-Ar-Co motor oil. Every refinery is working on full capacity."

The meeting was closed yesterday with an address by J. C. Fratter, president of the company, and Charles Smith, secretary.

ROADSTERS WIN FAVOR FROM YOUNGER SET, SAYS JORDAN

The younger generation has changed the motoring habits of the nation, according to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Co.

"Before the Armistice was signed in 1918 the market for sport models and roadsters was very limited," he says.

"But when 2,000,000 boys came back to 2,000,000 girls, there was an immediate increase in the sale of roadsters and good-looking open cars of all makes and prices.

"They all wanted to get as far away as possible from the conventional—and that is what started the roadster craze in this country.

"Go to any big football game, anywhere in the United States, and count the roadsters. They drive them because their parents drive closed cars. They drive them with the tops down. They put an extra couple in the rumble seat—and get a thrill out of it.

"Ask any group of normal boys or girls between 18 and 25 what sort of a car they'd buy and you'll find the roadster a three-to-one favorite at any time of the year and in any part of the country.

"The younger generation has upset a lot of the conventions, which is probably a good thing for all of us, but who would have thought that they would prefer coonskin coats and no tops in the winter to the luxury of the conventional enclosed models?"

Expansion Program Under Way by Olds Motor Works

This Provides for a Daily Output of 500 Cars, Which Will Require One-third Increase in Production Facilities.

Plant expansion that will increase Oldsmobile production facilities by one-third is now being made by Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Mich., according to word received by Philip H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe Automobile Co., Olds distributer in the St. Louis district.

This expansion program is being made along conservative lines, actuated by the demands of the Oldsmobile dealer organization for more cars. During last year retail orders were received in greater numbers than the manufacturing facilities of the factory could produce cars when operating at peak capacity, Brockman was informed.

"For the last two years Oldsmobile has held strictly to a policy pledged to progress," said I. J. Reuter, president of Olds Motor Works. "This policy requires meeting consumer demand for quantity as well as quality. Our expansion plans have been made to meet this demand, which represents the annual increase in public preference enjoyed by Oldsmobile. This expansion provides for a daily production of 500 Oldsmobiles.

"The expansion involves both the addition of building space and increased equipment to the large plant already including approximately 2,000,000 square feet of space located on a 74-acre tract of land.

"An additional building is being added to the heat-treating plant that will double the capacity of that part of the Oldsmobile factory. This building will be equipped with the largest type of automatic and continuous running heat-treat furnaces, together with the other equipment. In this department cam shafts, axles, drive shafts and many other vital parts of an Oldsmobile are heat-treated to increase strength and wearing qualities.

"The chassis assembly line facilities are being virtually doubled to provide for the assembly of the greater output of the other departments. New and additional machinery will be installed in the axle, motor, sheet metal and other plants to increase their production capacity. Body building facilities also are being materially increased.

"During the first eight months of 1926—the latest complete figures available—the sale of Oldsmobiles increased 70.6 per cent over the same period last year, which was the best sales year in Oldsmobile's 29 years in the automotive industry. These figures are taken from actual new car registrations.

"The published gain for the entire automobile industry during the same period was 14.75 per cent, less than one-fifth of the increase achieved by Oldsmobile. These consistent gains being made by Oldsmobile have necessitated the expansion program now under way."

SNOW ON U. S. ROADS COSTLY, A. A. A. SHOWS

Estimate That 36 States Could Save $100,000,000 Yearly by Thorough Removal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — The 36 states in the snow belt will save millions of dollars this winter, if they keep the main arteries of vehicular travel open and clear of snow, says a statement by the American Automobile Association, of which the Automobile Club of Missouri is the local representative.

Basing its estimates on expansion of snow removal in former winters, the A. A. A. calculated that approximately 116,000 miles of highway in the nation would be kept free of snow this year. Last year, the total was 93,000 miles. The yearly increase is approximately 25 per cent.

The cost of clearing these 93,000 miles was estimated as $3,575,663. The A. A. A. figures that every $100 spent in snow removal yields $1000 in more efficient transportation and business continuity. On the basis of these figures, the communities which keep their streets and highways clear this year will spend approximately $4,450,000 from which they will reap an economic benefit of $40,000,000, it declares.

"These figures are not far wide of the mark," said the A. A. A. statement, "and they demonstrate the great value of snow removal to commerce alone. Thirty-five of the 36 states in the snow belt remove snow, but many of them fall far short of adequate removal. There are more than 300,000 miles of surfaced rural highways in these states, yet snow will be cleared from not more than a third of this mileage. If the saving for a third is $40,000,000, obviously it would be somewhere near $120,000,000 for the entire area. If snow removal was thorough, the saving would be even greater."

NEW MICHELIN TIRE INCLUDES RIM, CASING AND INNER TUBE

A new type of automobile tire, under the name "Bibendum Comfort," comprising in the unit rim, casing and inner tube, has been placed on the French market by Michelin. The rim is one piece and flat, except opposite the valve opening, where a narrow channel is provided. The tube is of the usual type except that the valve bends outward for accessibility. The casing has a new gripping design and is prevented from stretching by internal steel cables where it fits into the rim.

When the tire is deflated a thick pad normally under the tube can be pushed out of the rim groove and the casing pushed into it, thereby freeing the opposite side. When inflated the pad on the inner trube fits into the groove. An ear screw holds the valve in place so that even if the tube be punctured it is impossible for the casing to be removed or fall off.

CONVICTS CAUGHT WHEN FAST CAR IS BORROWED BY POLICE

Ohio motorists got unscheduled thrills recently when 13 convicts clubbed and shot their way from a State penitentiary.

Several drivers, proczeeding leisurely down a quiet country road, turned out in a hurry for the roaring, high-powered car that flashed past with its load of desperadoes. Hot on the trail of the escaping criminals came three motor cyclemen of the Ohio State police.

Not far from Columbus the motor cycles of two of the State troopers began to sputter and die. Corporal Harry Kimmel, directing the chase, went on alone after 13 armed men. Half a mile farther, Kimmel's machine stuck.

It began to look as if the convicts would go clear. But Trooper Tiller, who had commandeered a passing auto, stopped to pick up his superior and the chase was resumed.

"Our commandeered machine held out for 15 miles before it burned out, Kimmel said. "Then we were picked up by a Buick. We kept up a speed of about 70 miles an hour until we got within a mile of the escaping men, when they got across in front of a freight train which held us up. About a mile farther on the road crosses the tracks again. I got out on the running board and waved my hat at the engineer, who stopped his train, and we went through. We got within 200 feet of the convicts' car and again started to exchange shots with them, when we saw the Madison County officers, car in the road ahead of us. The convicts sideswiped it and went into the ditch.

"All but one of the convicts started to run across country, with myself, Tiller and Hulls in chase, both parties firing as they ran. Finally they dropped to the ground and we closed in, disarming them without trouble."

BECOMES CHIEF SALES EXECUTIVE OF BUICK FACTORY

C. W. CHURCHILL.

CHURCHILL MADE BUICK'S GENERAL SALES MANAG

E. T. Strong, president and general manager of the Buick Motor Co., has announced appointment of C. W. Churchill as general sales manager. Strong recently vacated this office to assume the presidency of Buick.

"The vacancy in the sales manager's office created by my recent appointment makes a nominal readjustment necessary," Strong said. "C. W. Churchill becomes general sales manager by virtue of his thorough familiarity with the office, gained through his work as director of sales in the past five years."

C. W. Churchill was born in Detroit in 1880. He entered the automobile field as assistant manager of the Cleveland branch of the Winton company. Two years later he was made manager of its New York branch. In 1908 he was recalled to Cleveland as general sales manager. In 1915 he became Winton's general manager.

He joined the Buick Motor Co. in 1921 as director of sales.

During this time he was in charge of car distribution, field operations and many other matters intimately connected with management of the sales department.

Anti-Froster for Windshields.

A safety device for automobiles is being used by motorists who drive in stormy weather. It is known as an antifroster and consists of transparent pyralin sheeting, which is attached to the windshield by means of vacuum cups. It is claimed that this device will prevent the accumulation of frost or moisture on the windshield.

FIRST ROAD BUILDER IN U. S. IN LONELY GRAVE

Solomon Jones Is Buried 4000 Feet Up on Summit of Mount Hebron, N. C.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C., Dec. 11.—Four thousand feet up on the summit of Mount Hebron, overlooking the thriving little city of Hendersonville, is the tomb of Solomon Jones, recognized as probably America's first professional builder of scenic roads.

The mountain peak tomb is reached by what is declared to be the first scenic highway ever built in the South. That was about 50 years ago. Solomon Jones, however, blazed trails and built roads in the Blue Ridge country of Western North Carolina as far back as 100 years, or shortly following the war of 1812, when he still was in his 'teens.

Today many of these trails and wagon paths have been converted into ribbons of concrete stretching for miles in all directions.

Tradition has it that Solomon Jones when about to blaze a new trail, turned out his razor-backed sow, Sue, whose tail he gripped with his left hand while with his right hand he swung a hand ax as he followed the pet porker over the mountains. Regardless of the veracity of this legend, the low grades and natural gaps of the old trails and roads of Solomon Jones have amazed civil engineers and surveyors who have traversed them.

Among the many other roads built in this section by Solomon Jones is Jones' Gap, named for him, which leads to Caesar's Head. This was constructed long before the Civil War and, for more than 60 years, was used by Jones and his heirs as a toll road.

Solomon Jones was aptly termed "The Grand Old Man of the Mountains." He stood six feet two inches in height and weighed 200 pounds. With long, flowing white hair he indeed possessed the bearing of a patriarch. He was the father of 12 children, 10 sons and two daughters, and brought up seven other orphan children left to his care. He was 97 years old when he died. Some time before his death, however, the tomb at the top of Mt. Hebron was completed—even to the epitaph- which had been engraved, except the date of death, by James Blythe, the first printer to settle in the Blue Ridge and a long-time friend of the roadmaker.

MAPS AND TOUR BOOKS ISSUED BY A. A. A. MAY BE STANDARD

Standardization of maps, tour books and strip maps issued by the American Automobile Association is expected to result from the decision of the National Conference of Touring Bureau Managers of automobile clubs affiliated with the A. A. A., held last week in Columbus, O., that differences in maps and tour books issued by A. A. A. clubs leads to confusion of tourists traversing several states.

The conference also created a Bureau of Complaints on touring information given out by A. A. A. Club Touring Bureaus. These bureaus will be operated as part of the National Touring Board, with offices at Washington, D. C.

The conference also perfected plans to create club zones for collecting data, keeping information authentic and up-to-date. The automobile clubs in the various zones will be required at regular intervals to forward to A. A. A. headquarters detailed reports on touring information, road building and reconstruction, local authorized service appointments and other club activities.

Matt F. Morse, general manager of the Automobile Club of Missouri, and George E. Drummond, manager of the touring department, represented the organization at the meeting.

CHEVROLET SPENDS $500,000 YEARLY ON SERVICE COURSES

The Chevrolet Motor Co., through one of its service department divisions, is expending over $500,000 a year on a service promotional program. This consists of aiding its dealer organizations in improving its shop methods and equipment as well as its personnel, in order to give Chevrolet owners better and more efficient service.

Service promotion deals with the efficient layout, equipping, and operating of the dealer's service station. It offers a standardized plan of shop layout, making available special Chevrolet tool equipment, and provides assistance to the dealer organization in properly installing these methods. The flat rate method of charging for repair work is suggested in this plan as it insures an equitable charge for both the owner and the dealer.

Training of the dealer's personnel is taken care of by operation of 22 permanently located service schools in different parts of the United States.

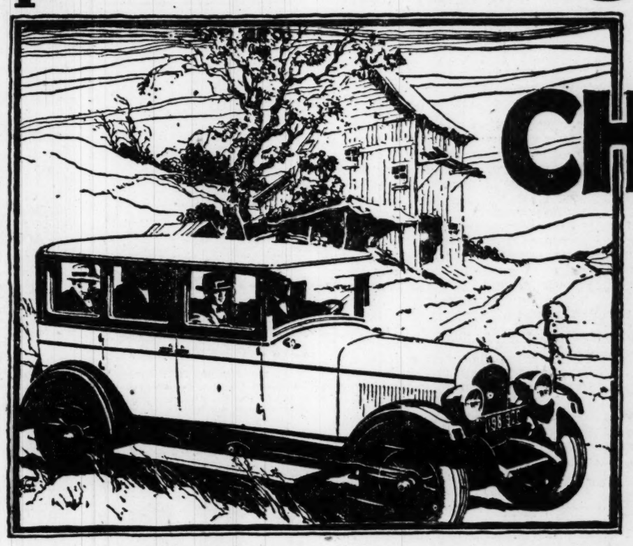
BEYOND COMPARISON
—in Number of Features, and in Quality of Features the Chrysler "60" is acclaimed as outside of all comparisons in the lighter six field



CHRYSLER "60" Sedan $1245 f.o.b. Detroit

Attempt to compare Chrysler "60" features in number, in quality—against those of the ordinary six in its price field, and the advantage in favor of Chrysler at once will convince you that comparison is impossible.

Of course, the Chrysler "60" has finely balanced seven-bearing crankshaft, impulse neutralizer, oil-filter, air-cleaner, Chrysler four-wheel hydraulic brakes, full pressure lubrication, manifold heat control and road levelizers—has had these and other "new" features ever since its introduction.

But the really distinctive features of the "60" are its typically Chrysler features—its superb beauty, its inimitable performance, its amazing speed and acceleration, its unfailing dependability and long life, its handling and riding ease, and its outstanding low prices—features that are unique and must remain unique due to the Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization.

You are cordially invited—indeed, urged to try the Chrysler "60" against the two or three other cars you may consider comparable. In common with its scores of thousands of enthusiastic owners, you will be bound to rate it beyond comparison —utterly unapproachable by any other six of its type and price.

GIRLS' TROOP 53 WINS DOLL SHOW TROPHY

Awarded Silver Cup for Best Exhibit; to Remember Children in Hospitals.

The third anual Girl Scout Doll Show, held in the music rooms of Scruggs, Vandervoort, and Barney since Wednesday, closed yesterday afternoon with a Christmas jubilee. More than 200 Girl Scouts in uniform filled the stage and aisles singing Christmas carols; Santa Claus spoke; and individual acts were given by different troops, including a gavotte by Troop 24, an Italian dance by Troop 39, and a tumbling act by Troop 25. The program closed with the presentation of a silver cup to Troop 53, of the Caroddelet Presbyterian Church, for the best exhibit at the Doll Show.

In all nearly 1000 dolls were bought and dressed for distribution by charitable institutions to children at Christmas. Each troop arranged its dolls in a tableau, each of which were judged according to workmanship, originality of arrangement, and suitability for their intended purpose. Troop 53's winning exhibit represented a group of babies in Healthland, on a pilgrimage from East Toothbrush down Bathtub lane to the foot of Long Sleep mountain, where Hot Soup Spring gushes forth near the Fresh Milk Factory.

Child's Wardrobe.

Troop 39, of the Harrison School, won second place with a nursery scene, and a Maypole festival took third for Troop 31, of the Compton Hill Congregational Church. A Christmas scene by Troop 15, winner of last year's cup, representing the three wise men following The Star, received honorable mention, as did a gypsy camp by Troop 20, and Troop 37's picture of a German hausfrau entertaining her visitors while the cook fried bacon in the kitchen.

Three nondoll exhibits, also Christmas presents for sick or needy children, were also shown. The first was a wardrobe for a 5-year-old girl completed from panty dress to pajamas, made by the girls of Senior Troop 1, which specializes in community service.

The wardrobe contains 23 pieces, all work on which was done by the girls. The second exhibit was a collection of scrap-books made by the Brownie Pack, or girls too young to become Girl Scouts.

Collection of Jellies.

These books will be given to hospitals. A collection of jellies and preserves made by the girls of Troop 32 from fruit gathered by themselves, formed the last.

The dolls have already been selected by the organizations who are to distribute them, each group having taken its pick, and marking the dolls wanted. The City Hospital will get the largest number, but the Children's Aid Society, who first suggested the show three years ago, had first choice. Other organizations receiving dolls are the South Side Day Nursery, the Elias Michael School for Crippled Children, the Turner School for Crippled Negro Children, the Missouri Association for the Blind, St. Mary's Orphan Asylum, the Colored Orphans' Home, the Catholic Women's League, and the North Side Provident Association.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

The Girl Scouts of Arrowhead Troop 7 practiced a play they will give at the City Infirmary Christmas week, at a meeting Dec. 3. The program for the whole entertainment was also worked out. Miss Eckleman, the captain, will hike the troop on a hike to Sugar Creek today.

Twelve girls from Coenia Troop 56 hiked 16 miles to Fallin Springs, Ill., and back, last Sunday, leaving the Davis street ferry at 8:30 o'clock and arriving at the springs at 11:30. After cooking and eating lunch, they explored a "haunted house" and the caves and bluffs in the vicinity. They left the springs at 1:45 o'clock and were back in Missouri by 5 o'clock.

The girls have worked all week dressing dolls for the doll show. Dorothy Gahn, a former scout, has rejoined the troop. The Tenderfoot passed the drawing of the American flag test last Monday.

The girls of Troop 2, Kirkwood, last Wednesday practiced Christmas carols that they will sing on Christmas eve at different charitable institutions. Miss Julia Winfrey, one of the troop's lieutenants, was invested with her Tenderfoot pin at the meeting. On Monday seven of the scouts, with Mrs. Correll, the captain, helped the librarian of the Kirkwood library fix torn books. They were: Jane Beadles, Virginia Correll, Dorothy Beadles, Virginia Stephens, Mary Ruth Grant, Frances Lewis and Lillian Herron.

Headquarters Notes.

The hike scheduled in the scoutmasters' training course for next Saturday afternoon has been changed to an evening hike in Forest Park, for the study of tracking, use of the compass and star-study, headquarters has announced. The men will meet at the Old Tourists' Camp at 7:30 o'clock. Educational Director William J. Puffer will be in charge.

"The significance of individual differences" will be the subject of the next "Boyology" lecture at the scoutmasters' training school next Tuesday evening, at the Bryan Murphy School.

Boy Scout Troop News

Suburban District.

The Scout leaders of the Suburban District will hold their annual dinner at 19 E. Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves, Friday, Dec. 17, at 6:30 p. m. All scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, troop committeemen and deputy commissioners have been invited to hear Chief Beckman outline the St. Louis Council activities for the entire year of 1927. Other men in the district interested in scouting have also been invited to attend. This is the most important meeting of the year in the district. Morgan E. Coggeshall, newly elected chairman of the Suburban District Court of Honor, will preside at this meeting. Chief Earle W. Beckman and William J. Puffer will outline the program.

Scout James Bernhoester was installed as senior patrol leader of Troop 3, St. Charles, last meeting. Each patrol is making a patrol chest, and competition is running high as to which patrol will have the best one. The boys of the troop have volunteered to deliver Christmas baskets which are being collected by the Red Cross for the poor and needy. Also each patrol is making up a basket of their own, consisting of toys, clothing and good eats to make someone happy on Christmas day.

Field Executive Leavitt told Troop 1, Brentwood, about winter camp, Wednesday. There is quite a bit of enthusiasm in the troop about this sort of camping as several of the boys have attended in former years. Scoutmaster A. W. Veazy reports that the boys are collecting toys and food to send to the destitute families in the flooded Illinois area. They are also collecting some good warm clothing and good things to eat for the needy in their own district.

The Scouts of Troop 7, Webster Groves, donated to the Scouts of Troop 249 $20 in equipment, the prize which they won for their work at the Merit Badge show. Webster Groves 7 had charge of the music booth at the show conducting it so successfully that the committee awarded them $20 in equipment. The Scouts who assisted in making this booth a success were: Alan Beck, piano; Harry Grace, banjo; Donald Steele, Saxophone; William Woodress, clarinet; Stephen Willinham, saxophone; Paul Redhead and Victor Stone, assistant scoutmasters of the troop also did a great deal in the efforts of winning this prize.

Scoutmaster Spencer of Troop 249, expressed his delight and appreciation when told of this gift to his troop and assured the givers that the money will be spent in the true spirit of Scouting.

Invitations have been issued for Webster Groves Troop 11's open house meeting at the Avery gymnasium Friday evening, Dec. 17 at 8 p. m. An entertainment entitled: "Come and see your son in action" is planned. Admission will be canned food stuff or a free will offering which will be used to fill baskets to be delivered by the troop on Christmas day. Scoutmaster Robt. J. Copley promises something new and snappy in entertainment for all who come.

The Goat Patrol of Webster Groves 14 came from behind and put a crimp in the fast traveling Wolf Patrol by winning the judging contest and passing a number of Scout tests. Things looked pretty good for the Wolf Patrol up until last night, as this Patrol has captured four contests out of the last five held. Ray Thurston is leading the troop contest for honor camper this summer, at Irondale. Nelson Thurston and Tom Etter are running a close second and third.

North District.

The scout leaders of the North District will hold their second annual banquet tomorrow evening at the Arlington M. E. Church, Union boulevard and Maffitt avenue. At a meeting of the Deputy Commissioners of the district Wednesday evening, each commissioner agreed to personally be responsible for the attendance of at least one official from each of the troops in his region.

The feature of this year's banquet will be the presentation by Scout Executive Earle W. Beckman of the troop activity program for 1927 and the announcement of the plans for the 1927 Scout Circus. Educational Director William J. Puffer will also present the outline for a standard troop committee and the plans of the educational department for the coming year. Songs and stunts will be under the leadership of Field Executive Jack Wright. Friends of scouting and former scoutmasters are invited to attend.

Troop 88 of the Salem Evangelical Church is planning a banquet for the parents and friends of the scouts to commemorate the troop's achievements in winning the grand award at the recent Merit Badge Exhibit. Troop 88 won the chest, containing $50 worth of supplies, given to the troop which contributed the most to the success of the Merit Badge Exhibit. The troop's contributions were a prize-winning booth, the furnishing of the drum and bugle corps for the arena program, selling the most tickets irrespective of the size of the troop, selling the most tickets per registered scout, and having each registered member of the troop in attendance every minute the Merit Badge Show was open, doing something, from selling programs and soda pop to working in the booth or in the drum and bugle corps. In addition to the troop achievements, Scout Orville Hebbler won the $50 wrist watch given to the scout selling the most tickets and nine other scouts in the troop sold 10 or more tickets entitling them to the scout diary reward. The presentation of the awards will be made, following the supper, by a representative of the Rotary Club and Scout Headquarters.

Troop 40 of the Third United Presbyterian Church held its second meeting Friday evening under the leadership of their new scoutmaster, L. B. Treat. Sixteen boys were present. Patrols were organized and plans made to bring the membership up to full strength. Field Executive Jack Wright dropped in for a few minutes during the evening.

Troop 114 of the Windsor Memorial Church held a reorganization meeting last Thursday evening and laid plans for the coming year. The troop has decided to meet alternately in the church and Baden School in order to take advantage of the gymnasium offered in the school. A number of the old boys were in attendance Thursday evening.

Troop 127 of the Bowman M. E. Church held a parents' evening at the church last Friday evening. Activities Director L. L. Hotchkiss addressed the parents on scouting. The films of the scout circus were shown and a demonstration of scout activities was put on by Troop 33 of the St. Peters' Evangelical Church.

Dr. Wiese from Barnes Hospital will visit Troop 72 next Wednesday. The Flying Eagle Patrol put on a play last Wednesday night and also a boxing contest which furnished much amusement. Clarence Martin's Silver Fox Patrol won in the knot board contest which ended last week. Troop 72 is making museum boards and taking up the study of seeds and insects. Two patrols have seeds and two have insects to mount on boards. The troop is also saving money to build a cabin at the Lions' Den Reservation.

Troop 92 of the Samuel Cupples School held inspection last Wednesday night. Field Executive Jack Wright was present as inspector and also conducted first aid domonstrations in treatment for fainting, drowning and electric shocks, and in fire rescue. The patrols were drilled and the game "This and That" was played for mental response. The Raccoon Patrol won the general inspection, receiving a fire by friction set. The Pelican Patrol came in second, also receiving a prize.

Troop 204 made a trip to Lions' Den with Troop 3. Six boys of Troop 204 passed second-class cooking and tracking. Scoutmaster Depps passed the merit badge for cooking, as did nine members of Troop 3, including Scoutmaster Simons. Plans were made to go to Cliff Cave for the next hike.

West District.

Letters have gone out from headquarters to all scoutmasters and commissioners of the district announcing the annual West District Scout Leaders' dinner and get-together for the night of Dec. 20, at the Pilgrim Congregational Church. Mrs. Birge and other ladies of the church have assumed the responsibility for the dinner. It is hoped that troop committeemen as well as scoutmasters will be present as matters to be taken up are of vital interest to all troop officers.

Troop 2 of the Pilgrim Congregational Church invested two boys with the tenderfoot rank last week. They are Leon F. Fuller and Leonard H. Roach. L. E. Fuller, father of Leon, participated in the ceremony. Mr. Fuller has been appointed as an assistant scoutmaster for Troop 2.

Richmond Heights Troop 1 took a hike to Cliff Cave recently, leaving troop headquarters at 7:30 a. m. and arriving at 10:30 o'clock. A few tests were passed before noon, when the boys paired off and prepared their dinner. The Rev. H. B. Phillips also hiked and cooked his own dinner. After noon the cave was explored and several small caves in the neighborhood were discovered. A game of hare and hounds was played, the hares winning.

Troop 90, in line with their recent drive to provide at least one surprise feature for each meeting, had a lecture on snakes last Tuesday. Lewis Sherwood gave a talk touching on the life, habits, varieties and peculiar anatomy of this member of the reptile kingdom. A thrill was provided when one of the snakes bit the lecturer just as he stated they often bit but that their bite was harmless. These snakes were captured by Sherwood during his stay at Camp Irondale last summer.

Troop 82, the recently reorganized troop of the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church, had its weekly meeting Friday evening. Games were played and practice in knot-tying and first aid was held. Ten visitors were present. Though the troop is small, it is growing rapidly and Scoutmaster Shea and the boys are working for new members.

The Stork Patrol of Troop 14 has organized groups to collect material for a museum. They have collected rocks, ore and metals; skins, arrowheads, seaweed, seamoss, seashells, pine tree cones and different species of fungus. They also have models of nearly all of the merit badges carved in soapstone by Bill Boyd, who also made a knot board with 88 knots on it.

Troop 13 of St. Johns M. E. Church held its annual Fathers' and Sons' banquet last Friday evening, with a large attendance of both fathers and sons. Judge Mix was the chief speaker.

SCOUTS GATHER TOYS FOR FLOODS' VICTIMS

Boys and Girls Will Send Presents to Illinois River Area Children.

Playing Santa Claus to between 500 and 600 children in the Illinois flood area will be the self-appointed task of the Campfire Girls and the Boy Scouts of St. Louis this Christmas. Camps of the former and troops of the latter are ransacking their homes, and the homes of their friends and neighbors, for toys, which, with a little repairing and fresh paint, may be sent to brighten the Christmas of boys and girls who otherwise would have none.

Since Sept. 18 the whole lowland area from Grafton to Peoria, Ill., has been under water, in places to a depth of five feet. Almost the entire rural population has been thrown upon the dependence of the Red Cross and similar organizations, which are able to supply only the immediate necessities of life.

Christmas without outside help would be an impossibility, and it was to supply this aid that Miss Thea Langtim, St. Louis director of the Campfire Girls, suggested to her organization the plan of supplying the toys. Later the Boy Scouts were invited to join, and the Red Cross was asked to supply the names of children in need. Each troop and camp will be given a list of children to whom they are to send toys. One meeting before Christmas will be set aside to assembling and wrapping the gifts, and each parcel will be mailed direct to its destination.

The Campfire Girls have been working several weeks, and have a large number of toys gathered, one camp alone—the Flynn Park group—having collected 500. This camp was aided in the collection by the Flynn Park School, where it meets. The Kiloha Camp is being helped by the Hancock School, and the Tower Grove Baptist Church group by its sponsoring organization.

The Boy Scouts started work only last week, but report good progress. Their work is being directed by Assistant Executive W. H. Haun.

Miss Langton will visit the flood area next Saturday and Sunday to investigate conditions and arrange for distribution of the toys where mail esrvice is impracticable.

CHURCHILL MADE BUICK'S GENERAL SALES MANAGER

E. T. Strong, president and general manager of the Buick Motor Co., has announced appointment of C. W. Churchill as general sales manager. Strong recently vacated his office to assume the presidency of Buick.

"The vacancy in the sales manager's office created by my recent appointment makes a nominal readjustment necessary," Strong said. "C. W. Churchill becomes general sales manager by virtue of his thorough familiarity with the office, gained through his work as director of sales in the past five years."

C. W. Churchill was born in Detroit in 1880. He entered the automobile field as assistant manager of the Cleveland branch of the Winton company. Two years later he was made manager of its New York branch. In 1908 he was recalled to Cleveland as general sales manager. In 1915 he became Winton's general manager.

He joined the Buick Motor Co. in 1921 as director of sales.

During this time he was in charge of car distribution, field operations and many other matters intimately connected with manager-ship of the sales department.

Anti-Froster for Windshields.

A safety device for automobiles is being used by motorists who drive in stormy weather. It is known as an antifroster and made of transparent pyralin sheeting. It is attached to the windshield by means of vacuum cups. It is claimed that this device will prevent the accumulation of frost or moisture on the windshield.

Big Celebration Plann
Christmas Dinner
Sent to

There is a widespread belief in Childhood Land that Santa Claus can do anything. Anything, in the language of Childhood Land, means everything. The idea is that Santa Claus is able to satisfy the longings of all the children in the world at Christmas time, and that, willy nilly, he will attend to the business.

This is not quite correct. Santa Claus can do a great deal, but he can't do everything. He has to have help. In fact, a great deal of help. From grownups and children, all the help that he can get. The truth may as well be told. It is only through such help that he is able to bring happiness to children on Christmas morning. If help is withheld or not enough help is forthcoming, he cannot find all the houses in Childhood Land and some little boys and little girls will awake on Christmas morning to bitter disappointment.

Now Santa Claus is coming to this town the night before Christmas. As sure as there is a night before Christmas. But this is a big town. There are an awful lot of little children in it. And some of them live in houses that are hard to find. Santa Claus will do his level best, but he is certain to miss some of these houses unless he gets the right kind of help. And on Christmas morning the little boys and little girls who live in these houses will awake with aching hope in their hearts, only to find that Santa Claus has not found their house.

If Santa Claus Should Forget.

So it will come to pass on Christmas morning that a child will look out through a frosted pane on a world that seems to have been heedless of a child's dearest wish, and a mother will know the sorrow that comes only to mothers of children that Santa Claus forgot.

But Santa Claus has good help in St. Louis. Nowhere better help. The Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival is his best helper. It takes care of 12,000 children that would probably not be taken care of but for its help, providing them with a great Christmas celebration in the big Coliseum and with music and entertainment and gifts, and sending Christmas dinners to 4000 homes where otherwise there might be hunger that day.

The Post-Dispatch Christmas festival is organized and managed by men and women who give their time and energy freely and gladly, doing a great deal of work that must be done if Santa Claus is to have the right kind of help. But they cannot do everything. A great deal of money is needed. For that they look to the men and women and children of St. Louis who have the Christmas spirit in their hearts and who want to help in the only way that they can.

It must be great, to be Santa Claus. Think of the happiness that is his in making children happy. The next best thing is to be an assistant Santa Claus. Anybody can be that. Last Christmas there were 28,000 assistant Santa Clauses who helped with the Christmas festival. Think of that. Thirty-eight thousand! There were that many who gave something. Each one shared with all the others the happiness that comes from giving happiness. Each one was host to the children who filled the Coliseum and sat, an unseen guest, at all the Christmas dinners.

Now again the same opportunity is provided. Help is needed from those who want to help. Dimes and dollars are needed for the Christmas festival and the Christmas dinners. That is the way to keep any home from the heart-breaking dis-

THE HOUSE SANTA CLAUS COULDN'T FIND

There Need Be No Such Home in St. Louis on Christmas Morning

TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL POST-DISPATCH CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL IS UNDER WAY

Big Celebration Planned for Coliseum and Christmas Dinner Baskets Will Be Sent to Homes.

There is a widespread belief in Childhood Land that Santa Claus can do anything. Anything, in the language of Childhood Land, means everything. The idea is that Santa Claus is able to satisfy the longings of all the children in the world at Christmas time, and that, willy nilly, he will attend to the business.

This is not quite correct. Santa Claus can do a great deal, but he can't do everything. He has to have help. In fact, a great deal of help. From grownups and children, all the help that he can get. The truth may as well be told. It is only through such help that he is able to bring happiness to children on Christmas morning. If help is withheld or not enough help is forthcoming, he cannot find all the houses in Childhood Land and some little boys and little girls will awake on Christmas morning to bitter disappointment.

Now Santa Claus is coming to this town the night before Christmas. As sure as there is a night before Christmas. But this is a big town. There are an awful lot of little children in it. And some of them live in houses that are hard to find. Santa Claus will do his level best, but he is certain to miss some of these houses unless he gets the right kind of help. And on Christmas morning the little boys and little girls who live in these houses will awake with hoping hope in their hearts, only to find that Santa Claus has not found their house.

If Santa Claus Should Forget.

So it will come to pass on Christmas morning that a child will look out through a frosted pane on a world that seems to have been heedless of a child's dearest wish and a mother will know the sorrow that comes only to mothers of children that Santa Claus forgot.

But Santa Claus has good help in St. Louis. Nowhere better help. The Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival is his best helper. It takes care of 12,000 children that would probably not be taken care of but for its help, providing them with a great Christmas celebration in the big Coliseum and with music and entertainment and gifts, and sending Christmas dinners to 4000 homes where otherwise there might be hunger that day.

The Post-Dispatch Christmas festival is organized and managed by men and women who give their time and energy freely and gladly, doing a great deal of work that must be done if Santa Claus is to have the right kind of help. But they cannot do everything. A great deal of money is needed. For that they look to the men and women and children of St. Louis who have the Christmas spirit in their hearts and who want to help in the only way that they can.

It must be great to be Santa Claus. Think of the happiness that is in making children happy. The next best thing is to be an assistant Santa Claus. Anybody can be that. Last Christmas there were 38,000 assistant Santa Clauses who helped with the Christmas festival. Think of that. Thirty-eight thousand! There were that many who gave something. Each one shared with all the others the happiness that comes from giving happiness. Each one was host to the children who filled the Coliseum and sat, an unseen guest, at the Christmas dinners.

Now again the same opportunity is provided. Help is needed from those who want to help. Dimes and dollars are needed for the Christmas festival and the Christmas dinners. That is the way to keep any child from the heart-breaking discovery on Christmas morning that Santa Claus has missed that house.

Letters That Appeal.

December is an anxious month for children who are not certain that Santa Claus knows the way to their houses, and for mothers who fear that, because of lack of helpers, he may pass her children by. It is anxiety which expresses itself in pitiful letters that are being received by the Post-Dispatch and by the departments of the Christmas festival. Letters that plead, like these:

"I thought I would write and see if you wouldn't send me a basket for Christmas, for I have three children and my husband gets to work on two or three days a week, and the children have no shoes and it takes all my husband makes to live, and it is a mighty poor living."

"I am a little boy, 12 years old, and I have no father. My mother works so hard to feed me and clothe me. My sister has been sick and she had to take care of us both and I want us to have something for Christmas. Please send Santa Claus to see us, as we are not able to get things."

"We are seven poor children and we wish that you would send us a dinner to make our Christmas happy."

"I am only 12 years old. We wish you could send us some clothes. Our mother is sick. Please have a heart for us."

"Please send me a basket for Christmas. My husband is dead and no one to work but me, and I am sick half of the time and make just enough to feed and shelter my children."

Six Children—No Christmas.

"I am a poor woman with six children. My husband is out of work and can't find any. So I would like to have a basket if you can send it to me."

"Please send me a Christmas basket, for I am without mother or father and I live with my aunt, who is a widow, and we are not able to buy groceries for Christmas."

"Please send me a basket. My mother has gone away and has not come back."

"I don't expect to get much for Christmas. My mother is not able to fix anything for me. My father has been down sick for two or three months and hasn't been able to work."

"I am a little girl and a cripple and my mother is sick and my father is out of work and has gone away. My two little cousins have no mother and no father and we haven't got no money and we don't know when and where we are going to get any money, and I am writing to see if my two little cousins could get something for Christmas and would be thankful for anything we get."

"Could you help me and my baby? My husband he is ill and left me and my baby. I have nobody to help me in any way. Please don't forget to send me a basket, or I won't have anything to eat for Christmas."

"This letter I wrote to you hoping you will remember me Christmas. I am a crippled girl with both legs cut off and will be thankful for anything you will give."

Since Mother Died.

"I am a poor and needy woman with seven children. My husband has only one arm, but he is doing his best to support the family. I would appreciate it very much if you would send us a basket of Christmas cheer for without it I know our Christmas time won't be very much."

"We are six children and our mother is dead. Our father tries to make ends meet but he has been sick a couple of weeks and couldn't work. When our mother was living we had it better, especially on Christmas. We used to get lots of toys, but since mother is dead we don't get as many nice things, though I must say our daddy tries his best to keep us together."

"I have three little girls. My husband is almost blind. It takes every cent for us to live on. We haven't got anything for our babies for Christmas."

It is for these and thousands like them that the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival is given and the Christmas baskets are distributed. It can only serve its purpose fully if the contributions are liberal. The lists have been distributed. Persons who do not recieve lists may give by sending their contributions direct to the Post-Dispatch. All contributions will be acknowledged in the columns of the paper.

The Christmas Festival will be given at the Coliseum the forenoon of Christmas day. The doors will be opened at 9 o'clock. Admission, as in former years, will be by tickets which will be distributed later. Announcement will be made in the Post-Dispatch where they can be obtained.

Festival at Coliseum.

There will be band music from 9 to 10 o'clock, while the Coliseum is filling, and during the entertainment of dances and specialties that will be given by 800 playground children. To every child who attends the Coliseum celebration a horn and candy will be given. The other toys will be sent with the Christmas baskets to the homes the day before Christmas, so that they can be placed in the children's stockings. There will be more toys than usual this Christmas because of the work of the Re-made Toys Committee, of which Mrs. R. M. Cooper is president. A great many toys that had been used but were still good were gathered by this committee Friday from all over the city and delivered to the Platt-Thornburgh Paint Co., which had offered to repair and repaint them. Such of these as are not too large will be sent with the baskets. The larger ones will be sent to the institutions.

The method of receiving applications has been changed. No applications will be received at the Post-Dispatch this year. All of them must be made through the various welfare organizations, a list of which is given in another column of this issue.

All the committees are hard at work on the preliminary arrangements. The lists are distributed by a committee of which Mrs. Marguerite Hopkins is chairman; Mrs. Eugene Herbert Booth and Mrs. G. A. Walden, vice chairmen, and Mrs. Ralph Zork, secretary. The distribution is by mail and in person from list headquarters, 312 and 314 Arcade building. The other members of the committee are:

Mrs. J. L. Bauer, Miss Angela Black, Mrs. E. C. Breck, Mrs. V. V. Cottam, Mrs. Eugene Devine Jr., Mrs. Imelda Devine, Miss Janette Dougherty, Miss Lucille Falk, Mrs. J. Fleming, Mrs. K. G. CHRISTMAS MORNING

"Mother, Couldn't Santa Claus Find Our House?"

The Meaning of Christmas

(A CHILD SPEAKS)

THIS holiest of all the nights,
I wonder what it means.
It must be more than candle lights
On tinselled evergreens.
It must be more than toys and cheer
And eating pleasant things;
For if you listen well, you hear
A murmuring of wings.

MY Grandma says it's more than fun
And hanging up your stocking;
It's knowing every needy one
May be the Savior knocking;
It's helping those who feel the rod
Of grief and heavy labors.
—I guess it's being nice to God
By loving all your neighbors.

—NEIHARDT.

BLIND CHILDREN THRILLED AT EXPOSITION OF TOYS

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Little blind children, breaking into smiles of joy as their fingers traced the outlines of castles, bridges, automobiles and aeroplanes they never have seen and never will see, were led about a toy exposition in the Tuileries Gardens.

Many interested visitors with tear-moistened eyes watched the scene. More fortunate children escorted their blind comrades to tell them of the objects. The castles were the most popular. Surrounded by the most formidable of battlements and moats, with the inevitable medieval drawbridge, they were easily recognizable to the blind children's touch. The ease and rapidity with which the children identified objects they had never seen was uncanny.

"What is this article?" an elderly man asked of a blind youngster who was lovingly petting the wings and fuselage of a miniature biplane.

"An airplane," the boy replied without hesitation.

It is estimated there are 16,000 sightless persons in France, a large percentage of whom were made blind by wounds during the war. The exposition is to raise funds to aid in teaching the blind and training them for livelihoods.

20,000 CAROLERS WILL SING ON STREETS CHRISTMAS EVE

Every Section of the City Will Be Visited by Association's Choristers.

The St. Louis Christmas Carols Association plans to have 20,000 singers caroling Christmas anthems on Christmas eve, William H. Danforth, president of the association, announced today.

All sections of the city will be visited by the singers, including the downtown section. Churches throughout the city will be asked to ring their bells for 15 minutes beginning at 7 p. m., as a notice that the carolers are starting on their rounds. Money received by the carolers will be turned over to various charities.

LAST GRAND DUCHY PROSPEROUS AND ALSO DEMOCRATIC

Luxemburgers, While Proud of Dynasty, Are Quick to Drop Any Who Oppose Popular Will.

THEIR SYMPATHY IS PRO-FRENCH

People of Mixed Origin, Mostly German, but Leading Club Closed to Keep Ex-Kaiser Out.

SUNDAY—DUCHY—
Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1926.)

LUXEMBURG, Nov. 18.—The only sovereign grand duchy in the world, the most charming country in Northwestern Europe, and one of the smallest—that is Luxemburg.

Rough, not too massive scenery. Quantities of autos, good roads, comfortable hotels, excellent food and, except in midsummer, few tourists. Steep, rugged hills topped with ruined castles, once strong fortresses. Rounded slopes covered with what is left of the great forest of the Ardennes; small game in plenty. Any number of trout brooks, and a fine native Moselle wine. In the South, the "red country"—iron mines and a superbly equipped and extremely prosperous steel industry.

Democratic, yet rather proud of the ruling dynasty of Grand Dukes (and, more recently, Grand Duchesses). Believing that the dynasty is a guaranty against absorption by Germany, or France or Belgium, but quick to get rid of any individual members of the ruling house who oppose the popular will. The sister of the ruling Grand Duchess was practically deposed in 1920 for favoring the Germans during the war. The present "Duke consort," Felix of Bourbon-Parma, fought with Austria; his sister, Zita, married Karl Hapsburg and may yet be Queen of Hungary; his brother, Sixtus, fought for France (the internationale royalty).

People of Mixed Origin.

The people of Luxemburg are of mixed origin, more German than French (80 per cent of the surnames are of Germanic, one-fifth of Gallic origin). Among themselves they speak a Teutonic dialect akin to old Saxon but incomprehensible to modern Germans, mixed with certain unwaveringly French expressions, "bon jour," "bon soir," "merci," "tres bien." They write and do business chiefly in German.

But they read and admire French and the debates in Parliament and the law courts take place in that language.

Their sympathy is strongly pro-French. Before the war they were part of the German customs union. During the war their country was occupied by the German army and the chief city housed the Kaiser. He sent word to the chief club, the Casino, he would like to join. Consternation—but only for a minute. Then the members hastily came together and closed down the club, informing his majesty unfortunately the Casino was no longer open. And on the chief square, a large and handsome monument, recently erected, commemorates the volunteers who died in the Foreign Legion for France in the great war.

Leanings to French.

In 1920 Luxemburg asked permission to use the French customs system—which France, to placate Belgium, refused. The Luxemburgers accepted a customs union with the Belgians. Belgian francs are legal tender. None the less, the Luxemburgers prefer the French to the Belgians.

But they do not want to become French. Luxemburg has a long and adventurous history of its own. The plebiscite that decided for admission to the French system turned down a republic in favor of the existing parliamentary grand duchy. Which is considered a guaranty for political independence. The national motto is: "Mir welle bleiwen wat mir sin"—"we wish to remain what we are."

Luxemburg is old-fashioned, conservative, slow, loving. But the people are well educated, cultured, hospitable.

Before the war many emigrated to the United States, and chiefly to Chicago. There the geographical ignorance of the authorities often had them classed as Germans. Naturalized immigrants, who fought in the American army and, after visiting their former land, wish to return to the United States, sometimes find it difficult on account of the words, "Birthplace: Luxemburg, Germany," written on their passports and discharge papers by Americans. Really the Luxemburgers are a people apart, small in numbers but extremely personal.

The American Resident.

This personal quality was largely appreciated by the members of the American army who happened to be stationed in Luxemburg during and after the armistice.

Apparently, the two nationalities mixed well. Our boys liked the country and the country liked them. Certain American expressions have remained from the occupation. One of them is the substitution of "snaps" for "schnaps" as the word for brandy or spirits. A certain very charming but buxom lady, whose house was constantly open to American officers, was colloquially named "the battleship." In Luxemburg society the title still survives.

Two American families live today in the Grand Duchy—that of the vice consul at Luxemburg City and that of an ex-army man at Echternach. This enterprising soul saw and fell in love with the country after the war, married in the United States and returned to make his home here.

What are the people like? Tall, gray-eyed, black-haired, rather heavy, slow moving, slow minded, independent, democratic. In the buildings of the great steel company, the manager, who is also the president of the European steel cartel, is addressed by quite simple workmen as "Emil," which is normal in America between "men who were boys together," but inconceivable in a country like Germany.

Mills Are Well Equipped.

Economically, Luxemburg, though small in area and population, is becoming increasingly important through the development of her steel industry. In the south Luxemburg overlaps the great French iron beds. It is estimated that there is a reserve of 300,000,000 tons of ore. In 1925 the Luxemburg industry produced over 2,000,000 long tons of steel ingots. Her limited quota, under the new steel cartel is henceforth, so long as the ratio is enforced, 2,858,685 metric tons of steel, or 5.55 per cent of the total.

Her mills, in the opinion of American experts, are among the best equipped and managed in Europe.

FIRST MOTION PICTURES OF THE FORBIDDEN CITY

Dr. William Montgomery McGovern, Who Penetrated It, Will Give Club Exhibition.

The first motion pictures ever taken in Lhasa, Tibet, "the Forbidden City," will be shown at the Contemporary Club dinner next Friday evening at the Hotel Coronado, when Dr. William Montgomery McGovern, explorer, will tell of his adventures and show his pictures.

Dr. McGovern, member of the Royal Geographical and Royal Asiatic societies, and a lecturer at the University of London, will give only the one St. Louis address. It is his first visit here. He was the first man to cross the Himalayan passes from India to Tibet in winter, a feat which had been supposedly impossible. He crossed 200 miles of barren country, much of it higher than the summit of Mont Blanc and all guarded by natives determined no white man should penetrate into Lhasa, known for centuries as "The Forbidden City."

The contemporary dinner will be open only to members and their guests as there is no public sale of tickets. R. H. Switzler is chairman of the club and Mrs. Dudley French is secretary.

WANT CURB ON CROWN PRINCE

German Communists Complain of His Visits to Berlin.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—Cries of "The Crown Prince is coming—gangway," have sounded through the streets of Berlin again since Frederick William has taken a fondness for frequent automobile excursions from his castle Cecilienhof in Potsdam. Taking up the familiar cry from the days of the monarchy, communists in the Prussian Diet are demanding that the state issue a decree prohibiting traffic cops from shouting orders of this kind. They assert that the former Crown Prince's limousine has been enabled to "speed around town like a fire truck."

The communists further complain that police have been clicking their heels and saluting as the "royal" automobile sped by so as "to make sane persons wonder whether they are living in a republic."

Pimples On Face Neck and Shoulders Cuticura Healed

"My face began to break out with small, itchy pimples in great numbers. They were hard and red and festered and scaled over. The pimples spread to my face, neck and shoulders and itched and burned something awful so that I could hardly sleep at night. My clothing irritated the breaking out on my shoulders, and my face was disfigured. I had the trouble about two years.

"I was told about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After using it I got relief so purchased more and in about two months I was completely healed." (Signed) Winfred Chambers, R. 4, Box 191, Bedford, Ind.

Cuticura Soap to cleanse and purify, Cuticura Ointment to soothe and heal and Cuticura Talcum to powder and refresh are ideal for daily toilet purposes.

CAROLINE ANDREWS AGAIN SINGS WITH CAPITOL FAMILY

Caroline Andrews, coloratura soprano, has returned for the regular Sunday evening broadcast programs of the Capitol family. She will be heard in the program from KSD this evening, beginning at 8:30 o'clock.

Miss Andrews has sung with the De Koven Opera Company, Philadelphia Opera Company, St. Louis Municipal Opera Company and more recently in the "Student Prince" operetta. She really began "back stage" at the age of 5 with the opera company in which her mother was singing. She used a wardrobe trunk for a stage and sang "The Jewel Song" from "Faust" and "The Last Rose of Summer," to the delight of adult members of the company. It was then the late Reginald de Koven urged her for his own opera company in revivals of his operas, "Robin Hood" and "Rob Roy," that she reached the prima donna rank. Another popular artist heard each Sunday evening in the Capitol Theater programs from KSD is Celia Turrill, the young English mezzo-soprano who began her musical career at the age of 11 when she graduated at Trinity College of Music in London. At the age of 15 she began to study singing in Dresden, Germany.

Damrosch Lectures on Great Operas

Four Works That Make Up Wagner's "Nibelung Ring" Are Based on Ancient Germanic and Norse Mythology.

Wagner's Nibelung Ring operas, which are the subjects of the lecture-recitals by Walter Damrosch in the Balkite Hour from KSD, are so called because of a legendary magic golden ring that was supposed to give its wearer unlimited powers over men and things. They are entitled "Das Rheingold" (The Rhine Gold); "Die Walkuere" (The Valkyrie), "Siegfried" and "Die Goetterdaemmerung" (The Twilight of the Gods).

The legends on which the ring is based were derived from ancient Norse and Germanic myths of fair-haired gods and goddesses, heroes, dragons, giants, dwarfs and Rhine maidens. Wagner wove them into a mighty music drama, in four great chapters. Underlying all is the compelling motive of the lust and struggle for the power of gold that in the end proves empty.

The Rhine Gold.

The curtain rises on a scene in the depths of the Rhine where mermaidens are adoring a mass of gold, called the Rhine Gold. They love it for its beauty alone without regard to its purchasing power. Along comes Alberic, the dwarf, who, being made the object of the Rhine maidens' sport, wrathfully seizes the treasure and the power that goes with it. He carries it away to build for himself an empire. Later, in his underground retreat, he forges the Nibelung (ring) and a helmet (the Tarnhelm). This latter gives its wearer the power of assuming any form at will.

The second scene opens in a meadow on the banks of the Rhine where we find Wotan, chief of the gods, and his consort Fricka. Wotan has made a bargain with two giants to build Valhalla as a home for the gods, in return for which he is to give them Freia, the goddess of youth and beauty.

Now as they finish and demand payment he changes his mind about Freia and persuades the giants to accept the Rhine gold instead. With the aid of Loki, the trickster, he wrests the gold from Alberic, the dwarf, turns it over to the giants. One of them slays the other and, taking the gold to a cave, puts on the Tarnhelm or magic helmet, changes himself to a dragon and spends his life guarding the treasure like any other miser.

Led by Wotan, the gods march over a chasm via the rainbow bridge to their god-home, Valhalla. A gorgeous spectacle is created here through the medium of the music of the processional of the gods.

Wotan, god of the gods, soon tires of the restraint imposed by his legal duties and his court.

"The Valkyrie."

Now Wotan trains his love children as war-maidens (Valkyries) who, riding wild horses, search the battlefields for the bravest of the dead heroes and bring them home to Valhalla to form a bodyguard for Wotan. Chief of the Valkyries is his daughter Brynhild. But Brynhild can bear no true hero until there is a man of Wotan's own race to mate with her.

So Wotan wanders forth in disguise as a mortal and mates with a mortal woman who bears him a son and daughter, Siegmund and Sieglinde. The latter mates with a fierce warrior chief, Hunding. The first act of The Valkyrie opens in the hut of Hunding, which is built around a mighty tree. Out of the stormy night comes Siegmund, whom Sieglinde does not know as a brother. She falls in love with him. The husband comes home and tells this Siegmund, the enemy of his tribe, he must fight him in the morning whether he has weapons or no.

In the center of the hut, a sword which Wotan previously plunged into the tree quivers in the firelight. Only a hero can pluck it forth. Siegmund turns out to be that hero. Seizing it and his sister, he goes forth to the forest. Hunding pursues and engages Siegmund whose sword shatters on Wotan's interposed spear. Siegmund is slain. Brynhild, who is present at this encounter, seizes the fragments of the shattered sword together with Sieglinde and makes off with them. Wotan following in wrathful pursuit. As Wotan is arriving at Brynhild's retreat on the rocky peak, Sieglinde seizes the sword fragments and disappears into the forest. Wotan casts Brynhild into a deep sleep on a rocky couch and Loki, the handy old trickster, draws a circle of flame about her. Through this flame none can penetrate except a hero. It is at this point that the orchestra plays the well-known "Fire Music."

"Siegfried."

Finding shelter in the smithy of the dwarf, Mimi, who is a brother of the dwarf, Alberic, Sieglinde gives birth to a son, Siegfried, and dies. Mimi raises Siegfried to manhood. Old, tottering and timid, Mimi's one object in life is to get the Rhine gold so well guarded by the giant-dragon and as time passes

WILL ROGERS ENGAGED FOR EVEREADY HOUR IN JANUARY

Will Rogers has signed a return engagement for an Eveready Hour to be broadcast in January.

About two years ago the cowboy-humorist, who lately as "minister aplenty" caused many laughs over American political problems, was a guest of the Eveready Hour. This time he will be supported by the De Reszke Singers, who have been appearing with him in his stage engagements.

MODERN COMPOSERS' WORKS IN WBBM CONCERT TUESDAY

The Stewart-Warner Air Theater, Station WBBM, will broadcast a program of French music at 8:15 Tuesday night as a concert in a new series of programs by modern composers.

Francis Cole, a soldier, who wrote many of his most popular compositions in the trenches, has mirrored the Parisian boulevards in "Theme and Petit Variations." Lester D. Mather, concert pianist, will play this composition, and "Barcarolle" by Chaminade, the Parisian woman composer. He will accompany Miriam Hadley, violinist, who will play "Meditation," from "Thais," by Massenet.

Bound together by their interest in modern developments in music is a group of French composers known as "The Six." From their compositions Mather will play the following: "Prelude," by Auric; "Sarabande," by Honneger, and "Little Waltz," by Francis Poulenc, one of the cleverest and flashiest of French music writers.

Darius Milhaud, another of the group, has set to music child poems by Rabindranath Tagore. From these, Hazel McBroomm, contralto, will sing "When and Why," "Paper Boats" and "Sympathy."

A piano trio made up of Marian Carlysle, Norman Sherr and Mather will play "Humoresque," by Charles Marie Vidor, and "Concerto in G Minor," by Saint-Saens.

NEW WJZ STRING QUARTET

The new Brunswick String Quartet will make its radio debut from WJZ at 9 o'clock Wednesday night in a recital of 30 minutes. The program, which will consist of three selection, will be confined entirely to the higher type of music. Two works of Glazounow, "Alla Spagnuola" and "Interludium in modo antico," will open the broadcast, and the concluding selection will be the Finale of Dvorak's "Quartet in F."

KDKA CHAMBER MUSIC SERIES TO BEGIN SOON

Concerts Aimed at Familiarizing Public With Seldom Heard Compositions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 11.—Out of countless forms of music-making, centuries of composition and playing, has come a form of musical expression that in some respects rises above all others. It is chamber music.

Chamber music has attained an eminence acknowledged both by player and composer. In chamber form, music is simple and beautiful—simple because it has no reason for creation other than the desire of the writer to clothe his images in the sheerest of habiliments; beautiful because it is most pure, and devoid of artifice or petty invention.

While the singing, human quality of the tones of the strings has made the string quartet perhaps the most commonly used medium for the presentation of chamber music, the woodwind choirs also have been utilized to advantage.

It is to fill partially this lack to make it available abroad in the land, that Victor Saudek, musical director of radio station KDKA here, has decided to offer to the radio public chamber music recitals.

He will vary the presentation with string quartet, woodwind choir and string-wood ensemble. The recitals will begin about the new year.

He continually endeavors to forge a sword strong enough for Siegfried's use but each attempt ends in Siegfried shattering the sword on the anvil. Through all his experience Siegfried despises his foster father. Finally he throttles Mimi and wrings from him the truth about his origin. Mimi produces the fragments of the mighty sword formerly wielded by his father. Mimi at command endeavors to repair this magic sword, but in vain. Finally Siegfried meets the sword fragments and makes a new one worthy of his strength.

Mimi then goes forth with the fried to find him an adversary worthy of this sword, and, of course, they eventually come to the cave wherein the dragon guards the Rhine gold. Incidentally Alberic, original despoiler of the Rhine gold, is hiding in the form of the cave. Siegfried slays the dragon, then slays Mimi. Takes the ring and helmet, he throws away, leaving the remainder of the gold to the dwarf Alberic.

A little bird has told Siegfried about the sleeping Brynhild and the surrounding wall of fire. Siegfried travels toward her mountain, hope that he may at last learn the meaning of fear.

In the third act of "Siegfried" the hero arrives at the foot of the mountain where he meets and recognizes Wotan, his grandfather, who is standing guard. In the past Wotan knows Siegfried. An encounter ensues in course of which Siegfried breaks the spear of Wotan with his sword and thus the power order passes as the victor goes through the flames, unafraid, to win the lovely Brynhild.

"The Twilight of the Gods."

This is the final opera of the series. The prologue opens with the three fates (Norns) weaving the thread of destiny on Brynhild's mountain top. The thread breaks, indicative of the passing of the old order, and the fates disappear. Siegfried and Brynhild appear and the ring is bestowed upon the latter. Then away goes Siegfried down the valley of the Rhine in search of further adventure.

The first act opens in the court of King Gunther. The King's sister, Gutruna, and Gunther's half-brother, Hagen, appear on the side. Hagen is plotting to use the King as a cat's paw to obtain Brynhild and secure the ring for the family, principally for himself. At the opportune moment Siegfried arrives at the court and is given a love philtre which causes him to fall in love with Gutruna, the sister, and forget his love for Brynhild. So, off goes Gunther with Siegfried with the magic philtre to fool Brynhild into marrying Gunther. The ring is taken from Brynhild's finger and Gunther claims her as his wife.

In the second act Hagen meets with his father, Alberic, the dwarf. The son swears to get possession of the ring for his father. Gunther arrives at court with the unwilling bride, and she, seeing the ring on Siegfried's finger, realizes that she has been tricked. Then Brynhild, Gunther and Hagen plot vengeance on Siegfried, as he walks away with his new bride, Gutruna, on his arm. Brynhild had previously enchanted Siegfried so no weapon could hurt him but neglected to protect his back. So the three go on a hunting party where Siegfried may be speared in the back and thus the wound to be laid to the prowess of a wild boar.

In the third act Siegfried has strayed away from the hunting party and met the Rhine maidens who almost succeed in coaxing the ring away from him. Arrives the rest of the party at the riverside. Hagen has prepared an antidote for the love philtre, then stabs him in the back. Siegfried expires on his shield. Hagen returns to the palace and, claiming Siegfried's death by the wild boar. The body is borne home. Gunther and Hagen fight over the ring and Gunther is slain. The dead Siegfried's hand raises to claim the ring when Hagen attempts to remove it.

Brynhild comes, the funeral pyre is erected, and, throwing herself into the pyre, she rides her horse into the flames. The palace catches fire, the Rhine overflows, thus quenching the conflagration and permitting the three Rhine maidens to swim in and remove the ring from Siegfried's finger.

Hagen attempts to grab the ring, but is drowned by the Rhine daughters. In the distance appears the house of the gods, Valhalla, being consumed in flames and up by Loki as the final curtain falls.

Because some temperamental artists complain that they cannot glare of lights, a broadcasting station in London shoots a ray of light in the direction of the telephone to make the entertainer feel as if he were on the stage.

There are between 12,000,000 and 15,000,000 radio sets in operation throughout the world.

COMPOSER OF 'DIGNIFIED' JAZZ IN EVEREADY HOUR

GEORGE GERSHWIN

CHANGE IN SCHEDULE FOR BIG WIZ FEATURE

Maxwell Hour to Be Broadcast Wednesdays Instead of Sunday Nights.

The Maxwell program, formerly a feature at 9:15 central time Sunday nights from WJZ and WGY, has been changed to 8 o'clock Central time on Wednesday nights. The next broadcast of this feature will be on the new schedule and will be heard from WJZ and a chain of stations at 8 o'clock Wednesday night, Dec. 15.

The Sixty White Minutes, which formerly occupied the hour between 8 and 9 o'clock from WJZ Wednesday nights, will be heard at 8 o'clock Tuesday nights.

American Works Featured.

In the next Maxwell broadcast, Nathaniel Shilkret, leader of the orchestra, will feature composers of the United States only. Victor Herbert, John Philip Sousa, Walter Damrosch, Henry Hadley and George Gershwin are all Americans and there are many others of equal ability on whom Shilkret was able to draw in forming this program.

From Sousa he is able to draw one of the great military marches, while Victor Herbert wrote light operatic music that has few equals. Walter Damrosch, conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra, and Henry Hadley, associate conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, can both be depended upon for classical works of high order, while MacDowell, another American composer, is noted for his ballads and light songs. Gershwin writes music which is really new. The "Rhapsody in Blue," Gershwin's latest composition, is one of the talked-of musical works of the day, and will conclude this program by American composers.

Widely Varied Program.

Shilkret himself is a prolific musical writer and when this program was submitted to the management of WJZ, it was noted that he had modestly omitted his own name from the list. Accordingly, they requested that he put in one of his own works and he inserted one of his paraphrases of Negro spirituals.

The program follows: Orchestra, "Old Colonel," Shilkret; orchestra, selections from "Natoma," Herbert; soloist; quotations; orchestra, movement from "Zuni Indian Suite," Grunn; soloist; paraphrase of a Negro spiritual, Shilkret; orchestra, three dream dances, Coleridge-Taylor; violin soloist, prelude from "Cyrano de Bergerac," Damrosch; orchestra, "Alabama," Spalding; orchestra, "Atonement of Pan" (one movement), Hadley; orchestra, "Gondolier," from "A Day in Venice," Nevin; orchestra, "Scotch Poem," MacDowell; soloist; soloist; orchestra, "Rhapsody in Blue," Gershwin.

JAZZ COMPOSER TO PLAY IN EVEREADY HOUR TUESDAY

The Eveready Hour from KSD next Tuesday evening will bring George Gershwin "jazz composer," before the microphone. The 60 minutes will be occupied by orchestral and vocal selections taken from his musical comedies interspersed with his piano solos. With an orchestral background, he will play his "Rhapsody in Blue," with which he first attracted attention. Gershwin first played the rhapsody in 1924 with the accompaniment of Paul Whiteman's orchestra. It was probably the first attempt by a modern American composer to give serious expression to the rhythms of jazz.

Gershwin is a young man. Knew nothing about music until he was 13 years old when his career began with lessons on the piano. After leaving high school, he played by day for vaudeville acts and at night in cafes and supper clubs. In 1917, he turned out his first song hit, "When I Was So Young and You Were So Beautiful," and since that time his rise has been rapid. Gershwin wrote the scores for "Little Miss Blue Bird," "Tell Me More" and "Lady, Be Good." Selections from "Lady, Be Good" and "Tip Toes" will be heard in this Eveready program.

JAZZ COMPOSER TO PLAY IN EVEREADY HOUR TUESDAY

The Eveready Hour from KSD next Tuesday evening will bring George Gershwin "jazz composer," before the microphone. The 60 minutes will be occupied by orchestral and vocal selections taken from his musical comedies interspersed with his piano solos. With an orchestral background, he will play his "Rhapsody in Blue," with which he first attracted attention. Gershwin first played the rhapsody in 1924 with the accompaniment of Paul Whiteman's orchestra. It was probably the first attempt by a modern American composer to give serious expression to the rhythms of jazz.

Gershwin is a young man. Knew nothing about music until he was 12 years old when his career began with lessons on the piano. After leaving high school, he played by day for vaudeville acts and at night in cafes and supper clubs. In 1917, he turned out his first song hit, "When I Was So Young and You Were So Beautiful," and since that time his rise has been rapid. Gershwin wrote the scores for "Little Miss Blue Bird," "Tell Me More" and "Lady, Be Good." Selections from "Lady, Be Good" and "Tip Toes" will be heard in this Eveready program.

TRADE NOTES

A new radio service company under the name of Midwest Radio Laboratories, 251-252 Field Building, Olive street at Taylor avenue, has been organized recently. The firm has contracted with a number of radio dealers to handle radio sets and aerial installations and other service. The work is to be done by radio experts of experience who are associate members of the Institute of Radio Engineers. They have at their command all the necessary testing and calibrating instruments to handle any kind of service. The firm is prepared to make comparative tests of manufactured receivers or accessories for manufacturers, jobbers or dealers, and to check the work of the home set builder who has become "stumped."

Among the equipment is an interference finder for detecting and locating trouble, power leaks and resultant noises. H. J. Hegwein is service manager. A free consulting service for prospective purchasers of radio receivers or equipment is maintained.

Keep the barrel of the hydrometer clean. Otherwise the lead shot will stick to the side of the barrel and readings will be difficult to take.

ANOTHER DAMROSCH RECITAL SATURDAY

'Die Goetterdaemmerung' Will Be His Subject in Balkite Hour Series.

Walter Damrosch, conductor of the New York Symphony, will continue his series of Wagner lecture-recitals from KSD next Saturday evening, Dec. 18, by broadcasting Acts 1 and 2 of "Die Goetterdaemerung" during the Balkite Hour, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Seated at the piano, Damrosch recites the text of the Wagnerian opera, using a translation of his own which preserves much of the picturesque force of the original. These presentations have proved so attractive that the listeners have almost forgotten there is no orchestra, no singing and no stage properties. Damrosch, who is a brilliant pianist, plays the score on the piano, interspersing the music with explanatory comments.

The lectures on "Die Goetterdaemmerung" will be completed by Damrosch in the Balkite Hour of Jan. 15.

Music lovers may also look forward to a concert by the New York Symphony Orchestra under his direction on Christmas Night.

Balkite "B"-X

for sets of 8 tubes or less

The New Balkite Charger

The greatest charger value in radio. Has a low trickle charge rate and a high rate for rapid charging. Can thus be used both as a trickle or as a high rate charger. Noiseless. Special model for 25-40 cycles. Price $19.50.

Balkite Trickle Charger $10

MODEL K. With 6-volt "A" batteries can be left on continuous or trickle charge thus automatically keeping the battery at full power. Converts your "A" battery into a light socket "A" power supply. With 4-volt batteries can be used as an intermittent charger. Or as a trickle charger if a resistance is added. Rate about .5 ampere. Over 200,000 in use. Price $10.

Balkite Combination

Supplies automatic current to both "A" and "B" circuits. Serves any set now using 4 or 6-volt "A" batteries and requiring not more than 30 milliamperes of "B" current at 135 volts—practically all sets of up to 8 tubes. Price $59.50.

Most radio sets today require light socket "B" power for its economy alone. Yet you needn't buy an untried device. Balkite "B" has been tried and proved. Of 75,000 Balkite "B"s now rendering satisfactory service, in many cases for nearly 4 years, to our knowledge, not one has ever worn out. This record has yet to be equalled by any other "B" device. Balkite "B" is a permanent piece of equipment; it has no tubes.

Three models: Balkite "B"-W for sets of 5 tubes or less requiring 67 to 90 volts—$27.50. Balkite "B"-X for sets of 8 tubes or less including power tubes, capacity 30 milliamperes at 135 volts—$42. Balkite "B"-Y for any standard set, capacity 40 milliamperes at 150 volts—$69. Most owners of even small sets will buy Balkite "B"-X (illustrated) for its reserve power. New 32-Page Booklet Giving Information Usually Known Only To Expert Set Builders

Every radio set contains from one to a dozen fixed condensers. Do you know what they are for? Do you know how to test them to see whether they are working properly? Do you know that there is a way of changing the range of your tuning condensers?—of getting greater selectivity—of improving the tone? All through simple applications of fixed condensers.

The Dubilier Condenser Corporation is now supplying radio fans with a complete and authoritative explanation of the correct use of fixed condensers.

You have often envied the man who could look over your set and by inserting a small fixed condenser somewhere, greatly improve its tone and operation. Do this yourself. Perhaps some defect in reception that you have always thought could not be helped is due to an imperfect condenser.

This new booklet will also give you the most recent information on power amplifiers, filters and battery eliminators. Send 10 cents in stamps or coin for your copy.

NOISES RESULT OF WORN PARTS

Wornout mechanical parts are often mistaken for loose connections in the wiring when the set develops noises and scratching sounds. The wiring is absolutely stationary and it is not at all likely that it will be disturbed in the ordinary use of the set so as to cause a failure due to a loose connection.

Vernier drive shafts and vernier plates will wear loose, and while apparently they are making perfect contact to the metal surfaces of the condenser when the set is brought into a critical condition, as is the case when receiving distant stations, will cause noises that might be thought due to a loose connection in the wiring.

RADIO FANS CONFUSED BY NEW POWER TUBES

Simple Changes in Receiver Usually Required to Get Better Results.

The newly marketed power tubes are causing a little confusion among radio fans.

Merely installing one of them in a socket doesn't always bring the results advertised for them. Changes often are required in the receivers.

These changes are simple and easy enough for any fan to make, but they're important for the proper application of the power tubes.

The only types of power tubes that might give trouble are the amplifiers. The 200-A type of power detector may be installed without a change. That's for distance, selectivity and clarity.

But it is the 171 type for storage battery receiver that requires slight changes for proper results.

The standard audio frequency amplifier circuit on most manufactured receivers calls for two transformers, of varying ratio, one for the first stage of audio frequency and the other for the second stage. Instead of the transformers some receivers use a system of resistance coupling.

Hook-up Nearly Alike.

In either case, the hook-up is practically alike. Where a receiver calls for C battery voltage, the F— of both the first and second audio transformers or resistances are connected to the negative terminal of the C battery. That's usually 4½ volts of negative potential.

For use of a 171-type power tube these negative 4½ volts should go only to the F— of the first audio transformer or resistance and the connection to the second audio transformer should be taken off.

In its stead, the F— of the second audio transformer or resistance goes to the higher negative voltage of the C battery required by the use of the power tube, and in accordance with the amount of B battery, or plate, voltage used.

With 90 volts of B battery, which is all that's needed for ordinary home use, the power amplifier requires a negative C battery voltage of 16½ volts. That's just an addition of 12 volts to the original 4½, going to the F— of the second audio coupling.

Coupling Essential.

The positive of the C battery connects with the negative terminal of the A battery, or merely to the C positive terminal, of the receiver, if it has one.

In any case, whether a receiver calls for C battery voltage or not, this is the change to be made in it, for use of the 171-type of power amplifier.

Higher B battery voltages are not recommended, unless much greater volume is desired. In this case, however, a loud speaker coupling system is essential, to intervene between set and loud speaker so as not to cause distortion or injury to the reproducer. This means the intervention of either a 1 to 1 radio transformer between set and loud speaker, or a system of choke and condenser. At the same time the negative C voltage for the second audio transformer should be increased proportionately. For B battery voltage of 135 volts, a negative C voltage of 27 volts is required.

In the case of dry battery sets, the 120-type tube is used. Here, however, an adapter made especially for the purpose is necessary.

BROADCASTING TO INDIA'S TEEMING MILLIONS PLANNED

Two super-power stations, similar to Daventry, are to transmit to India daily, one at Calcutta, the other in Bombay. Eric Dunston, noted announcer of the British Broadcasting Service, has been drafted and leaves England soon to be director of these stations. This information comes from R. H. Allerdyce Arnrott, managing director of Freed-Eisemann, Ltd. (Great Britain).

Dunston, accepting the position of general manager of the Indian Broadcasting Co., Ltd., declared it was a call to duty, because he felt that the company would do much to spread the lessons of health and sanitation among the people of India, where 90 per cent of the 240,000,000 population is illiterate. Dunston believes interest in radio will spread like wildfire throughout India.

It is expected that centers for broadcast reception, available to the public, will be established in Indian villages.

The Atlantic Broadcasting Corporation of New York has purchased the Grebe stations, including the new super-power 5000-watt transmitter WAHG and the 500-watt station WBOQ. The new organization will have its New York studio at 113 West Fifty-seventh street, New York. All transmitters will be at Richmond Hill, Long Island. The name of WAHG has been changed to WABC.

The first program will be broadcast Friday night beginning at 6:30 central time. BROADCASTING TO INDIA'S TEEMING MILLIONS PLANNED

Two super-power stations, similar to Daventry, are to transmit to India daily, one at Calcutta, the other in Bombay. Eric Dunston, noted announcer of the British Broadcasting Service, has been drafted and leaves England soon to be director of these stations. This information comes from K. L. Allerdyce Arnrott, managing director of Freed-Eisemann, Ltd. (Great Britain).

Dunston, accepting the position of general manager of the Indian Broadcasting Co., Ltd., declared it was a call to duty, because he felt that the company would do much to spread the lessons of health and sanitation among the people of India, where 90 per cent of the 345,000,000 population is illiterate. Dunston believes interest in radio will spread like wildfire through India.

It is expected that centers for broadcast reception, available for the public, will be established in Indian villages.

WEALTH OF MELODY IN KSD OPERA 'NORMA'

Works of Older Italian School Will Be Sung Tomorrow Night.

A tabloid version of the grand opera "Norma" will be broadcast from KSD at 9 o'clock tomorrow night by the WEAF Grand Opera Company, under the direction of Cesare Sodero.

The following soloists will sing the principal roles: Norma, Frances Sebel, soprano; Adalgisa, Devora Nadworney, contralto; Pollione, Giuseppe di Bendetto, tenor; Orovesa, Nino Rulsi, basso.

Those who weary of the declamatory modern opera in which the music is constantly changing in agreement with the most swift and subtle moods that emotion throws upon the stage, at the expense of clearly defined melody, will have no quarrel with the simplicity of Bellini's opera, "Norma." The technique of the work is that of the older Italian opera school, in which airs and ensemble numbers, based on the simplest harmonic and melodic architecture, are plentiful. This does not mean, however, that emotional quality is absent, or even meager. Such numbers as "Casta Diva" or the duet in the final scene are remarkable for their sincerity of emotional expression, notwithstanding their clear simplicity of style.

The opera tells the story of Norma, high priestess in a Druid Temple in Gaul, shortly after the Roman conquest, who secretly violates her vows by becoming the lover of Pollione, a lieutenant in the Roman army. When his love for her grows cold and he seeks to betray another priestess in the temple, Norma learns of his infidelity and threatens him. Her threats and pleadings being of no avail, she arouses her followers against the Romans.

Pollione is captured as a spy and Norma claims the right to kill him. Her love, however, is too strong and she confesses her guilt, knowing it will mean death for her. At this wonderful display of self-sacrifice, Pollione finds his love returning and dies with her on the sacrificial funeral pyre.

NORWEGIAN CHAMBER MUSIC IN VIKING PERIOD ON KSD

A half hour of Norwegian chamber music will be given in The Viking period Tuesday evening, through KSD, at 7 o'clock. This program will be looked forward to by lovers of chamber music from the works of composers of Scandinavia, for the Tollefsen Trio has already achieved distinct success in previous programs in "The Vikings" half hour.

Since 1904, when Carl Tollefsen first formed the trio, the three artists have crossed and recrossed the country innumerable times carrying their musical message into many a community. The three artists, Augusta Tollefsen, pianist; Carl H. Tollefsen, violinist, and Paul Gruppe, 'cellist, are all of solo caliber.

Margaret Olsen will again sing songs of old Norway.

OPERA BY WGN SATURDAY

As the next offering in its "Great Moments from Grand Opera," the WGN Vocal Group will present in tabloid form Mascagni's "Cavaleria Rusticana," at 9 o'clock next Saturday night. All of the important arias and duets will be sung.

Assisting the Vocal Group is the WGN studio ensemble, furnishing orchestral accompaniment to all singing as well as playing the overture.

In a Speed Buggy trip at 8:15 Wednesday night from WBBM, Billy Spears, international travel talker, will take his listeners to Benares, the sacred city of India. Each year more than a million pilgrims visit the city's 1500 temples and mosques.

The trip to Benares will be a continuation of the journey across India, which will be begun tonight, Dec. 12, with a visit to Calcutta. fakirs, who earn their living by Spears will describe and expose the self-torture.

WALES TO HAVE RADIO ROOM

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Prince of Wales is setting a new fashion as far as English homes are concerned by installing a special "radio room" at Marlborough House, where he will take up his residence shortly. Normally in English mansions radio sets are installed in the drawing room or sitting room, but this necessitates the removal of furniture if listeners desire to jazz to the loud speaker. So the Prince has decided to have a special room fitted up for the most powerful sets where he and his friends are able to listen to any radio program and also dance when inclined. The idea is being extensively copied in many big mansions.

Two spider web coils make a good loose coupler.

GIRL SINGS IN GRAND OPERA WHEN SHE KNEW BUT ONE ARIA

Adele Parkhurst, whose voice has been heard in the broadcasting of the WEAF Light Opera Company, saved a performance of "Aida" which was broadcast by KSD in the Monday night grand opera hour recently, by an exhibition of vocal skill and gameness.

Frances Sebel, dramatic soprano, cast for the role of Aida, succumbed to a cold, after the performance had begun. It was impossible for her to sing and while Cesare Sodero and the WEAF Grand Opera Company, as well as Arnold Morgan, announcer, started the customary wringing of hands, Adele Parkhurst seized the score and said, "Let's go!"

She had never sung it before. Much of the music, except the heroine's best-known aria, was entirely unfamiliar to her. She went on and did a remarkably creditable job. Her voice, though light in quality—more suitable to the lyrics of Sullivan—proved adequate to taxing demands of the important role.

A storage battery should be charged from 18 to 24 times a year.

ENLIVENS HIS HOTEL EVENINGS WITH RADIO

Traveling Man Listens Nights With 3-Tube Outfit He Devised.

Radio evenings for the [illegible] are easily had, according to H. Clode Jr., a newspaper man who ranges the country and listens no matter where he may be.

Clode began listening in with his own version of a portable set about three years ago, and is still using the same three-tube receiver, a Crosley. The set fits in one end of a suitcase with five [illegible] 22½-volt "B" batteries and a [illegible] of dry cell "A" batteries.

For an aerial, for local stations he uses a large coil spring, which can be stretched out to a length of 20 to 30 feet. When he wants to listen in on more distant stations, he attaches from 30 to 40 feet of aerial wire to the spring and either lays it on the floor or drops it out a window of his hotel. He also carries a "pup tent" pole of the type used in the war and has put a screweye in one end of it. This pole he sometimes sticks out a window and threads the aerial wire through the eye so that it hangs away from the building wall.

He first used ear phones, but finally built a loud speaker out of a speaker unit, a cardboard tube and a paper megaphone. The speaker is collapsible, so stows in small space. His ground wire he fastens with a clamp to a bathroom pipe.

Clode says he brings in enough stations to give him an enjoyable evening in almost every hotel at which he stops. In one Toledo hotel which has its own electric plant, however, broadcast reception is virtually impossible.

In a downtown St. Louis hotel the other night he listened in on all the locals, a number of Chicago stations, KDKA at Pittsburgh and Cincinnati and Cleveland stations. In Detroit he picked up WBAP at Fort Worth, Tex. Reception is unusually good in Cincinnati and Louisville he found.

'RADI-A' TAKES PLACE OF 'A' BATTERY AND CHARGER

"Radi-A" is a new instrument that repaces both "A" battery and charger. It permits operation of any radio receiving set directly from 110-volt alternating current circuit of 50 or 60 cycles at the low operating cost of approximately a half cent per hour. It is said to maintain a receiver at peak reception at all times.

The operating mechanism consists of five simple units—transformer, Tungar rectifying bulb, electrolytic condenser, choke coil and automatic switch. These are in a compact, pressed steel cabinet which is finished in sokia diamond crystal.

The instrument requires little attention and contains but one moving part—the automatic switch. The purpose of this switch is to provide automatic control of power within the Radi-"A" as the radio set switch is turned on and off.

"Radi-A" is adapted to use with any standard receiving set of four to eight quarter-ampere tubes. By the use of a dry type of electrolytic condenser automatic regulation is obtained so that no adjustments are necessary when using different numbers of tubes. Variations in the voltage of the lighting line are handled automatically by a self-regulating feature in the transformer.

A further convenience in connection with "Radi-A" is the "B" eliminator plug, receptacle, permitting connection of "B" eliminator recently to "Radi-A" so that both the "B" elimina or and "Radi-A" are controlled at the same time by the radio receiver switch.

"Radi-A" is a product of the Briggs and Stratton Corporation, Milwaukee. It is distributed by the Brown & Hall Supply Co.

BETTER KFI PROGRAMS FOR EASTERN 'DX' FANS

KFI, Los Angeles, is revising its late program schedule since the promise of a fine season for distance reception held out in the late summer is now being fulfilled by unusual clarity of reception.

With all indications tending to prove that the radio audience no longer is prone to write letters, KFI has sensed little difference in its volume of Eastern mail. The change visible in the response, however, is in the type of communication. The bulk of those who at one time were thrilled by the sound of a carrier wave and letters of some station hard to get, now demand that the program bring in something that is pleasing to listen to.

After wading through a group of letters from the Atlantic Coast that spoke of clear reception of KFI, but regretted the use of that station's drive and clarity to "put a ukulele solo to the Atlantic Coast," Robert Hurd, KFI program manager, has started to revise his late program schedules, given over for years to popular music. It will not be long before a St. Louis listener will be able to listen to a Bruch cello concerto from Los Angeles instead of "Hot Henry Brown."

He also carries a "pup t" pole of the type used in the r and has put a screweye in one d of it. This pole he sometimes cks out a window and threads e aerial wire through the eye so at it hangs away from the build- wall.

He first used ear phones, but ally built a loud speaker out of speaker unit, a cardboard tube d a paper megaphone. This aker is collapsible, so stows in all space. His ground wire he stens with a clamp to a bath- om pipe.

Clode says he brings in enough ations to give him an enjoyable ening in almost every hotel at hich he stops. In one Toledo otel which has its own electric ant, however, broadcast recep- on is virtually impossible.

In a downtown St. Louis hotel e other night he listened in on l the locals, a number of Chi- go stations, KDKA at Pittsburg nd Cincinnati and Cleveland sta- ons. In Detroit he picked up BAP at Fort Worth, Tex. Recep- on is unusually good in Cincinnati nd Louisville he found.

RADI-A' TAKES PLACE OF 'A' BATTERY AND CHARGER

"Radi-A" is a new instrument hat repaces both "A" battery and harger. It permits operation of ny radio receiving set directly rom 110-volt alternating current ircuit of 50 or 60 cycles at the ow operating cost of approximate- y a half cent per hour. It is said o maintain a receiver at peak re- eption at all times.

The operating mechanism con- sists of five simple units—trans- former, Tungar rectifying bulb, electrolytic condenser, choke coil nd automatic switch. These are n a compact, pressed steel cabinet hich is finished in sokia diamond rystal.

The instrument requires little ttention and contains but one oving part—the automatic switch. he purpose of this switch is to rovide automatic control of power within the Radi-"A" as the radio et switch is turned on and off.

"Radi-A" is adapted to use with ny standard receiving set of four o eight quarter-ampere tubes. By he use of a dry type of electroly- ic condenser automatic regulation s obtained so that no adjustments are necessary when using different numbers of tubes. Variations in the voltage of the lighting line are handled automatically by a self- eguating feature in the transfor- mer.

A further convenience in connec- tion with "Radi-A" is the "B" elimi- inator plug receptacle, permitting connection of "B" eliminator di- rectly to "Radi-A" so that both the "B" elmina or and "Radi-A" are controlled at the same time by the radio receiver switch.

"Radi-A" is a product of the Briggs and Stratton Corporation, Milwaukee. It is distributed by the Brown & Hall Supply Co.

BETTER KFI PROGRAMS FOR EASTERN 'DX' FANS

KFI, Los Angeles, is revising its late program schedule since the promise of a fine season for dis- tance reception held out in the late summer is now being fulfilled by unusual clarity of reception.

With all indications tending to prove that the radio audience no longer is prone to write letters, KFI has sensed little difference in its volume of Eastern mail. One change visible in the response, however, is in the type of com- munication. The bulk of those who at one time were thrilled by the sound of a carrier wave and letters of some station hard to get, now demand that the programs bring in something that is pleas- ing to listen to.

After wading through a group of letters from the Atlantic Coast that spoke of clear reception of KFI, but regretted the use of that station's drive and clarity to "poke a ukulele solo to the Atlantic Coast," Robert Hurd, KFI pro- gram manager, has started to re- vise his late program schedules, given over for years to popular music. It will not be long before a St. Louis listener will be able to listen to a Bruch cello concerto from Los Angeles instead of "Red Hot Henry Brown."

Expresses Perfectly the Christmas Spirit

WHAT greater gift could you give those you love than the joy of awakening Christmas morning to find that the Synchrophase had joined the family circle?

The Synchrophase expresses perfectly the Christmas spirit and will keep it alive for years to come because of several features which make Grebe reception so unusually satisfactory: for example,

The Colortone which gives the notes of voice or instrument their natural timbre irrespective of the loud speaker; Binocular Coils, which pick the stations you want, then keep others from interfering.

Ask a Grebe dealer to show you how these and other exclusive Grebe developments result in such superior reception.

Order early so as to have your Synchrophase installed in time for Christmas eve.

Colortone Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. gives you control of tone quality independent of the loud speaker

Glass Insulators Best for Winter. Use glass insulators to protect the aerial of the set against snow and sleet during the winter. Glass is impervious to water and other weathering conditions, and it is this quality which gives it value on ship radio installations. The use of glass as insulation reduces the leakage of radio energy, whereas other insulating materials might weaken under the effects of snow, sleet and continuous rains.

VIOLA AND PIANO SOLOS FROM WJZ NEXT FRIDAY

The next Baldwin hour to be broadcast by station WJZ and WGY at 9 o'clock Friday evening will feature Yolanda Vaczi, pianist and Egon Frank Kornstein, viola soloist. They will be supported by the Baldwin String Quartet, composed of Jacques Jacobs, first violin; Alexander Koszegi, second violin; Lazos Shuk, cello, and Egon Frank Kornstein, viola. Mme. Vaczi has been heard frequently in recital in the Eastern half of the United States.

The object of the Baldwin Hour is to bring to the radio audience high-grade music played by competent artists. An effort is made to persuade the public to listen to the music rather than to the artist. Of course, all of the artists selected to appear as soloists in these series of Baldwin programs are chosen for their ability as musicians, their intelligence and thorough musical education.

The program includes: Eighteenth Century French Chamber music. Aria, Francoeur; Menuet, Milandre; Tambourin, Mondonville, played by Mr. Kornstein. Ballade in F major, Chopin; Impromptu in E, Reinhold; Etude in F minor, Chopin, played by Mme. Vaczi. Quartet F major, Tschaikowsky, played by the Baldwin String Quartet.

Worth Remembering.

Among the three best qualifications of a loud speaker are: It must be able to reproduce high tones, low tones and handle any volume delivered to it without distortion.

BARITONE WITH ORCHESTRA FROM WJZ TOMORROW NIGHT

Richard Hale, baritone, will be the soloist with Henry Hadley's orchestra from WJZ at 7:30 tomorrow night.

Hale will sing "Blind Ploughman," by Clark; Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me," "The Toreador" song from "Carmen," and two Negro spirituals "Some of These Days," and "My Lord, What a Morning."

The orchestra program: Selection from "Chimes of Normandy," Planquette; "Narcissus," Nevin; "Wedding of the Winds," Waltz; Barcarolle from "Tales of Hoffman," Offenbach; solo, Bizet; "Pizzicata," Delibes; Largo from "New World Symphony," Dvorak; Serenade Pierne and selection from "Il Trovatore."

The latest invention in radio broadcasting sets in Germany is housed in an armored motor cycle in such a manner that only two minutes' preparation is required before sending a message.

The director of the station will auction off a touring car, which has been given by a local automobile dealer for the purpose, the proceeds to be used for Christmas presents for wards of the State Board of Charities and Corrections.

Bids will be received by wire or mail and announced on the air.

The gift is a part of the Christmas planned for more than 400 children under care of the State, some in the children's home maintained by the State and others in private homes.

SHOWS POWER OF RADIO SET

S. S. Ellis, dealer at Sergeant Bluff, Ia., decided to show his fellow Iowans how much volume they can get from Atwater Kent radio when they want it.

He hooked up a Model 20 Compact and a Model L speaker in the center of the town outdoors. The speaker he placed on a stand six feet above the ground. Then he tuned in on a soprano singing at WOAW. With maximum power turned on, it is said, the singer was heard out in the country two and one-half miles away!

DUTCH CAPITAL OFFERS RADIO PROGRAMS TO PHONE USERS

Holland's capital offers telephone users the benefit of radio programs without the assistance of a special radio set.

All the telephone subscriber has to do is insert a plug into a contrivance attached to his instrument and he immediately can listen to the English and French cast services.

The ordinary telephone service is not interfered with. A call automatically cuts the radio off and connection is re-established when the call is finished.

LONG DISTANCE FAN GETS ALL CONTINENTS

California Amateur Has Communicated With England by 19,000-Mile Route.

Brandon Wentworth, a senior at Stanford University, Cal., talks to friends on all continents.

On a few occasions Wentworth has communicated 19,000 miles with England, westward around the world.

Daylight may cut down his distance, mountains may prove barriers, and deserts may interrupt his signals—but in the night hours, his ear clamped tightly to a phone, he goes out for a distance and gets it.

On 20 and 40 meter bands, Wentworth plies his key. He employs a 50-watt tube in a three-coil Meissner circuit, of tuned grid-tuned plate type. It is of low-loss construction and with a normal input of 200 watts.

With this simple apparatus he has talked to England, Canada, Alaska, Panama, Cuba, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Italy, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, China, Philippines, French Indo-China, India, Tahiti, Samoa, Tasmania and Haiti.

Wentworth first attained prominence as a radio fan when he established communication for stricken Santa Barbara, following the earthquake. Within a few hours after the major quake he had communicated by means of a very old spark outfit and a few batteries with San Pedro, and for four days he handled 500 messages daily with amateur station 6ZH at San Ysidro.

Wentworth has achieved his success, he says, because of his willingness to stay everlastingly at his key and receivers.

"I sit at the key of 601 (as his station is known) night after night, and nearly every morning for an hour," he says. "If I do one piece of good DX work in a week I feel I am amply repaid."

Wentworth's station is about 350 feet above sea level, but relative to the surrounding valley, it is high. And it has a clear sweep over the Pacific Ocean.

By reason of his excellent location, he works India, French Indo-China, Australia and New Zealand in the early morning hours and South America, South Africa and eastern United States between 7 and 8 in the evening.

The young amateur spends several hours each day in his shack, often sleeping there to be ready before dawn to sit at the pounder. During many a gale which threatened to blow the shack from its foundations he has remained at his post, awaiting the break and distant signals.

DEALER, TO SELL RECEIVING SETS, EQUIPS RADIO HOMES

The traditional method of demonstrating radio sets in the home has been broken by S. H. Lynch, manager of a shop at Dallas, Tex.

Four "ideal radio homes" have been equipped with radio sets in four sections of the city. One, the most elaborate, is in Greenland Hills. One is in Oak Lawn and two are in Oak Cliff.

Instead of going to the prospective owner's house and installing temporarily a radio set of only one type or model the salesman takes the prospect to the nearest of the homes or arranges to meet him there at a certain hour during the evening. Every model radio set handled by Lynch is hooked up ready to turn on. There is no delay of erecting an antenna, fixing a ground and connecting batteries.

Radio engineers have erected the antennas for the homes and established perfect grounds. The radio sets are hooked up permanently and scientifically, just as they will be in the home of the customers after the sales.

WBAO RESUMES OPERATION

By the Associated Press.

DECATUR, Ill., Dec. 11.—The 100-watt Milliken University radio station, WBAO, has resumed operation and is to be on the air Monday and Thursday evenings on a wave length of 270 meters.

Operation will be under direction of Millikin conservatory. Educational lectures by Millikin professors and musical programs by students will be broadcast, as also basketball games played in the Millikin gymnasium here.

FREE RADIO MEDICAL AID ON SHIPS GIVEN BY 75 STATIONS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — The free radio medical service inaugurated by the United Fruit Co. and the Tropical Radio Telegraph Co. more than three years ago was greatly extended last year and it now is offered through 15 stations, operated in the southern part of the United States and throughout Central America.

According to an announcement in the radio service bulletin of the Department of Commerce, the medical service may be obtained without cost aboard any vessel of any nationality that is without a ship's doctor. Messages addressed to any of the 15 stations or to any of the ships of the United Fruit Co. will bring medical advice immediately.

The service also has been extended to permit doctors aboard any ship in southern waters to consult with doctors at land hospitals of both Central America and the Gulf Coast of the United States regarding treatment for patients at sea.

Radiograms in the medical service are given precedence over all dispatches with the exception of SOS calls.

'A' POWER NEEDS NO UPKEEP

The simplicity of the new radio "A" Autopower just produced by the Westinghouse Union Battery Co. anticipates the demand of radio users for less complicated power devices than they have been able to obtain in the past.

This new Westinghouse unit combines A battery and charger in a convenient unit. It operates from a light socket and supplies a continuous current of full, even A power.

The single switch of the Autopower turns the set off and on. There is no liquid in the charger and there are no tubes. Consequently, the Autopower requires no upkeep, and cannot get out of order. It is said to operate without any hum.

NPU AT APIA, SAMOA, HEARS PROGRAM FROM KFAB, LINCOLN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN, Neb.—Radio demonstrated in a striking manner its ability to make itself heard half way round the world on the morning of Dec. 1, when KFAB at Lincoln delivered to the naval radio station NPU, at Apia, Western Samoa, an entire program with clearness.

Several months ago Quincy F. Roberts, American Vice Consul at Apia, picked up the Lincoln station early one evening and wrote acknowledging the receipts of a special midnight program that KFAB was sending for distant listeners. From this letter arose a plan to make a thorough test.

Roberts and his associates arranged with the Lincoln station for a date when the consular and naval service in Samoa would be listening in. It was arranged that KFAB was to begin its broadcasting in the regular way, with normal power and wave length, at 3 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 1, the time in Samoa then being Nov. 30, 9:30 p. m.

A cablegram from Roberts stated that the entire program was received clearly.

Corroded terminals on [illegible] batteries are a hindrance to the passage of the normal amount of current.

When Barnum Took First Shot At the Varieties

His Opening Headliner Was Ancient Negress Who Claimed to Have Been the Nurse of George Washington.

THE article on this page last Sunday telling of the celebration of the centennial of vaudeville, has brought a flood of reminiscences from the old-timers in the varieties. It is true, of course, that there is no one among those present today who was in the neighborhood when P. T. Barnum, the world's greatest showman, broke into the business by way of the varieties but Bert Lytell, who was the headliner at the Orpheum last week—he is not such an old-timer, at that—had at his finger tips the story of Barnum's start.

It seems that less than 10 years after the first all-variety bill was given at the Lafayette Theater, in New York, in December, 1826, Barnum had entered the field, in a humble way, in a tiny hall on Chatham street. His first exhibit consisted of Joice Heth, an ancient Negress who purported to be the property of Augustine Washington, father of George, and the first nurse of the future father of his country. There is every evidence that Barnum himself believed implicitly in Joice's claims.

At this time, in 1835, Barnum and his wife were running a little boarding house in New York. One of their visitors, Coley Bartram of Redding, Conn., told Barnum that he had just disposed of his rights in the person of Joice Heth, who was then being exhibited in Philadelphia, and he called Barnum's attention to articles concerning the woman in several Philadelphia papers. The showman's instinct was instantly aroused, and Barnum left for Philadelphia to see Joice.

He found an ancient crone lying helpless on a couch, her lower ex-

Nationalizing the Movies By Selling Tickets Good Any Old Time in Any City

The 700 Publix Theaters Throughout the Country in Combination Plan to Corner the Traveling Public—the "Invasion" of Foreign Stars and Directors.

By NIE.

THERE is to be no escape for the movie fan. The coming and going—chiefly the latter—public is to be tied fast by a plan which is now being worked out by Famous Players-Lasky and which is to go into effect February 1. Naturally enough the scheme is to tie the customers to Famous Players theaters and the idea is a far reaching one.

A subsidiary organization of Famous, which has been laughingly referred to as the octopus of the movies, is the Publix Theaters Corporation. This organization controls no less than 700 theaters throughout the country, the Skouras houses in St. Louis, the Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central being part of the chain. There is at least one such theater in every large city, and as the number would indicate in most of the smaller cities.

Soon after the new year Adolph Zukor and his lieutenants will place on sale books of tickets which will be good in any old theater in any old city, that is in any Publix theater, anywhere. Although prices vary slightly in different towns, being highest in New York, a combination book of tickets good anywhere will be sold at prices which prevail in St. Louis. In addition there will be a 20 per cent discount on a $20 book and a 10 per cent discount of $10 books.

Now in New York ticket speculators do business around the movie theaters just as they do at the legitimate houses. Just how these gentlemen will be prevented from purchasing a hundred books or a thousand, for that matter, in St. Louis or Chicago and putting them on sale at par in New York is not yet outlined. Perhaps Mr. Zukor, who brooks no opposition, will buy up the ticket speculators just as he has bought up the theaters.

THERE is no distinction between American and European pictures, no comparison between American pictures and European pictures as such—only between good pictures and bad pictures.

"Give five different directors the same story to make and you will have five entirely different pictures."

These are contentions of Lothar Mendes, German directorial "discovery," who has been brought to America to direct a First National series, the first of which is "The Prince of Tempters," which is at the Ambassador this week.

Seldom has anyone aroused more advance interest in film circles than this protagonist of the UFA school which has given the cinema world such remarkable offerings as "Passion," "Variety" and "The Last Laugh."

Mendes arrived, reported at the studio, watched—and studied. That was all there was to it. He avoided interviewers, stuck to his task and took no advantage of opportunities for purely personal glorification.

Part of Mendes' fetish for thoroughness lies in his conviction that the public constantly wants better pictures. He scoffs the platitudes that motion picture audiences have the "intelligence of morons."

"The people who think that pictures must be lowered to the mental ability of an ignorant audience are going to find themselves in a serious plight," he says. "The public is not an ignorant audience, but it has been a long suffering one. Sooner or later it will turn.

"Unless we realize the situation in time we shall find them leaving us. The truth is that they are demanding a more intelligent type of picture right along; and the producer who is awake to the times is going to make that kind of picture.

"To counteract the lack of good screen stories, provided we are unable to obtain intelligent material from books and plays, we shall have to develop special stories for films," Mendes contends. "To a certain extent that is being done now. If we are to gratify the public's demand for more intelligent pictures we shall have to provide more intelligent stories and that.

Some Reflections On a Disaster Of Showmanship in Philadelphia

How Edward Bok Would Have Made the Sesqui-Centennial Appealing—"The Pirates of Penzance" Produced in New York.

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.

IN addition to reporting that the Winthrop Ames revival of "The Pirates of Penzance" at the Plymouth is as joyous a feast for the Savoyards as was his "Iolanthe," I should like to make some reflections on a great disaster.

All the New York editorial pages have been rustling this week with little paragraphs deploring the most abyssmal failure in the history of the show business—the catastrophe known to Philadelphia and the United States Post-office as the Sesquicentennial Exposition. It may have been my well-known imaginative streak which led me to detect in these editorials the faint note of relish wherewith we are all prone to contemplate the misfortune of others. In addition to reciting the tale of millions lost, of scant attendance, of unpreparedness, of dull showmanship, these comments have all wound up with farryingly worded pronunciamentos to the effect that the day of such expositions is over—what with the radio, I suppose, and the movies, the tabloids, Will Rogers, pyorrhea and jazz music.

They may be right, and yet at the sound of these familiar alibis, I confess to a dim stir of skepticism. I have heard it said so often. I have had too many managers tell me (with tears streaming down their cheeks) that the mean old public did not want and would not support the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, a dictum repeated solemnly until this year, when Winthrop Ames introduced the ingenious, the reckless, the shatteringly novel notion of producing them well instead of badly. You should have seen the hair-pulling, the garment-rending and the occasional dashes of mayhem which kept things lively all last week around the box-office of the Plymouth where the previously somnolent citizenry were trying to get seats to Monday's performance of "The Pirates of Penzance."

THEN, after some performance of "Hamlet," with scenery that would have been rejected as demode by the Coates Opera House in Kansas City in 1891, with an only fair Ophelia and with the sweest Prince himself played by some seasoned actor of 70, I have read too many automatic editorials on the fact that the public do not want Shakspeare any more.

But I think the immediate seed of this skepticism was planted one afternoon three or four years ago in a room at the Hotel Roosevelt. For reasons which now escape me, I was having tea with that extraordinary man, Edward Bok. I know that in certain quarters this quondam editor of the "Ladies' Home Journal" is regarded with levity, that there has ever been a tendency among the unregenerate to confuse him faintly with that arch-correspondent of Mr. Bennett's, Paris Herald, the Old Lady from Philadelphia.

But it is a great asset to any community to have such a man as he on the loose in it, and I remember vividly when he was roughly sketching his notions of what the Sesquicentennial should be, I was fired with a previously incredible passion to attend it. He pictured an appeal to all the countries of the world to send what Americans would really want to see (from Holland) a few good Rembrandts and a Dutch village, cheeses and all, to be set up intact on the banks of the Schuylkill. BEHIND THE SCREENS

NORMA TALMADGE last week began work on a modern screen version of "Camille." Gilbert Roland, a young Spaniard, is appearing opposite the star as her leading man. Rose Dione is another to whom a role of importance has been assigned. Fred Niblo is for the first time directing Miss Talmadge in "Camille," which is being produced in Hollywood.

Malcolm St. Clair will direct Richard Dix's next picture, "Knockout Riley," which is to go into production following the completion of "Paradise for Two." "Knockout Riley" is a rough-and-ready fight picture, based on Albert Payson Terhune's short story, "The Hunch."

Jailbirds, Inc., a story by William H. Clifford, will be Ray Rockett's first production on the West Coast for First National. Filming started Dec. 6 with Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill in the leading roles. Prior to his departure for California Mr. Rockett produced "The Perfect Sap," featuring Ben Lyon and Pauline Starke. This was the last picture to be made at the First National Studios in New York, since closed. "The Perfect Sap," adapted from the stage success, "Not Herbert," will be an early release.

Ernest Gillen, a young Mexican, has completed his role in the Robert Kane production of "The Song of the Dragon," being produced in New York with Dorothy Mackaill, Lowell Sherman and Lawrence Gray in leading parts.

"Easy Pickings" is now in the cutting room. Filming has just been finished. Anna Q. Nilsson, Kenneth Harlan and Billy Bevan are the featured players.

The title of Constance Talmadge's latest vehicle has been changed from "Carlotta" to "All Night." This is an original story written especially for the star by Hans Kraly, who was responsible for "Her Sister From Paris." The supporting cast includes Antonio Moreno, Edward Martindel, Julianne Johnston, Michael Vavitch and Arthur Thalasso.

Hedda Hopper and Einar Hanson have been assigned important roles in Frank Lloyd's next picture.

Screen Producers Rushing To Turn Out More Comedies

Just How Funny They Will Be When Completed, of Course, Remains to Be Seen, But Directors Think Public Demands Laughs.

By ROBERT E. SHERWOOD.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.

THE craze for comedy continues on the screen; instead of waning, as many professional predicters prophesied, it is actually increasing to amazing proportions.

I have studied carefully the various announcements of pictures that are to come, and it appears that the gag crop is to be a bumper one this season. Possibly 10 out of every 100 productions on schedule are of a deliberately serious nature, and even these will be filled, to the greatest possible extent, with attempts at humor.

Examine, for example, the announced plans of Famous-Players-Lasky—a corporation that manages to keep its finger glued to the public pulse and knows, as well as anyone can possibly know, just what it is that the public wants.

Famous Players has 39 Paramount pictures on schedule. Of these, two will feature Dorothy Gish, two Bebe Daniels, two Wallace Beery, one Harold Lloyd, one Eddie Cantor, one Ed Wynn, one Raymond Griffith, three Richard Dix, two Esther Ralston, one Glida Gray, two Florence Vidor, two Betty Compson, two Clara Bow, one Thomas Meighan, one Pola Negri and one W. C. Fields.

There will also be "specials" from various directors, such as Malcolm St. Clair, D. W. Griffith, James Cruze and Edward Sutherland.

With the exception of "The Sorrows of Satan" (the D. W. Griffith picture), "Hotel Imperial" (the Pola Negri picture), and possibly one or two Zane Grey Western melodramas, all the Paramount offerings from now on will be comic in intent.

Whether they will all actually be funny is something else again.

FAMOUS PLAYERS—with Eddie Cantor, Harold Lloyd, Ed Wynn, Bebe Daniels, Raymond Griffith, Clara Bow, Wallace Beery, W. C. Fields and Douglas MacLean on its string—is going in more heavily for comedy than any other company.

The other Hollywood producers, however, are making comedians of those stars who previously were dedicated to more somber subjects. First National has converted Ben Lyon, Corinne Griffith, Colleen Moore, Dorothy Mackaill, Lewis Stone, Doris Kenyon and even Milton Sills into farceurs. Metro-Goldwyn has done likewise with John Gilbert, Norma Shearer, Lon Chaney, Conrad Nagel, William Haines, Ramon Novarro and Marion Davies.

OF course, the acknowledged comedy stars—Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton, Harry Langdon, Johnny Hines, Douglas MacLean, Syd Chaplin and Reginald Denny—are prospering as they never prospered before, and so are the lesser luminaries who furnish what is known as "comedy relief."

Consider the number of pictures that you have seen lately in which Chester Conklin, Charlie Murray, Bert Roche, Karl Dane, George Cooper and other out-and-out clowns played a not inconspicuous part.

Consider also the fact that "What Price Glory?" one of the

An Orchestral Program Purely Is the Week's Offering by Symphony

Alexander Scriabin's "Poem of Ecstacy" to Be Presented for the First Time in St. Louis by Ganz—Program Given Over Largely to Russian Music.

WITH a greatly augmented band of instrumentalists the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at its concerts at the Odeon, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening this week will present a purely orchestral program, the feature of which will be the presentation for the first time in St. Louis of Alexander Scriabin's "Poem of Ecstacy," one of the most unusual musical works of the present century. For the Scriabin "Poem" the orchestra's brass choir will be increased to include eight horns, five trumpets, three trombones and bass tuba, while every resource of woodwind and strings will be utilized and the orchestra will be reinforced by an organ.

The Scriabin work comes at the end of the first half of the program which is devoted entirely to Russian music. That half might easily tell the story of the development of Russian music—and suggest the evolution of what is known as modern music—since it includes Glinka's "Overture to Ruslan and Lyudmila" in which both the Oriental colorings and the whole-tone scale so common in music of today first make their appearance, Borodin's "In the Steppes of Central Asia," and Rimsky-Korsakoff's whimsical little Scherzo "The Flight of a Bumble Bee," together with the Scriabin work.

"THE POEM OF ECSTACY" is a hymn to the ecstacy of artistic creation. Scriabin had curious religious and philosophical beliefs to the service of which in his last years he devoted his muse. He was part pagan, part panthelst, part theosophist. And until these metaphysics seized upon his brain he was one of the most "solid" of musicians according to the old standards, drawing his inspiration from the music of Western Europe rather than from the Neo-Russian "Five." His mother was a gifted pianist and a pupil of Leschitzky and Scriabin was trained under the scholarly influence of the Moscow Conservatory—in the atmosphere of the Rubensteins, and Tschaikowsky, rather than in the more haphazard musical scheme of "The Five." He became by virtue of heritage and training a piano virtuoso and a piano composer of first rank—some competent critics thinking of him as one who carried on the great tradition of Chopin. Then came his departure from accepted lines. He sought to weave from music his philosophical and religious creed. The first of the three great works he created in this mood was "The Divine Poem" which sought to express Scriabin's belief in the oneness of Man with Divine nature. The second, "The Poem of Ecstacy," celebrated in tone the ecstatic joy of artistic creation, by which, the composer believed, man participates in the nature of the Divine. "Prometeus," —"Poem of Fire," followed, a song, as it were, of the Divine flame, and in which the composer called for a color-organ to reinforce the mood of his music. Scriabin was struck down by blood-poisoning in 1915 shortly after he had conceived, but before he could more than sketch his fourth and completing work in this series—"Mysteria," a conception in which every art form was to be used to make of music a celebration, a sacrament, a religious rite.

"The Poem of Ecstacy" was written in Switzerland in 1907 and was produced for the first time by Modest Altschuler and the Russian Symphony Orchestra in New York in 1908. It astonished and astounded then. Today ears are more accustomed to its inherent musical significance.

MOZART'S SYMPHONY in E flat major—the fourth the composer wrote in that key—will open the last half of the program. It with the G minor, and the C major—"Jupiter—was completed during a three months' period when the composer was harassed by creditors and was suffering some of the darkest hours in his unlucky life. The program concludes with the Vorspiel to Wagner's "Meistersinger of Nurenberg."

The detailed program is:

Overture to "Ruslan and Lyudmila" ..... Glinka

pearance, character and even mannerisms. He knew them as actual entities, not as imaginative children of a creative brain. Nor would he allow anyone to take him to task for the utterances of any of his characters. On one occasion he wrote to a critic as follows:

"They endeavor to make me responsible for the opinions which certain of the personages of my drama express. And yet there is not in the whole book a single opinion, a single utterance which can be laid to the account of the author. I took good care to avoid this. The method, the technique of the construction in itself entirely precludes the author's appearing in the speeches. My intention was to produce the impression in the mind that something real was being witnessed. Now, nothing would more effectually prevent such an impression than the insertion of the author's private opinions in the dialogue."

The end of Ibsen's life was tragic in the extreme. During the final days his mind had failed to such an extent that he seemed more a child mentally than the one-time master of gigantic intellect. He would sit with a set of wooden blocks, upon which appeared the letters of the alphabet, spread out before him and vainly strive to spell out the simplest of words, finally ceasing his efforts with the resigned smile of helplessness.

LOUISE GROODY, in "No, No, Nanette," is a product of the State of Texas. Maybe it is because of Louise that Texas is called "The Lone Star State."

When a youngster the little Groody person was taken to Atlantic City with a view of improving her rather delicate health. As a further aid, dancing was prescribed. This led to amateur theatricals and eventually, when the feature dancer in a new production that was making its first bow to an expectant public suffered a mishap, Louise was suggested to fill the vacancy.

Until "No, No, Nanette" every engagement Miss Groody has had in the past ten years has been under the direction of Charles Dillingham. First she appeared under his management in "The Night Boat," which had a long and successful life, followed by "Good Morning Dearie." This is her third season in the part of Nanette and nearly all the time she has been playing in but three cities, Chicago, Boston and New York.

John Held Jr.'s Idea of "Tin Hats" at Loews.

JEAN ACKER, the first wife of the late Rudolph Valentino, will be at the Orpheum this week in a dramatic playlet about folk who write for the stage, supported by George Thorpe. Miss Acker is in vaudeville for a short tour, before returning to Hollywood to make another picture. Another feature of the Orpheum bill will be the Silvertown Cord Orchestra, with the "Silver Mask Tenor," a unit that is known wherever there is a radio receiving set, broadcasting from Station WEAF, New York. This is the orchestra's initial tour and its first visit to St. Louis. J. Francis Dooley and Corinne Sales also will be on the bill. Under the new policy at the Orpheum there will be continuous performances today.

Richard Stevenson is the new leading man whom the National Players organization is presenting in St. Louis, and whose first appearance will be this week in "Easy Come, Easy Go" at the Empress.

Bradford Hatton, who has been with the stock company at the Empress previously, has reported from the National Players organization in Cincinnati to appear in this week's play. Helen Pitt, daughter of Addison Pitt, the director, also is in "Easy Come, Easy Go" cast. She came from the organization in Kansas City. Kitty Rose is substituting for Alice Baker, who, last Monday fell and fractured her left ankle.

Jewish Players Will Give "Broken Homes"

"Broken Homes," a drama of an innocent man convicted of a crime, will be presented tonight at the Odeon by a Jewish company organized under the direction of Sol Goldman.

Heading the cast is Ida Goldstein, a well known Yiddish artist from New York, supported by Ishlore Hyman and M. Tennenbaum and a company of players. This is to mark the appearance of Miss Goldstein in St. Louis, after an absence of 15 years.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

"Children of Divorce," with Clara Bow, Esther Ralston and Gary Cooper, a screen translation of Owen Johnson's novel of the same name.

A set a mile long and a half-mile wide is being erected for a new picture, "Sunrise," at the Fox studios. It represents a section of a city, with elevated trains, street cars and other objects of city life.

Paula Howard, Hollywood school girl, reached the cast of "For Wives Only" via the front bumper of Marie Prevost's automobile. Miss Howard became a protege of the star after she had been struck near the DeMille studio several months ago.

Harry Lachmond, internationally known American painter, three of whose pictures hang in the Paris Luxembourg Museum, has given up painting to become the business manager of the Rex Ingram Co. in Europe. There's more money in moving pictures than in painting 'em.

When the name of Louise Fazenda is next flashed on the screen it will be as a full fledged star. Her initial offerings will be "Fingerprints," to be released in January. The star's next production for the Warners will be "The Gay Old Bird," by Virginia Dale, Chicago dramatic critic. John T. Murray will play opposite Miss Fazenda.

Pola Negri left Hollywood for a vacation trip of several weeks recently, during which she will visit Honolulu. The star has just completed "Barbed Wire," the Erich Pommer-Rowland V. Lee production. Upon her return the first week in January she will start on her next starring vehicle, "Confession," from the pen of Ernest Vajda, the Hungarian author.

Eddie Cantor is back in Hollywood where he will make three Paramount pictures, the first being "Special Delivery," to be directed by Arthur Rosson, who made Bebe Daniels' latest "Stranded in Paris."

Production of "Afraid to Love" has been indefinitely postponed because of the illness of Florence Vidor, who is to return to the West Coast to continue her recuperation.

Harold Lloyd has chosen "The Kid Brother" as the final definite title for his newest work which is slated to reach the screen shortly after the new year.

ELISE AEHLE, violinist, soloist at today's "Pop" concert at the Odeon

Elise Aehle To Be Soloist At Today's "Pop"

St. Louis Girl, Violinist, Who Has Played in Concerts in Europe, Is Feature in Ganz's Program at the Odeon.

MISS ELISE AEHLE, daughter of C. S. Aehle, 4606 Enright avenue, will appear as soloist of the "Pop" Concert at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today, with the Symphony Orchestra, playing the second and third movements of the Mendelssohn concerto for violin.

A graduate of Soldan High School, Miss Aehle displayed musical gifts at an early age and was so far advanced as a junior artist when America entered the war that the age limit was waived in her behalf and she visited France as a Y. M. C. A. entertainer for the soldiers. She returned to Paris later as a pupil in the Conservatoire, and after studies there was a pupil of Loeffler in Boston. After that she, as her own manager, toured the United States in concert, playing in 1922-23 some 200 concerts. Another season was booked for the succeeding years, but Dr. Sevik came to America and she demanded an audition from that distinguished teacher, finally won it, and then conquered him with the display of her gifts. "Come to Bohemia," he said, and the concert tour was abandoned to do so.

What was to have been one year of study lengthened to nearer three. There were broadening ripening influences in the opportunity to serve as concert master of the Symphony Orchestra at Pisek, Dr. Sivek's home, and to appear in concert through Czecho-Slovakia, and with several chamber music organizations. A Paris debut brought an opportunity to tour France for six months in concert. Then came England. London was tied up by the strike of last May, but her concert there resulted in offers of other engagements, which, because of the strike difficulty, she could not accept, and she returned to St. Louis last summer.

It is impossible to guess how long this unprecedented craze for comedy will last, but the prospects are that it will continue indefinitely.

Facing the Music

PRESENTING two soloists, Loew's State will offer the fourth of its series of Sunday concerts at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in connection with its usual program. The soloists are Arthur Koch, piano virtuoso, and Della Samoloff, soprano who sang last week. Don Albert, Loew's musical director, will conduct his usual symphonic group of 65 musicians.

Koch is pianist in Albert's theater orchestra. He has been soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and has served as accompanist for Amelita Galli-Curci and Fritz Kreisler. His selections include Beethoven's "Concerto No. 3 in C Minor" and Chopin's "Fantasie Impromptu."

Miss Samoloff will sing Aida's aria, "Ritorna Vincitor," from Verdi's opera. She recently sang the title role at the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial's presentation of the opera.

Elaborate plans are being made for the Grand Opera Association's New Year's Eve grand opera party, which will feature the appearance of Feodor Challapin in "The Barber of Seville," at the Odeon Theater, Friday evening, Dec. 31. It was announced yesterday by Guy Golterman, director of the Opera Association, that L. Warrington Baldwin had accepted the chairmanship of the Sponsors' Committee, and that other members thus far selected are: Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., Mrs. Newton R. Wilson, Edward A. Faust, Daniel G. Taylor, Aaron Waldheim and Henry W. Kiel.

Kreisler Coming Next Month.

Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, will give his annual violin recital at the Odeon on Tuesday evening, Jan. 25. Kreisler's lengthy stays abroad have so shortened his American tour that it was thought he would not be able to include St. Louis this season, but continued negotiations on the part of Elizabeth Cueny have resulted in the January date being assigned.

Minneapolis Orchestra Coming.

Demand on the part of admirers of Henri Verbrugghen as a Beethoven interpreter, more than the fact that this is Beethoven's centenary year, is responsible for the inclusion of the Beethoven Symphony No. 5 C minor in the program of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra to be given at the Odeon Thursday evening, Jan. 27, under the auspices of the Civic Music League. The visit of the Minneapolis orchestra is to be followed a month later by the Philadelphia forces under Leopold Stokowski, at the Odeon, Feb. 22.

Kirkwood Club Concert.

The Kirkwood Choral Club, in its twenty-eighth year, will entertain at the concert hall of the club on Monday evening. Dec. 13, when the club, assisted by Miss Dorothy Dring, of Kirkwood, and Ernest R. Kroeger, St. Louis pianist, will render its first concert of the 1926-27 season. The club this year is under the direction of John W. Bohn.

Philharmonic Concert Thursday.

The orchestra of the St. Louis Philharmonic Society will give its first concert of the season Thursday night at the Beaumont High School auditorium, Kingshighway and Hartford street. Miss Mabel Kraus, soprano, will be the soloist and Mrs. Frank Habig the accompanist.

Lecture on Mendelssohn's Music.

An interpretive lecture on Mendelssohn's music composed for Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," will be given by Ernest R. Kroeger, assisted by Mrs. Ernest Walker under the auspices of the St. Louis Teachers' Shakspeare Society at the Wednesday Music Hall Tuesday afternoon, at 2:30.

Fallert's First Free Organ Recital Tomorrow.

The first free organ recital of the current season in the Cathedral of Rite Cathedral, Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, by O. Wade Fallert, organist and music director, will be given tomorrow afternoon, 3 o'clock, the general public being invited to attend.

WHEN P. T. BARNUM WENT IN VAUDEVILLE

tremities drawn up and one arm paralyzed across her chest. She was blind and toothless, with a bushy gray hair added to her value as a monstrosity.

She received Barnum soon enough and told him all about Washington, whom she referred to as "dear little George." She said she had "raised him herself." During the interview Barnum saw that he was supposed to be the only bill on sale for this woman, the handwriting of George Washington's father, and his mind was made up. He had but $300 in the world, and the owners of the relic wanted "three grand." He was finally able to compromise for $1000 and to borrow the money at $500, whereupon he received the precious charge to New York and started one of these intensive publicity campaigns for which he had a genius. Soon the public was flocking to see and talk to George Washington's nurse.

From William Niblo, owner of Niblo's Gardens, he was able to secure a room on Chatham street on the promise of half of the receipts. As these quickly mounted to $1500 weekly, Niblo was made worse for his generosity, and Barnum was presently able to add Signor Villalave, a gifted Italian juggler, and "one man show" to the troupe.

Later, in 1842, Barnum opened the American Museum. He displayed such favorites of yesterday living statues, trained fleas, juggiers, albinos, educated dogs, automatons, rope dancers, diving boys, giants, gypsies, ventriloquists, knitting machines, models of Berlin, Paris and Jerusalem, and examples of fancy glass blowing. In addition to these features, he inaugurated a lecture room, where moral dramas were performed. Tony Pastor and Barnay both received their first stage

To Show Official Films Of Eucharistic Congress

The presentation of the official motion picture of the Eucharistic Congress will be shown for a limited engagement at the Odeon, starting Jan. 2. The film which has just completed a showing in New York and is now being presented in Chicago and Boston is officially offered to the public by His Eminence George Cardinal Mundelein and the St. Louis exhibition has the endorsement of Archbishop John J. Glennon.

The film, heralded as "a picture for all humanity" depicts one of the greatest religious spectacles of all time—the International Eucharistic Congress held in Chicago last summer and participated in by people of 27 countries. Thirty cameramen were used in the production of the film which was made under the direction of Msgr. C. J. Quille, general secretary of the Congress. The first print of the picture was sent to the Vatican at Rome where it was screened for Pope Pius XI.

Thirty-six thousand feet of film were used in making the picture. In making the picture the camera men and directors started their work in the Vatican where they filmed the ceremony marking the departure of the Papal Legate and the final benediction imparted by Pope Pius XI. These scenes show the interior of the Vatican and the impressive Swiss Guards. The scenes shift swiftly to Paris and then to Cherbourg, New York and Chicago.

Three important meetings in Chicago were held indoors, two of them at night. This meant the installation of lighting equipment sufficient to make motion picture photographs.

MOVIE TICKETS TO BE GOOD IN ANY CITY AT ANY TIME

in all probability, is going to mean original stories for the screen."

AND while on the subject of foreign stars and foreign directors, Richard A. Rowland, production manager of First National Pictures who returned recently from a five weeks' stay in England, France, Germany and Italy, has advanced some interesting ideas for a solution of the difficulties existing between the producers abroad and in America.

Now, and for some time past, there has been a disposition on the part of foreign governments to limit the export of American pr duct on the ground that it is preventing the development of their home picture industry. Also, foreign motion picture men contend that their pictures have been virtually boycotted in America. The latter statement is, of course, untrue as regards to good foreign films.

"My recent visit in European countries," said Mr. Rowland, "convinced me that although there is a more conciliatory spirit than existed a year or so ago, there remains much to be done before we achieve an era of good feeling and understanding. I think this is an opportune time to promote an international stock company that would include players from all countries and produce pictures in France, Germany, England, Italy and Spain as well as America.

"Of course, European picture men are quite mistaken in feeling that there is any antagonism to European films in this country. Naturally, we do not care where a photoplay comes from if the public will pay to see it.

"That foreign stars may quickly become popular in this country is amply indicated in numerous instances. American producers should from time to time send a company or the nucleus of a company abroad for the making of pictures. In the first place, this will give us a more varied atmosphere and a new background in settings. We should employ European artists as well as American. For example, if we send abroad a male star, we could find over there a leading woman for him. Many of the other artists could be selected from the players in the country in which the picture is being produced. In this manner, screen personalities would be developed that would be recognized not only in their own country but in America and all over the world.

"When a European star or company visits this country, the process could be reversed and so on until the most popular players of all nations are balanced off in productions of genuine international interest.

SOME REFLECTIONS ON A DISASTER IN SHOWMANSHIP

if still on hand, the Mona Lisa. But it was in what he had decided England should send that I knew how great a showman was this Mr. Bok. From England he was drafting the Magna Charta, the crown jewels (including the Kohinoor diamond) and the Prince of Wales in person.

Now I do not know what, if anything, Mr. Bok did have to do with the Sesquicentennial. But deep within me is a conviction that what ailed it was that he was not encouraged or, perhaps, allowed to have enough to do with it.

AND speaking of "The Pirates of Penzance," I was amused on its first night last Monday to note the presence of George Gershwin, in the audience—all aglow with the process of discovering Arthur Sullivan. And last week Irving Berlin received from his dealers in London a complete set of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas—every note of every score—as sung by the D'Oyly Carte Co. Thus do the young masters of the new music make obeisance to one whose sweet songs still hang aquiver in the air above all the rooftrees of the English-speaking world. May their tribe increase.

THOSE PIRATES—The play, not the song writers—had their official world premiere in New York instead of London, on Dec. 31, 1879. This preference was not a tribute to the art of the New World; it grew out of a more simple and sordid matter of box-office receipts. "Pinafore," which preceded "The Pirates," was a tremendous success here, a success which meant nothing to Gilbert and Sullivan. There were no international copyright laws at the time and the American producers merely stole the libretto and score.

The distracted authors came over to solve the situation, bringing with them their own troupe and the half-finished "Pirates." They completed it here and then decided to produce it themselves in New York. To protect their English copyright a hastily assembled company gave one performance in the little town of Paignton, but the actual premiere took place at the Fifth Avenue Theater with Sir Arthur Sullivan conducting. Immediately after, the crew of music thieves started their sinister activities. They tried to bribe members of the orchestra. And they had a pleasing habit of sneaking into the audience and taking notes on the score. These efforts, it is pleasant to record, were foiled through a sleuthing system in the theater, with the ushers ordered summarily to eject any member of the audience under suspicion. Occasionally the composer attended to this himself. And one of the more dramatic incidents of this wholly dramatic season must have been the spectacle of Sir Arthur Sullivan pouncing down on one of these pilfering wretches engaged in sketching the treble clef under his program.

LAW TURNS SHERIFF'S FORCE INTO FARMERS

Ohio Deputies Guarding Property in Law Suits Have to Harvest Crops.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 11. — Oscar Carlson, Sheriff of Shawnee County, considers the addition of a department of agriculture to his office. Carlson's deputies, ordinarily men of valor, accustomed to carrying six-shooters, warrants and other dangerous instruments, officers who are perfectly at home leading a desperate charge against a house infested with nests of stills or gangsters, now are busy doing farm chores.

In the natural course of legalities, the Sheriff's office is guardian for property pending sale or settlement in bankruptcy or where judgment has been given and is awaiting execution.

Consequently, Sam Martin, deputy in the office of the Sheriff, has put up 15 tons of alfalfa from 20 acres, is seeking corn huskers to husk 40 acres of corn and is personally responsible for the health and retention of 40 head of stock cattle, 50 head of hogs and six horses. The livestock is valued at between $3500 and $4000 and requires the constant services of a deputy as a guard.

There is feed enough on this farm to winter all the animals, the feed also being the property of the Sheriff through an execution secured in another county.

The leisure of the officer on guard rests with the disposition of the farmer. The farmer may, if he chooses, go to town and loaf on the corner or visit his relatives, whereat the county officer must feed the pigs, milk the cows and curry the horses. The livestock must be cared for, and if the one-time owner refuses or neglects, then the county must.

The hay that the deputies put up and the corn that needs husking came from such a disposition of a former owner.

Meanwhile the office has its eyes on certain other patches of ground and crops which seem to be coming down the winding legal path to the Sheriff.

POULTRY FIRM WINS SUIT

Award of $1444 Ends Seven-Year Legal Controversy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Dec. 11.—Final disposition of a case that has been in the courts continuously for the past seven years was made when the Goodwin & Jean Poultry Co. was awarded $1444 from the American Railway Express Co. for the latter's failure to deliver a carload of poultry, consigned to an Eastern market.

The plaintiffs won their acse in the Court of Appeals on a point that is said to be entirely new in Missouri. The express company, successors to the Wells Fargo, claimed that the suit had been brought more than two years after the absorption of Wells Fargo. However, attorneys representing the plaintiffs showed that several months elapsed between the time Wells Fargo actually quit business in Missouri and the time its successors took charge, giving the poultry company considerably more than one month of an advantage.

SOYBEAN CLUB NEARS GOAL

Doniphan Organization Is Conducting Soil Revitalizing Campaign.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DONIPHAN, Mo., Dec. 11. — America's first 10,000-acre Soybean Club is rapidly reaching its goal of accomplishment here. The idea of the 10,000-Acre Soybean Club is in revitalizing the earning power of farm lands in the community by the introduction of a forage crop which would maintain the fertility of the soil while producing a high-yielding nutritious feed for the farm livestock. Soybeans were chosen because of their easy adaptability to any soil and also because of their soil-enriching qualities and economies as a feed.

The plan in the orgainzation of the club is substantially the same as followed by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute in the organization of its 10,000-Acre Alfalfa Club in different parts of the country.

Three Generations at Lodge Meeting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., Dec. 11.—A grandfather, son and grandson attended the annual election of officers of the Masonic lodge here Monday night. Franklin Benjamin Campbell, who resides in Texas; his son, Levi Campbell of East Alton, and grandson, Leo Campbell, of East Alton, constituted the trio. Franklin Campbell is 87 years old and is a charter member of the Fieldon Lodge here. Officers elected by the Fieldon Lodge are: Frank Cope, worshipful master; Jacob Reddish, senior warden; Frank Rosenthal, junior warden; Dr. B. M. Brewster, secretary; L. J. Krueger, treasurer; Henry L. Schmidt, senior deacon; Frank Groppel, junior deacon; William Weist, senior steward; Edward Springman, junior steward; William Gettings, tyler; Walter Krueger, chaplain.

Confederate Veterans to Meet.

The monthly meeting of the Confederate Veterans' Association will be held at 3 p. m. today in the Jefferson Memorial Building. A musical program of Southern songs and an illustrated talk on Africa by E. C. Fisher of 5642 Kingsbury place will be features.

Traffic Club Meets Tomorrow.

ITALY'S DESTINY LIES IN EAST, SAY FASCISTS

This Is Given as Reason for French Hostility to Albanian Treaty.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1926.

ROME, Dec. 11.—"Our road lies eastward," declared a feature editorial in the Fascist organ Tevere. "Only toward the East, the Balkans, Russia and Asia, exist possibilities for Italy's democratic and economic expansion.

"Westward, beyond France, the ocean halts our way. This explains the different agreements Italy has concluded in the Balkans, with Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Albania. This also explains why Italy is seeking friendly agreement with Germany.

"Italo-German collaboration can be developed, not only from a political point of view, but it also may develop economic collaboration in the Balkans where Germany still is looking for a 'road to Bagdad,' and in Russia and Asia where Italy already has been successful in economic and political penetration."

This Italian penetration of the Near East and collaboration with Germany alarm France, who sees her hold on the Balkans weakening and her postwar encirclement of Germany fade away. This explains according to the Fascist press, why France commenced her anti-Italian campaign against the Italo-Albanian treaty.

ITALY'S DESTINY LIES IN EAST, SAY FASCISTS

PERCHERONS FROM ILLINOIS SHIPPED TO MAINE FARM

Eastern Potato Growers Are Planning to Breed Their Own Purebred Draft Stock.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

URBANA, Ill., Dec. 11.—Sale of a carload of 20 purebred Illinois Percheron draft mares to J. M. Foster, potato grower of Monticello, Me., to be used in connection with the recently adopted plan of Maine potato growers to breed their own draft stock, was announced here Thursday afternoon. Seven of the mares in the lot were brought from the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, and the remainder from A. L. Robison Jr., and the Leslie Farms, Percheron breeders of Pekin, Tazewell County.

Arrangements for hsipping the stock were completed Thursday afternoon, and the seven animals bought from agricultural college were loaded into the express car with the Tazewell County horses.

The price paid was not announced. Foster bought some of the horses to sell in his section of the country and will use the others on his own farm, it was said.

The best draft horses that the market affords still are used in Maine potato growing section, and this year more loads of top draft geldings have gone to this section from the Chicago market than to any other area of the same size in the country, according to Prof J. L. Edmonds, chief in horse husbandry at the Agricultural College.

Recently the Maine growers started buying stallions and are going to breed their own horses, he said. Among stallions which recently have been placed on farms in that section is the imported three-year-old Percheron, Baryton. He was the first prize three-year-old at the show in Paris, France, this year, and after being brought to this country, won first prize and the grand championship at both the Ohio State Fair, Columbus, and the Philadelphia Sesqui-Centennial. He was imported and sold by William McLaughlin, Delaware, O.

GINNINGS TO NOV. 15 SHOW INCREASE IN COTTON YIELD

Total Production, However, Expected to Drop Below That of 1925.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Dec. 11.—Figures tabulated by the State Bureau, showing the amount of cotton ginned up to Nov. 15, this year, as compared with the same period last year, indicate a slight increase in 1926. The total number of bales ginned to Nov. 15 is 141,084, while the number ginned to Nov. 15, 1925, was 139,687.

Many farmers are leaving much of their cotton in the field, however, and the predicted yield this year will fall some 36,000 bales short of last year, predictions by various county agents and ginners throughout the district show. In most sections, however, the cotton grower is using the available labor to pick his cotton as quickly as possible, and as a result the gins are working until late hours at night. The farmers in Butler County Plan to pick their cotton clean regardless of price conditions, F. H. Darnall, county extension agent, says.

Appointed Insurance General Agent

William H. Beers of Rochester, N. Y., has been appointed to succeed George E. Black, who died Nov. 15, as general agent of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. The office of the company is being maintained in the National Bank of Commerce Building.

ILLINOIS COUNTIES ORDERED TO RE-ASSESS PROPERTY

State Commission Holds Farm Holdings Discriminated Against.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11. — Tax Assessors of Franklin, Peoria, Kane and Clay Counties have been ordered by the Illinois Tax Commission to reassess properties valued at approximately $113,000,000 because farm properties in the counties were taxed on a higher valuation than other properties.

The reassessment order was made after figures submitted by the commission to John C. Watson, tax expert, showed that farm lands were being assessed on from 50 to 60 per cent of their full valuation, while urban real estate was taxed only on from 25 to 40 per cent of selling values.

The order came after boards of reviews in the counties neglected to change discrepancies. The aggregate relief afforded farmers of the counties will be from $100,000 to $200,000 annually, according to the Illinois Agricultural Association, which conducted the agitation for reassessment.

Vesper Christmas Music Service.

A special vesper Christmas music service will be held at 4 p. m. next Sunday at Westminster Presbyterian Church, Union and Delmar boulevards.

Puts $5000 in Church Collection.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The identity of the benefactor who went to service at Salisbury cathedral in London recently, slipped into his seat and when the offertory box was passed around dropped into it casually a Bank of England note for £1000 ($5000) is still a mystery. The gift is the biggest individual contribution ever received in cash in an English church service.

GRIDIRON CLUB HITS UNCLE SAM'S FOLLIES

Newspapermen Satirize Coolidge's Trip and W. M. Butler's Farewell.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The November elections and political prospects of the next two years were interpreted satirically here tonight at the annual winter dinner of the Gridiron Club, an organization of Washington newspaper correspondents.

Shafts were directed at Congress, the Coolidge fishing proclivities, Republican peace overtures to insurgent members of the party, Democrats and their gains in the Senate, and Queen Marie's tour. One skit, in which there was a mammoth reproduction of the front page of "Today's Newspaper," showed Uncle Sam pleading with the editor for first-page position. The request was granted, but Uncle Sam was quickly shunted aside when Queen Marie, the only man in New Jersey who was not in De Russey's lane on the fatal night, aimable Aimee, Will Rogers, Peaches, Tunney, Trudy and a Chicago gunman presented their claims to position.

"How about another Bruce Barton interview with President Coolidge?" pleaded Uncle Sam in his effort to get back on Page One.

"Apply at the business office for rates on political advertising," was the answer.

Paul Smith Meets Gov. Al.

A modern version of Rip Van Winkle was presented by club members impersonating Paul Smith, returned to life in the Adirondacks, and Gov. Smith of New York in the role of a Tammany brave. Paul, ruminating, went afishing in a tub symbolical of Lake Osgood, where the President cast his bait during his vacation. He brought forth something that was declared to be the World Court, but was found to be "all wet." The dialogue closed with Al telling Paul that "between us Smiths' both he and the President would do little but practice during the next two years to attain perfection for catching the big "1928 fish" upon which both had set their hearts.

Two urchins, attempting to enter the "Gridiron Circus" on tickets that had been passed by the primary and November gate-keepers, were haled before the committee on privileges and elections. Under questioning they gave the names of William S. Vare of Pennsylvania and Frank L. Smith of Illinois. They made no secret of the fact that they had tried to buy their way into the dinner. The impersonators later were identified as Mark Sullivan of the New York Herald Tribune and Alfred H. Kirchhofer of the Buffalo Evening News, two new members of the Gridiron Club who were being initiated.

A singer who called himself Senator James A. Reed, sang to the tune of "When the Red, Red Robin Comes Bob, Bob, Bobbin' Along:"

For the red, red lickee, with its kick, kick, kicker,
It gotsy fast;
And it don't entertain us when they advise us
It cannot last.
Give us, doctor, a prescription:
Make it the right description,
Or we'll try conscription.
Moonshine, moonshine is awful.
There is not enough of the good old stuff in Kentucky
So we're dreaming that this new scheming
Will hurry us back.
We will get sick again.
Looking for that kick again.
We'll all get ill
Ere the red, red licker, with its kick, kick, kicker is gone.

Bye-Bye to Butler.

William M. Butler of Massachusetts, though no longer a Senator, was granted the privilege of the floor and the person representing him sang to the strains of "Bye, Bye Blackbird":

Listen, listen, while I give you a song,
Telling of my sad fate.
Awful, awful, everything going wrong.
Up in the old Bay State,
I had a letter from my friend Cal.
He stood in vain for his dear old pal.
Good-bye, good-bye, gotta be on my way.
They have no place for me.

Among the guests were the President and Vice President of the United States, Cabinet members, legislators and diplomats. President Coolidge and former Secretary of State Hughes spoke.

At the annual business meeting of the club earlier in the day, Ashmun N. Brown of the Providence Journal was elected president for the coming year.

GERMANS DEMAND MORE JAZZ ON THEIR RADIO PROGRAMS

Complain to Government, Which Controls Broadcasting, Against "Highbrow Stuff."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—Discontent is brewing among the 1,200,000 radio fans in Germany who pay the Government $6,000,000 annually in license fees for the privilege of taking programs out of the air. They are demanding more jazz and less "highbrow stuff" for their money. Liberal party leaders have taken up the cry on behalf of the influential radio vote.

"Workmen are too tired at night to listen to operas, stage dramas or lectures lasting three and four hours," party spokesmen assert. "Jazz music, which is very popular, doesn't start until 10:30 or later, when most persons are in bed."

All broadcasting stations are owned by the Government, although some are leased to private companies, which net large profits from broadcasting advertising.

Returned Traveler to Speak.

Mrs. Bernard Greensfelder, who recently returned from Palestine, will address the St. Louis Chapter Hadassah on the Jewish activities in Palestine, at a meeting to be held Tuesday at 3 p. m. at Hotel Statler.

"Can't Be Bothered"

"It's such a nuisance to be always having to powder one's nose," says pretty and jolly Miss Hilda King, 744 Marcy Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. "But that never bothers me now. I'm using the delightful Black and White Face Powder. My! How it stays on! And yet it's so soft and fine it never looks artificial. It is improving the texture of my skin instead of coarsening and enlarging my pores like my other face powders did."

The provocative charm of girlish naturalness belongs to the thousands of girls everywhere who use the dainty Black and White Face Powder—natural in coloring as your own blush, so exquisite in texture it's like part of your own skin, so clingingly lovely it copies, yet improves on Nature. You can get the attractive oozes of this distinctively fine powder for 25c from dealers all over America.

BLACK AND WHITE Beauty Creations
MILLION USED A YEAR

About Missouri

By Boyd F. Carroll

JEFFERSON CITY.

THE Fifty-fourth General Assembly which convenes in Jefferson City next month will have at least seven distinct legislative programs before it, aside from hundreds of individual bills on subjects ranging usually from regulation of cemeteries and dog licenses to revision of the entire scheme of taxation and attempted diversion of the road funds.

Organized legislative programs are numerous and forecast more work for the legislators than usual in a mid-administration session. Such a session generally is accomplished by considerable partisan skirmishing, to create political capital for the gubernatorial and presidential campaign in the State the following year.

More important programs include revision of the criminal code, extensive amendment of the banking laws, uniform traffic regulation and highway safety measures, the Governor's permanent school support fund proposal, consolidation of State departments and creation of a budget system, tightening of the medical practices act, and establishing of State regulation of motor busses.

The Missouri Association for Criminal Justice has an extensive program of criminal code revision, designed to eliminate many archaic technicalities, simplify procedure and generally speed up the law inforcement machinery.

The Missouri Association for Street and Highway Safety has bills providing uniform traffic laws, safety measures, a State highway patrol, and a central system of traffic law enforcement.

A State budget system, modern methods of accounting, and consolidation of 123 State boards, bureaus and commissions into nine State departments is proposed by the Missouri Association for Economy in Public Expenditures. These bills are designed to place the State government upon a more business-like basis and to take some of the taxes out of taxation.

Improvement of the banking situation in Missouri and elimination of the causes of numerous State bank failures is sought through a number of banking bills prepared by the Missouri State Bankers' Association.

Control of the rapidly increasing motorbus business again will be the center of a legislative fight that probably will be hotter than the one in the 1925 session, that resulted in defeat of a bill to place regulation of the busses under the State Public Service Commission.

In addition, there will be hundreds of other bills, "cure-alls," salary raisers and salary reducers, "repeaters" which have earned service stripes in other sessions, local and special bills, and other measures growing out of the theory that to remedy any condition "there ought to be a law."

SMALL investors are more susceptible to the wiles and blandishments of "fly-by-night" stock promoters during the winter months than at any other season of the year, according to State Securities Commissioner F. T. Stockard, who heads the State "blue sky" department.

This theory of Stockard's upon the most productive hunting season for fake stock promoters is based upon the volume of complaints received by his office and the degree of activity displayed by known operators. Both take a sharp upturn during the winter months, decline in the spring, and reach low ebb during the summer months, in Missouri, Stockard said.

The only explanation the Commissioner has of this seasonal activity in worthless securities is that prospects on the "sucker lists" spend more time at home on winter evenings, and have more time to read the alluring literature maile dto them, with stock purchase coupons attached in a lower corner.

A SET of rules of sportsmanship for hunters has been suggested by the State Game and Fish Department, involving a form of farm relief not covered in current legislation. Among the rules are:

When entering another's property, first ask for permission.

Put up the farmer's bars and close his gates.

Crawl through, over or under his fences without damaging them.

Go around his planted fields.

Don't shoot near or toward his house, horses, cattle or workmen.

Put out your camp fire before leaving and protect his property.

Be a gentleman.

When you leave, see the farmer and express your appreciation.

Casualties among farmers apparently have been small during the hunting season, only a few instances being reported of farmers or their hired hands being shot by hunters.

Film Shows Strike Scene.

A motion picture, "The Passaic Textile Strike," will be shown this evening at Unity Hall, Grand and Page boulevards, under the auspices of the St. Louis Conference for the Relief of the Passaic textile strikers. Showing of the picture has been indorsed by the Central Trades and Labor Union.

with this great line of instruments

ALL THE music of all the world is yours on demand with these wonderful Victor instruments. Music from records. Music, speech, and sports from the air. Whenever you wish. Without regard to hour, day, season, or weather. No better investment in entertainment can be made.

We urge you to hear the new Orthophonic Victrola, the Victrola-with-Radiola, and the Victor Electrola before deciding upon any sound-reproducing instrument. Hear them first or hear them last—it does not matter. You will come back to the Victor as the one incomparable instrument for you.

In no other way can you hear music reproduced with such naturalness . . . with such uncanny fidelity to the original rendition. For the Victor instruments are based upon the new, scientific principle of "matched impedance" . . . and this principle is controlled exclusively by the Victor Talking Machine Company!

Detail by detail, the Victor instruments are beyond the reach of successful imitation. There are pearls which, to the casual observer, look like orientals. They are worn about the neck the same as orientals. But they are not orientals!

Look over the line of Victor instruments on this page, then see your nearest Victor dealer. Ask him to play your favorite music on any of them. Be critical! Then judge these amazing instruments on their merits. Prices are $1000 to as low as $95.

MYSTERY MAN SELLS CASINO

Sir Basil Zaharoff's Profit on Monte Carlo Is Immense.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Sir Basil Zaharoff's, Europe's man of mystery and one of the wealthiest men on the Continent, has disposed of practically all his stock in the company operating the Monte Carlo Casino, it has been learned. It is believed this move foresharows some radical changes in the operation of the gambling place.

Though the extent of Zaharoff's interest was not made known, it is estimated a large percentage of the 20,000 shares sold in the open market during the last two years were his. If this is true, his profit is between 100,000,000 and 200,000,000 francs, the shares having trebled in value since 1920, during which year Sir Basil obtained the control of the Casino.

ASSERTS ECONOMY IS FARMERS' SALVATION

Agriculture Lecturer Says Cutting of Production Costs Is Key to Situation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 11.—"The farmers as a whole are more efficient than they ever have been," says Sam H. Jordan of Columbia, State lecturer for the Missouri State Board of Agriculture, "but they have some difficult problems to solve."

Jordan is an authority on agricultural matters. He lived on a farm for 30 years and has lectured for the State Board of Agriculture for more than 20 years.

"The farmers' big problems just now," asserts Jordan, "are the decrease in the fertility of farm lands, as they are depleted by erosion and by poor methods of farming; the increase of farm indebtedness, mortgage foreclosures being the greatest in numbers and amounts involved that have been known in any equal period of the Nation's history, and the exodus from farms is too great for the country's good.

Soil Fertility Problem.

"The soil fertility problem is being solved to a great degree. More scientific knowledge is being applied to the methods of farming than ever before. Perhaps the major portion of other farm problems will find solution when the soil fertility question is solved. So far as production goes, the one big item is the fertility of the soil.

"The financial problems are many, complex and varied. A greater economy of operation must be practiced on farms. The first great loss is soil fertility. Then there are the losses from the use of inferior livestock and through inefficient feeding and care. Poor methods of tillage are too frequently seen. Great loss also can be counted in the amount of expensive farm tools that are not taken care of, but are allowed to stand in the fields or are exposed to the weather.

Expensive Marketing System.

"Perhaps the greatest leak of all just now is the expensive marketing system. The farmer does not get enough of the consumer's dollar to allow his returns to equal his outlay in production. The question then arises, 'How can the farmer meet the situation, or can he meet it?' I say he can meet it, for he simply must meet it.

"A few fundamental principles will help in this connection. First, as the farmer's soil fertility goes down, his cost of production goes up; second, large consumption at modest profit is better than restricted production at a large profit; third, the farmer has to meet the level of prices just the same as any other man in any business, and unless he can get his cost of production below the price levels, he will have to go out of business.

"I believe that his salvation does not lie in increasing prices above a reasonable level, but that it does lie largely in his getting his production costs below that level. I believe that to restrict production in order to raise the price is dangerous if carried too far. No business can long survive by charging more than the traffic can bear. If the producer could force the price of butter to $1 a pound, he would sooner or later destroy his market, for the consumer would find a substitute.

Example of Railroads.

"A few years ago railroads seemed to go on the theory that their way out of their troubles was to raise rates, and labor was so active along these lines that strikes were very common. The idea was that these rates would come from the pockets of the people. The time came when they discovered that the people were no longer going to stand these increases, so they concluded that their salvation must be worked out in some other way. Then they began a policy of economy in every line of operation, and they have surprised themselves by the millions they are now saving, and at this time the railroads are in the best condition that they ever have been. When they depended on raising rates they were building on a foundation that would not stand, but when they built on economy of operation they found they built on solid rock.

"The cause of the big mortgages in the first place is that a farmer, when he begins, usually does not have much capital. Hence, he places a debt on the land, as his only means of beginning. If he buys a piece of land too large, which he so often does, and then, if his operations are not the best, and if he cannot practice every possible economy, he is doomed.

Urges Farm Economy.

"If he is trying to farm too much, not much of his work is as good as it should be. With prices such as they have been for the last several years, as compared with prices many years ago, it would look on the face of things that he should be in fine financial condition. Fifty or 60 years ago the farmer had to take often less than 3 cents a pound for hogs, 5 cents a dozen for eggs, and so forth. The question then comes, 'Is the farmer lazy, shiftless or a bad manager?'

"I think this can be answered that farmers are more efficient than they ever have been, but in the old days their wants were fewer. They produced most of their living and knew not nor cared not how the wide world fared. During the last few years the standard of living has gone up, until they are living better than farmers ever have lived in this country.

"If the standard of living goes up and the cost of production goes up, the farmer is lost. The cost of production must be reduced. A greater intelligence must be applied to every item of the farm program, from the stirring of soil and the planting of seeds to the delivering of our products to the consumer's door."

To Explain Compensation Act.

Elmer Donnell, managing director of the Associated Industries of Missouri, will explain the new compensation act, which goes into effect Jan. 9, at a meeting of the St. Louis Safety Council tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce Building.

CHRISTMAS 1926

And through the years....

Let this gift of music brighten your home

THE GIFT the angels brought to Bethlehem!—the gift of music and song.

Nothing you can choose will bring more deep and lasting joy into your home than this same gift.

Give it—not for this Christmas only, but for all the richer, happier years to come.

And let it be music you play yourselves and so enjoy far more than any other.

SUCH is the music of the Piano—player or otherwise.

Nothing in the home is quite so important as the "spirit of home ties." And nothing in all the world has done to keep inviolate the reverence and love of home as has the Piano .... an influence for good among the children—a tie indescribable between husband and wife.

This year bring a Piano of some kind into your home for the sake of its near holy influence.

Choose from any of the following standards of comparison and know they will serve a lifetime.

PACKARDS, BONDS, BRINKERHOFFS, DAVIS & SONS, LYON & HEALY, WASHBURNS, BREYMANN BROS., or our own BARTHEL & DUESENBERG.

CATHOLIC MEN'S AID BODY SPENDS $83,722

St. Vincent de Paul Society Issues Eighty-First Annual Report of Its Work.

The eighty-first annual report of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, a Catholic men's relief organization, was made public yesterday, showing expenditures of $83,722.37 by the 78 parish conferences here during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30. In the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1925, expenditures of $85,-101.50 were reported.

Of the total amount expended this year $51,043.81 went for provisions for poor families. Fuel, rent, tuition, cash relief and clothing constituted other large items. Forty-six persons were buried in Calvary Cemetery at the society's expense during the year.

10,000 Visits to the Poor.

Approximately 10,000 visits to the poor were made, 5489 persons and 1879 families were given aid and 142 situations were obtained during the year. There are 2907 active members on the rolls, an increase of one member over last year. The honorary membership includes 291 persons, an increase of 27.

Discussing the society's work in the report, William L. Igoe, president, said:

"Through the central office we have been able to co-ordinate and systematize our work, thus enabling us to more efficiently care for the needs of our poor. The employment of social workers to assist us long ago passed the experimental stage, and at present we have three in our central office who assist the conferences in solving the various problems found in the homes of our poor."

Praise From Archbishop.

Archbishop Glennon extended congratulations to the society in a letter to President Igoe, as follows:

"I received the advance sheets of the very complete report of your Saint Vincent de Paul Society for the year terminating last September. I am glad to see that the good work goes on with unabated vigor. The characteristic that dominates you, namely, that of personal service to the cause and in the operation of charity, distinguishes your society from all others, and is largely the reason of your great success."

OPEN FIREPLACE BATTLE IS WAGED AGAIN IN ENGLAND

Woman Health Expert Decries Crusade to Eliminate Smoke by Abolishing Hearths.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The perennial fight in England on the merits or demerits of the open fireplace waxes hotter. It has been going on for centuries—since 1273, in fact, when King Edward I told his royal lawmakers that the soft coal smoke and the fog interfered now and then with his slumbers.

Announcement by the Coal Distributors' Parliamentary Committee that a serious effort was being made to eliminate the coal fire from all new houses has aroused the ire of Dr. Marie Stopes, who takes an interest in public affairs and helps look after the nation's health.

She contends that a glowing open fire is "nourishing." A fireplace gives out something subtle, she maintains, and is nourishing to the system, the same as vitamins and the ultra violet ray. A brightly glowing fire, Dr. Stopes says, should be present in every nursery and in the principal living room of every household.

"I read the pronouncement of the smoke abatement advocates with the greatest dismay," declared Dr. Stopes, "and I cannot conceive that such inroads on public health and liberty are actually being contemplated."

The smoke abatement bill, with many amendments, is now in the hands of a standing committee of Parliament. Similar proposed bills have gone only that far for several generations.

Prior to the conference, Harriman declined to indicate what subjects were slated for discussion or to say whether the status of the undertaking was satisfactory. The party goes to Tiflis next week.

No Home is Complete Without a Piano

REGARDLESS of how pleasantly a home may be furnished, there is a certain atmosphere of happiness and refinement lacking without a piano, whether it be an upright, a player or a grand piano. With the increasing popularity of Radio, and the almost universal interest in music, the piano is the first essential musical fixture in the home, and is the fundamental instrument around which the family musical training should begin. It is especially appropriate that a piano should be installed in the home during the holiday period, and Wurlitzer has priced all instruments, and arranged such liberal terms that no home can afford to neglect this unusual opportunity.

Sunshine vs. Moonshine

(Written by a woman who saved her husband from the drinking evil)

My man is very good to me.
So loyal, kind and wise.
His nerve comes home really drunk.
As other husbands do.
But sometimes, when he's "got too much."
I wish that I were dead.
For there's no sunshine in my heart
When moonshine's in his head.

Some folks can laugh at such a plight
Of some poor drunken fool.
To me there's naught but aching heart
And pity for Satan's tool.
And, when he's had just "one too many,"
I fear that we must part;
For when there's moonshine in his head
There's no sunshine in my heart.

Within the garden of my life,
Love bloomed in every thought,
But how I fear 'tis willing fast
And love must come to naught.
I pray before it is too late,
He'll think how oft I've said,
"There's no sunshine in my heart, dear,
When there's moonshine in your head."

* * * * * * *

I read the book, "The National Curse," Sent me by Dr. Haines;
And I read the "Golden Treatment"
To break the galling chains.
The splendid manhood underneath
Is freed from Satan's snare;
Since there's no moonshine in his head.
Our hearts have sunshine there.

I gave the powder secretly.
He never even knew;
Oh, woman, do the same today.
No one can you convict.
Our lives are very different.
Since that first ad I read;
In our hearts are floods of sunshine
And no moonshine in his head.
Save those near and dear to you from a life of degradation, poverty and disgrace.
You can do it by cutting out this coupon.

STOCK EXCHANGE SEAT MAY RISE TO $250,000

Price Steadily Mounting From $2750 in 1871 to $175,000 This Year.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Financial men in Wall street predict $250,000 as a future price tag for a seat to trade on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading is expected to reach about $60,000,000,000 in market value for the present year. The low record for a seat was set in 1871, when $2750 was paid. For the privilege of playing bull or bear on the floor today, a membership has just been sold for $175,000.

John D. Rockefeller has a 500 per cent profit on his membership. Few know that the oil man has a seat. He is understood to have paid about $35,000 for his membership in 1883, but the oldest trader does not recall that Rockefeller has even as much as peeped inside the building.

J. P. Morgan has been a member since 1895, when he bought a seat for about $18,000. He never appears on the floor.

It was a spring day in 1792 when 24 brokers gathered under a buttonwood tree in Wall street and subscribed to an agreement to deal in securities—then only the first Federal Government bonds and the stocks of two or three banks. Now, 450,000,000 shares of 2100 different issues are dealt in each year.

A seat on the exchange has become a valuable business possession. It may be a family heirloom that can be passed on to succeeding generations. The membership is limited to 1100, which number was authorized in 1879, when 10 new memberships were created to pay for the then new Stock Exchange Building. These memberships sold for something more than $5000 each—a low price then—and the purchasers were often jocularly called "The Forty Thieves."

With the buying of securities in lots from 10 to 1000 shares and even more, trading activity has mounted in 10 years from 173,000,000 shares annually to a record total of 452,000,000 shares in 1925. Seats on the exchange, meanwhile, have risen in value from a low of $88,000 in 1915 to a record high of $175,000.

NO HOPE OF REFORMING MARSEILLES' VICIOUS SLUMS

Police Say Old Port Is Too Ancient in Wickedness to Mend Its Ways.

By the Associated Press.

MARSEILLES, France, Dec. 11.—Reformist organizations admit the futility of their efforts to clean out the deep-seated iniquities of the famous Old Port section of Marseilles.

No tourists penetrate into the old port, where, in labyrinthian alleys, narrow, dark, dirtier and more sordid than the most squalid slum in an American industrial town, the riff-raff of the world—white, yellow, brown, but mostly African black—shuffles furtively.

Despite an elaborately organized system of police protection with heavily armed gendarmes, always in pairs or groups, constantly circulating in the lanes, danger lurks at every corner after dark.

Even during the day, there is danger. Foreigners who pass are warned not to enter, particularly if they are well-dressed or accompanied by women. Sometimes, when curiosity-seekers insist, the policemen allow them to pass through the district, walking several paces behind them.

"See-Marseilles-at-Night" tourist autobusses steer a safe course, not coming within a half-mile of the infamous Old Port. Even groups of men are kept out on Saturday nights, when the streets are packed with sailors and soldiers from all parts of the world.

The police points out that it is the oldest city in Western Europe and its iniquities are too deep-seated to be eradicated. The number of aggressions nightly is still very high, but the number of fatalities is much lower than it was a generation ago, when a human life was worth no more than a few sous.

VICTORIAN FURNITURE BURNED

Once Prized Sets Being Used for Fuel in England.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Victorian furniture, once in demand by home lovers and later much sought by collectors, has sustained a setback and tons of it have found their way to the carpenter's storehouse, or to the fireplace, now that coal is scarce and dear, due to the miners' dispute with the mine owners.

Thousands of pieces of former prized Victorian sets of all kinds, the pride of many drawing and bed rooms years ago, have lost most of their pep, and are not in demand any more even in secondhand shops.

Numerous once wonderful horsehair sofas, now that there has been a revulsion against Victorian furniture, are being chopped up for firewood, along with the great sideboards.

LAKE MICHIGAN 15 INCHES HIGHER THAN IN JANUARY

Return of Level to Normal Revives Demand for "Lakes to Gulf" Deep Waterway in Illinois.

SURFACE HAD BEEN LOWERED 3 FEET

Report of Canadian Engineers Supports Theory of "Drouth Period," Now Apparently at End.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—A deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic is receiving new impetus now that the Great Lakes appear to be rising at the same time that some of the ones for lowering the waters levels is being taken off Chicago's back.

For the past three years there has been serious concern over the drop in Lake Michigan water levels to more than three feet below normal. Shipping has suffered millions of dollars of loss because of the necessity of light loading, while port cities have been put to heavy expense to keep their harbors dredged.

Now a truce has come. Engineers of the Chicago Sanitary District say that the level of Lake Michigan has risen nearly 15 inches since last January. There was a slight rise even during October when the usual order is a further sagging off in the level.

Ends Drouth Period.

More than 22 inches of the 40-inch drop that occurred in the Lake Michigan waterline is attributed by sanitary district engineers to unusually light rainfall and heavy evaporation of recent years. They say that the recent rise is evidence that this period of drouth is over. The recent report of the Canadian hydrographic office, showing that Lakes Superior, Huron, Erie and Ontario all are filling up and heading back to normal serves to confirm the Chicago findings.

Some comfort also is found by Chicago in the report of Canadian and American engineers that Canada is responsible for as much of a lowering of lake levels through diversion of water, as is the Chicago Sanitary district. Combined, their diversions account for one foot of the drop.

This clearing of the atmosphere over the water diversion problem comes just at a time when revived interest is being shown in the waterway projects. The joint engineering commission of Canada and the United States reports the navigation features of the Lakes-St Lawrence waterway would cost $725,000,000 or just the amount of the surplus now in the Federal treasury.

Urge Early Action.

The Mississippi Valley Association, however, has balked on this plan and now is joining with the Atlantic seaboard in pushing the "All-American deep waterway," which does not take advantage of the St. Lawrence.

Some sort of action, and early action, with regard to construction of a waterway to the Atlantic is expected by the American Farm Bureau Federation. The farmers figure that with lake rates sometimes only one-tenth of the rail rates, they would have a very substantial financial interest in establishing water contact with the world markets. As engineer estimates place eight years as the time required to build a waterway the agricultural interests want work to get underway soon.

If Chicago's controversy with the other lake states over diversion of water for sewage disposal purposes is finally settled by a general rise in lake levels, such as seems now to be under way, then more time can be given to considering the waterway proposal.

SESQUICENTENNIAL SPECIAL COINS NOT GOOD SELLERS

Remainder of Half-Dollars and Gold Pieces to Be Remelted at Mint.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10.—Americans are disinclined to pay one dollar for a 50-cent piece, even though the coin bears the likeness of George Washington and President Coolidge. Nor are they enthusiastic about paying $3.50 for $2.50 gold pieces, regardless of the design. Profit from special coins struck for the Sesquicentennial Exposition recently amount to slightly more than $125,000.

The coins were minted last May. One million of the silver pieces were turned out while 300,000 of the gold pieces were made. A check a short time ago revealed that about 150,000 of the half-dollars and 50,000 of the $2.50 gold pieces had been disposed of.

The minting of the silver pieces created a precedent, making the first time that the likeness of a living president appeared on a national coin. Unsold pieces will be remelted at the mint.

In many ways the most potent single influence on the development of broadcasting programs has been that of the Atwater Kent Hour, which goes out to the radio audience direct from New York through KSD and its allied stations. This weekly Sunday night concert by artists of national and even international fame was started more than a year ago by Atwater Kent, the manufacturer, as a big forward step in what he believed would be rapid improvement in the quality of broadcast programs.

Now an Institution.

It was announced suddenly, without advance commotion of rumor or publicity. It won instant popularity and has steadily gained public favor until today it has become an established Sunday night institution in the homes of the country.

Through the chain stations the country east of the Rockies is ticketed. Literally millions of persons on the farms, in the villages and smaller cities, even in the large cities, who never had the opportunity to hear musical artists of the first rank, now enjoy these weekly concerts. Seated comfortably in their homes, they listen without cost to artists whom Metropolitan Opera patrons and New York concert goers pay large prices to hear.

Popularizing the Finer Music.

More grand opera airs are being whistled and hummed than ever before. More of the music of the great composers is being recognized and liked by those who had not been of the musically-elect. Hundreds of thousands of persons have learned through these radio concerts that the finer music is far lovlier, and far more interesting than the so-called "popular" music. In truth, the general development in musical understanding and appreciation resulting from these Atwater Kent Hours may well be regarded as the outstanding contribution thus far made by radio to American culture.

A move that went far toward fixing the Atwater Kent Hour firmly in public esteem was an agreement whereby it was assured of the services of the stars of the Metropolitan Opera company, in New York.

This meant not only a sure supply of artists of note for KSD's audience Sunday nights, but also that the great singers of the whole world sooner or later would be heard on the air, for what operatic singer, but feels that his career lacks a fitting climax if he fails to "make the Metropolitan." It is by no means inconceivable that the day may come when no singer or instrumentalist will feel that he has reached all the musical heights unless he has "made the Atwater Kent Hour."

The Lesson of Allen McQuhae.

This Atwater Kent Hour, by the way, has gone a long way toward bringing about a change in the attitude of prominent artists, who either had been shy about appearing before the microphone or expressed disdain or joked lightly about the new form of amusement.

The flood of letters that poured in on the artists appearing in the Atwater Kent Hour, the appreciative comments of newspapers and magazines, and the general recognition of the value of the vast radio audience's favor, soon caused them to see the situation in a different light. Now the artist who balks, or pretends to balk, at broadcasting is seldom found.

No negligible factor in all this has been the experience of Allen McQuhae, the Irish tenor, who carried on the Atwater Kent Hour last summer with the help of an orchestra.

Through those weekly broadcasts McQuhae won fame and standing with music lovers that would have come to him in former days, only after years of work. Artists and their managers seldom are obtuse when fame or money are concerned, so the lesson of Allen McQuhae has not been lost on them.

Atwater Kent Hour Notables.

The list of artists who have appeared thus far this season in the Atwater Kent Hour and of those still scheduled to sing for KSD's audience Sunday nights is impressive. The new Fall-Winter series of concerts began Oct. 3, when Anna Case, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Albert Spalding, violinist of international fame, gave a joint recital. Others who have been heard since then are:

Louise Hunter and Clarence Whitehill, Metropolitan Opera baritone and noted singer in Wagner's operas, who has made the role of of Amfortas, in "Parsifal," peculiarly his own;

Margarete Matzenauer, operatic star, who sings as mezzo-soprano as well as dramatic soprano; and Frank La Forge, pianist-composer;

Charles Hackett, tenor of the Chicago opera, and Paul Kochanski, the violinist;

Jeanne Gordon, contralto, and John Powell, pianist;

Lea Luboshutz, violinist, and Maurice Dumesnil, pianist;

Frieda Hempel, Metropolitan opera soprano;

Reinald Werrenrath, who is possibly the best-known baritone singing in this country;

Lucrezia Bori, soprano, of the Metropolitan opera;

Mabel Garrison, concert coloratura soprano, and Ernst von Dohnanyi, composer-pianist.

Artists Yet to Be Heard.

Among the notables who are scheduled to broadcast from KSD in future Atwater Kent hours are Mme. Schumann-Heink, Josef Hoffman, Rosa Ponselle, Mary Lewis, Edward Johnson and others.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is probably generally regarded as the greatest singer appearing in this country. Her long and splendid career as leading contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, her years of concertizing, her singing for the soldiers during the World War, and the breadth and depth of her art—have won for her a unique place in the affections of music lovers.

Josef Hoffman for years has been ranked among the world's great pianists. A recital by him is an event.

Rosa Ponselle's swift rise to fame in opera is a familiar story. She has a beautiful voice and a vivid personality.

Mary Lewis' climb from obscurity to operatic stardom has been one of the popular modern musical romances.

Edward Johnson won fame in opera in Europe before he made a similar success in opera in this country.

Louise Homer, who for years sang leading contralto roles with the Metropolitan Opera Company and since has sung in recital in every city of size in the land, also will be heard in an Atwater Kent hour this winter.

RADIO SET LEADS MAN TO KNOW HE OWNS VIOLIN DATED 1748

W. A. Hedges, a farmer in Barlow, Ore., told this story in the Atwater Kent survey:

"I got a thrill out of a harmonica contest, but a bigger one out of a fiddler's contest. After hearing those old-time jigs I got to thinking about my own violin.

"I used to play for dances myself. The fiddle's been in the attic for years. I dragged it out and showed it to a neighbor. He looked on the inside, and right down in a corner you could see the date. It was 1748, and the name was Stradivari.

"I guess that's a pretty valuable fiddle, worth several hundred dollars, isn't it? Sell it? No, sir. I might just as well have the best as anybody.

"And to think I never knew what a prize I owned, and never would have known, if it hadn't been that I had a radio set."

DENIAL THAT STATION WCBR HAS JUMPED WAVE LENGTH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 5, 1926.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: Will you be kind enough to rectify a mistake that was made in your issue of today, regarding radio station WCBR, portable.

Station WCBR was the first portable station licensed for the United States, and was assigned a license with wave length 246 meters. As others came into the field my wave was cut down by the department to 234, then to 205.4, then raised to 209.7. It was given 234 back again, as 246 was assigned to Baltimore, Md.

As this station is on record, and is a member of the National Association of Broadcasters, it is abiding by the Department of Commerce rulings.

We intend to operate here in this city, and do not want to be considered a wave jumper.

Very truly,

CHAS. H. MESSTER,

Stations WCBR and WCBS.

How Radio Set Operates Is Explained by Engineer

Expert Describes Course in Receiver by Which Signal's Strength Is Increased Until It Can Work Loud Speaker.

"MAYBE three or four years from now there will be such a general understanding as regards types of radio sets and responsibility of manufacturers that you can then buy a radio set the way you can now buy an automobile," writes a prominent radio engineer.

"How does a radio set work?"

"Let us keep off all technical language and treat this in simple, every-day English with no further entrance into mathematics than the plain two-times-two.

"With papers and current talk full of radio frequency, audio frequency, detectors, amplifiers, power tubes, cone speakers, this, that and the other thing, we lose sight of certain simple and basic facts.

"Before radio became 'complicated' we used to speak of a 'detector' and that's just where we want to start right now if we want to get a good mental picture of what a radio set does.

"Never mind the technical description of a detector, nor the details of the technical manner in which it works. Just bear in mind that obviously the function of a detector is to 'detect.'

Function of Tube.

"A detector is generally some kind of a tube, so let's just call it that—a tube.

"This tube, broadly speaking, causes an inaudible signal to become audible. It changes an alternating current incoming signal to a direct current signal, pulsating, but direct current nevertheless.

"The modern apparatus for reproducing broadcasting, known as a loud speaker, or a horn, or a cone, will respond to direct current impulses but it will not respond to alternating current impulses. Therefore a detector is used to permit the horn, or whatever we may call our reproducing device, to give audible signals.

"Before this detector can work, however, it must have something to work on. It must have an incoming signal of a certain strength before it will act.

"Suppose you are near a powerful broadcasting station and that you have a good aerial. Under these conditions your detector would get enough signal strength from the aerial to permit it to act. It can detect.

"But suppose you are at a distance somewhat remote from the broadcasting station, and your aerial will not give you a full signal. Then you have to increase the value of this signal before it is strong enough to make the detector respond.

"There is only one way you can increase this signal, and that is by means of radio frequency amplification.

"How do you accomplish this radio frequency amplification?

"Here again you make use of a tube. It is true the tube may be constructed differently internally than the detector tube, or may be the same kind as the detector tuoe but with different connections to its terminal, but for our purpose let us consider it as just a tube, nevertheless.

"Now, this tube when properly connected in the radio frequency end of the receiver will materially increase the signal strength which comes down the antenna. It will not convert it from alternating current to direct current as the detector tube does, but it will merely convert it from alternating current value of a low degree to alternating current value of a high degree.

"So we take the signal which comes down the antenna, and which is of very low value, and put it through the radio frequency tube, which will build it up to such value, that when put into the detector tube it will enable the detector tube to convert it from alternating current into direct current. This radio frequency tube multiplies by five the strength of the signal coming down the aerial.

Additional Tubes.

"Suppose now you are still further away from the broadcasting station, or the broadcasting station is very weak and the signal it sends down your antenna, even when increased by the multiplying value of this radio frequency tube, is still too weak to cause the detector to respond. What are you going to do?

"That is simple. All you do is use another radio frequency tube which will further amplify the signal to a point where it will go into the detector tube with strength enough.

"Theoretically one may continue along these lones indefinitely and have three, four, five, six or even more stages of radio frequency, each amplifying its signal to a certain extent, with the result that with an incoming signal down the antenna of practically nothing one can secure sufficient value to cause the detector to respond.

"Generally speaking, a well-designed stage of tuned radio frequency will increase a signal in a ratio of about eight to one. Therefore the signal coming out from the first tube is eight times as strong as the signal coming down the antenna. Going into the second tube with a value of eight, it comes out with a value of 64. Going into the third tube with a value of 64, it comes out with a value of 512. Going into the fourth tube with a value of 512, it comes out with a value of 4096.

More Audio Tubes Needed.

"We now see how even a weak signal coming down the antenna will cause the detector to respond; we multiply it as necessary by successive stages of frequency.

"Now we have our detector to detect and to convert the antenna signal through radio frequency tubes into a direct-current signal; that is, a signal of a character which will cause the reproducing device such as a speaker or horn to deliver the thing which is audible.

"Suppose that a signal of character which comes from detector tube, although it is a direct-current variety, is too weak to make a horn play loud enough and we want to hear the sound from the horn.

"Then we have to use audio tubes. Only this time, instead being used as radio-frequency or as detector tubes, they are used as audio-frequency tubes, a derivation of the audio name to this tube designation. Of course, apparent now we are dealing wit a signal which is of audible variety. It is amplified which, when put through the speaker, will enable us to hear.

"Then, as the radio-frequency tube would take a weak signal coming down the antenna and increase it in value, so does the audio tube take the low value signal coming from the detector and increase its value.

"If one audio tube does not give us enough increase, then we use the same practice we follow in the radio end and run the signal through the second audio tube. Here again theoretically we could use three, four, five or six tubes, each contributing its correspondent increase in value to the value of the signal which is put into it. But again we are stopped by practical limitations, and three stages of audio frequency amplification is about all that can be practically accomplished, and here again two stages are about all that can be used to practical value.

Four Stages of Audio Power.

"Up to about two years ago the most modern type of radio set and most powerful type of radio set was limited to two stages of radio frequency amplification, the detector, and then two stages of audio frequency amplification.

"Modern developments have now permit the use of three stages of audio amplification, and the types of present-day high-power receivers involving four stages of audio frequency forms an arrangement which can accomplish wonderful results—results which only a year ago were considered impossible.

"When atmospheric conditions permit, a receiver of this class is practically unlimited in its range, and when located in the most adverse surroundings such as in large buildings, remote distance from broadcasting station, or where the broadcasting station is extremely low in power, a receiver of this character will give a superior appearance of volume, and when properly designed, a fidelity of tone production which is a revelation to those who have heretofore been accustomed to sets of lower power.

"Such a receiver will accomplish on a small loop what other receivers cannot accomplish even with large and unsightly antennas when equipped with a modern battery supply device which, by taking all of the supply energy from the lamp socket on the house lighting system, it is a device which with the exception of the tubes is practically void of depreciation, always instantly available for reception, permitting the operator to select only one of a large variety of programs, will give pleasing results 365 days in the year."

How Radio ... Sets Are M...

Many and Involved Pro... to Making of R... Loud Sp...

Only a few years ago the feat of making wood, metal and wires pull messages from the air was hardly more than a hobby of scientists, but it has developed into one of the principal factors of America's electrical industry. More than 3,000,000 receiving sets have been made in the United States during the last five years, the Federal Census Bureau reports.

Of the 400 radio factories in the United States, the largest is the new Atwater Kent plant at Philadelphia, where on 12 acres of floor space workers and machines turn out receiving sets and radio speakers.

Collection of raw materials is the first step toward producing radios and, although a single receiver and radio speaker can be placed on a smal ltable, a train of freight cars three miles long would be needed to hold the mahogany, steel, aluminum, brass, copper and other crude materials used by this factory for a year's output of radio sets and speakers.

Changing raw materials into finished apparatus is the second step in radio making so, from the storerooms the visitor steps into an adjourning shop, where dials and rheostat knobs are being molded.

Baking the Dials.

The knobs are made out of a brown flour called bakelite. The baker pours it into seven little cups in a shiny steel pan, or mold. He places in the center of each cup of flour a small brass tube, which eventually will fasten the knob to its shaft. Then he covers the "dough" with the mold's top, and puts it in an oven which is in a reality a hot press.

The oven's temperature, 300 degrees Fahrenheit, and hydro-electric pressure of 3000 pounds to a square inch, melts the "flour" to a paste. Then the pressure is released and the molded is lifted out and placed in a "cold press." Here the paste is allowed to harden.

Having completed the process by removing knobs from their cups, the baker turns his hose of compressed air into the pan and blows it clean and bright for the next baking.

In the next aisle, a workman is taking baked dials from pans. They are to be frosted. The frosting is white enamel, which the girls at a nearby table rub into the engraved figures around the dial's edges.

Defective Ones Destroyed.

A knob or dial occasionally comes from the oven too brown, or not brown enough, or with a scratch. These knobs are set aside by inspectors and no matter how slight the defect, they are destroyed at the end of each day.

The recipe for this peculiar "flour" which is mixed in a group of Jersey plants is:

"To one portion of carbolic acid, add a portion of formaldehyde. Season with asbestos and wood flour. Stir well."

Each mold has to be tempered most carefully to endure heat and pressure directed upon it 24 hours a day by that vigorous team of "bakers."

Flour rams, striking with the force of three tons of falling bricks, pound out the shapely bell, from a flat piece of steel. With one blow, the first ram battens a hollow in the flat steel. The second ram hammers a smaller hollow inside the first. The third makes an even smaller inside the second. Finally the fourth drives in its dent.

The bell, of course, is contorted by the punches, but a mechanical presser irons out all its creases in a few minutes.

Details of Set Making.

Between the big punch's growls, there rises the whirring noise of many smaller machines—some slicing 12-feet-long brass pipes into inch-and-a-quarter tube sockets—some cutting condenser plates out of aluminum strips—some clipping washers from ribbons of steel—all apparently racing to produce the greatest number of parts to go into the handsome mahogany cabinets being made in the adjoining section—the carpenter shop.

Sawing up a $25,000 pile of lumber—every plank of solid Mexican mahogany—is the sight that first attracts the visitor to the carpenter shop. Machine-driven tools aid the carpenters—sawing planks into boards for cabinet lids, bottoms and sides; planing the boards; drilling holes and even sandpapering them.

Real gold gleams in the next section, the plating shop. Several hundred copper name plates are being given their gold bath. They slide about in a wire basket as it swings through the solution. Six bars of pure 24-carat gold hang at one side of the vat and supply the valuable covering which the solution transfers to the plates.

While men drive powerful machines on one side of the factory, on the other side girls wind wire thinner than human hair into condenser and transformer coils, insulate wires and polish completed parts. Women perform the delicate tasks, such as wire winding, better than men, supervisors say, so they constitute one-third of the factory's employes.

"Hair-raising," literally, describes some jobs done by the girls. Those who polish screws on lathes, for instance, have their bobbed tresses pulled as erect as porcupine quills by electric energy that the power belts create. They are not near enough to the belts to be in danger, and several say they like to have their hair stand on end, de-

How Radio Receiving Sets Are Manufactured

Many and Involved Processes and Tests Go to Making of Receivers and Loud Speakers.

Only a few years ago the feat of making wood, metal and wires pull messages from the air was hardly more than a hobby of scientists, but it has developed into one of the principal factors of America's electrical industry. More than 5,000,000 receiving sets have been made in the United States during the last five years, the Federal Census Bureau reports.

They are not near enough to the belts to be in danger, and several say they like to have their hair stand on end, declaring it makes their "crowning glory" more glorious.

Girls put the sets together. They stand on both sides of a moving belt, with finished parts within hand's reach. At the head of the belt single pieces of steel—the front panels—are placed.

Every Set Tested.

Taking a panel, one girl attaches condensers, transformers and tube sockets to it, and starts it down the belt. Upon reaching the second group of girls, it is lifted from the belt by one of them, who adds cables for loud speaker and batteries and sends it on. At the third group, wiring under the set is added; at the fourth, dials and rheostat knobs, so that at the end of the belt there arrives an assembled radio set, ready for inspection and deposit in a cabinet.

The standard set on each tester's table has been brought as near perfection as the several engineers through whose hands it must pass can make it. It is then padlocked so that nothing can be touched to change it. A switch at the tester's hand changes reception from the standard set, which must reproduce as clearly as the standard. The reason for such thorough method of testing, experts say, is that receiving conditions vary and so do batteries but the new set must do as well as the standard under all conditions.

MILLIONTH SET MADE BY ATWATER KENT

More Than 600,000 Receivers to Be Produced by Firm This Year.

A message received by the Brown & Hall Supply Co., St. Louis distributer for the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Co. of Philadelphia, states that the millionth Atwater Kent radio receiving set was completed at the company's factories at 4 o'clock, Dec. 3.

The message came from A. Atwater Kent himself and said that a duplicate of the millionth set, completed immediately afterward, had been shipped bearing a special gold plate with the number of the set certified over Kent's signature. It was further stated that, in addition to the millionth set turned out by the Atwater Kent plant, 5312 other sets were produced the same day.

Ceremonies were held at the plant to celebrate the production of the millionth set. Kent himself held the final test of this instrument in the presence of thousands of his employes and friends. He will retain it as his own and it will be displayed at his 15-acre factories as significant evidence of the rapid growth of the company.

Simultaneously with completion of the millionth set Kent made public for the first time the production figures of the Atwater Kent factories for the past four years. They reveal a large and rapid growth. Throughout the past year the increase has been particularly rapid. Plans for production, formed at the beginning of the year, had to be doubled and tripled over and over again, until the factory is now turning out 11 sets a minute—a total of more than 5800 per day. By the end of the fiscal year (April 30) the number of Atwater Kent receiving sets shipped in the 12 months will have reached 600,000.

The production figures just announced show that the first Atwater Kent receiving set was shipped in November, 1922. Since then the yearly output has been as follows:

Year. (May 1 to April 30).	No. Shipped
1922-1923	6,628
1923-1924	58,927
1924-1925	175,461
1925-1926	331,208
1926-1927	600,000

The number of the duplicate millionth set, now on its way to the Brown & Hall Supply Co., will be between 1,000,000 and 1,000,100. It has been shipped personally by Kent to his distributer here in celebration of the completion of the millionth set and as an object of interest to Atwater Kent owners and friends. When received it will be placed on display, so that all persons interested in the millionth set may see one exactly like it, produced within a few minutes of the hour the millionth set was turned out.

WBAL HAS AN ANNOUNCER FOR EACH PROGRAM DAILY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11.—Several new announcers have been appointed to the staff of WBAL, Baltimore's superpower station, by Frederick R. Huber, director. This is in accordance with an announcement made several weeks ago that this station planned to have a different announcer for each program feature.

"People get tired of hearing the same voice over and over again and, by injecting a fresh new voice every time a different program feature goes on the air, each program assumes a definite personality that is refreshing to "listeners in," Huber said.

Full Program of KDKA Is Received in Greenland

For the First Time Entire Broadcast From U. S. Is Picked Up by Set in Arctic Country.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 11.—The radio program has entered Greenland. The special broadcasts transmitted to the Far North every winter by the four Westinghouse radio stations have penetrated the atmospheric veil overhanging the frozen North and have taken to the isolated residents a new form of winter cheer and entertainment.

Cable and wireless brought the message from Godhaven, Greenland, that the program of Nov. 20 from KDKA had been received in entirety and clearly.

No word, however, from most of the remote points at which the broadcasts were aimed will be received until next summer, with the arrival of the few weeks of navigation during the short warm season. The four stations, KDKA; KYW, Chicago; KFKX, Hastings, Neb., and WBZ, Springfield, Mass., have transmitted one program of the scheduled four apiece.

Greet Consuls.

KDKA reception was reported by the Government agent at Godhaven, and by Dr. Morten Porsild, Danish scientist stationed there. They sent greetings to the Danish Consuls-General at New York and Montreal, and Dr. Porsild acknowledged receipt of messages from his two sons, who are in the western part of Canadian Northwest territory, conducting a botanical exploration for the Canadian Government.

They have not kept their [illegible] apprised of their movements [illegible] time to time through KDKA transmission.

It is the first time in radio history that a whole program has been received in Greenland. The program included messages of a personal nature, for transmission over radio and telegraph waves to [illegible] traders and trappers in the [illegible] country, who could not otherwise have communicated with the outside world during the long winter months.

A number of settlements, [illegible] of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and trading posts of [illegible] villon Freres and the Hudson Bay Co. have receiving equipment of some kind. Until KDKA, [illegible] finally all of the Westinghouse stations, commenced the special Arctic programs, what little amateur communication there was had to be conducted on short-wave telegraph. The messages sent with the programs were all repeated on short-wave telegraph from KDKA. In addition, this station transmitted on 63 meter wave simultaneously with the general broadcast of 309 meters.

Station KYW will go on the air next with an Arctic program, on Dec. 18. KFKX will follow on Christmas eve, and KDKA on the night of Christmas. WBZ, which finished the first cycle of programs a week ago, will again be heard in the Arctic on the night of Jan. 1.

MICROPHONIC WAILS ARE EASY TO CHECK

Causes of Such Noises May Be Cured After Locating Their Source.

Microphonic noises, the hum that sometimes rises to a wail or a howl, are among the various troubles that come and go without apparent cause. This trouble can be diagnosed by shutting off the A battery switch for 30 seconds and then switching it on again. Do this with as little noise or vibration as possible. If the low hum does not start up immediately, one may be reasonably sure that he is troubled with microphonic noises. These noises are caused by vibration of the elements in the tubes and may be cured by various expedients. Nonmicrophonic sockets are the best constructional help. These sockets are either cushioned with spongy rubber or support the top of the tube, which is, of course, the free end and most liable to vibrate.

The first thing to look for is loose tubes. If the tubes are all tight, look for tubes that have become loose in the tube base. The glass part of the tube frequently comes loose from its base. This permits a slight motion of the glass part of the tube, which is soon transmitted to the elements, and a hum results. This can usually be cured of wripping two or three layers of tape around the junction of the base and the bulb.

Other causes are not always so easy to locate. Every part of a set has a natural period of vibration and the set as a whole has one. When the speaker is located on top of the set or on the same table or built into the same cabinet, there will be a search on the part of the speaker for loose members that will vibrate sympathetically. As soon as one is found they begin to howl in unison.

In all cases where no definite treatment is indicated it is established practice in any inexact science to try a lot of things in the secret hope that you may stumble on the solution. The set itself may have been supported on rubber or rubber buttons might have been screwed into the bottoms of the table legs. But none of these may be in stock. By trial it may be discovered that it is one particular tube that makes the trouble. If this is not loose, try holding your hand on the tube. This may help. If it does, wind several layers of tape around the large end of the tube. This increases the inertia and discourages vibration. Or the tube can be wrapped in the felt and corrugated paper that it came in and secured with tightly wound string. This tends to absorb vibration.

CLASSICAL HOUR RIVALS LIGHT PROGRAM IN APPEAL

Two years ago, few stations would have felt free to broadcast so severely classical a program as that recently released from KFI—an hour's 'cello recital by Ferenz Steiner. Instead of grouping sentimental tidbits about one musical "war horse," as is usually the case, Steiner presented two sonatas for violoncello and piano by Corelli and Richard Strauss, with supporting compositions of similar caliber.

As an earnest to those who believe that extreme quality has little place in broadcasting, Earle C. Anthony, owner of KFI, points out that the telephone applause on this hour alone was as heavy as on a request dance number program.

RADIO SETS TO RELIEVE LIGHTHOUSE ISOLATION

200 Five-Tube Receivers Given by Atwater Kent for All Remote Stations.

No more will relief for the men in the isolated stations of Uncle Sam's lighthouse service depend on chance when an emergency arises. For, with the gift of 200 five-tube radio receiving sets from A. Atwater Kent of Philadelphia, the lighthouse service now has sufficient sets to equip all the more remote stations and insure a method of immediate communication with them at all seasons.

These sets, however, will not only make possible emergency communication in such situations, but will provide a medium by which the loneliness and monotony of life for the keepers of light stations may be relieved by programs of concerts, lectures, sermons, news and weather reports.

Endorsing the movement to equip lighthouses with radio sets as started by a public-spirited woman who heard how radio had brought Thompson to the bedside of his dying wife, Kent recently wrote Secretary of Commerce Hoover:

"I should like, as my tribute to the men in the lighthouse service, to provide each of the 200 lighthouses which I understand are now without radio receiving equipment with an Atwater Kent receiving set and speaker. I can think of no group of people to whom radio would mean more than to these keepers and their families, cut off as they are for long periods from either contact or communication with the outside world."

In accepting the offer, Secretary Hoover wrote: "Your gift will materially aid in providing relief and entertainment for a worthy class of public servants. At the best many of these men are forced to lead a dreary, lonely existence, shut off from practically all the customary amusements of the average citizen.

"Many of the stations can be reached only when the weather is favorable. At Tillamook Rock, off the Oregon coast, there have been periods when the lighthouse tender has been unable to reach the station for seven weeks at a stretch. At Cape Sarichef, Alaska, the keepers were unable at one time to receive any mail for a period of 10 months. Radio will do much to relieve the monotony of existence in these isolated stations."

Distribution and installation of the sets will be directed by George R. Putnam, United States Commissioner of Lighthouses. Putnam promised to see that all the more isolated stations, from Alligator Reef, Florida, to Cape Hinchinbrook, Alaska; from the old masonry tower of Cape Henlopen Light, built in 1765, to the most modern steel station on American coast, had radio sets in working order before the winter isolation set in.

Marker for Battery Leads.

A convenient marker for battery leads may be made by taking a piece of flexible cardboard and cutting into pieces about ¾ by 1¾ inches. Punch in each end a hole so that they will be about 1¼ inches apart and of such size that the wire will be free in it. Write on the card between the holes any information desired, and thread the wire through the holes, passing the wire on the opposite side of the card from the writing.

Whistles in a receiver are caused by two or more stations being tuned to the same wave length, and by the owner's set oscillating.

$100,000,000 INCREASE OF RADIO SALES IN YEAR

Those in 1926 to Value About $550,000,000; Probably 5,000,000 Sets.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Radio sales in 1926 will approximate $550,000,000 in value, a gain of fully $100,000,000 as compared with 1925.

This developed in connection with the $40,000,000 deal for the purchase of the Victor Talking Machine Co. by Speyer & Co., and J. W. Seligman & Co. The Victor Co. went into the sale of radio sets in 1925, greatly to its profit, and now is a factor in the industry as well as in the talking machine field through its contract with the Radio Corporation of America, which makes the sets included in many Victrola models.

Holiday expansion in radio sales has been even more extensive than expected. Introduction of new models, the move toward complete electrification of sets, and better broadcasting have broadened the prospective sales field for both sets and accessories.

The industry however, is not yet yet out of the woods. Competition among manufacturers is excessively keen. The industry is hardly out of its swaddling clothes, and even the men in it are almost all young. Many of them, seeing the chances for profits in this new line of endeavors, jumped right into the business, and no small number have been thrown right out again. This trend toward youth in the business is mentioned as a factor which led to the willingness of some stockholders in the Victor Co. to release their stock, which has been closely held for years.

There probably are 5,000,000 sets in operation in this country and the field is constantly broadening. The extent to which this infant industry has become a factor in other lines is shown by a statement by Frank C. Wisner as to the amount of lumber used by receiving set manufacturers.

"The newest great industry, radio manufacture," he said, has found no new synthetic product to dress it up. Radio cabinets and shipping boxes demand hard and soft lumber in enormous quantities. Radio has opened such a market for lumber that there have been times in the last year when the lumber used in cabinets in certain sections was more than went into house building.

If the competition is keen in manufacturing it is more severe in the retail trade.

Retailers have been unable to keep pace with demands for installations and in larger cities a number of installation companies have sprung up which do nothing except install sets sold under contract with the dealer who sells them.

JOLLY BUCKEYE BAKERS

The Jolly Buckeye Bakers, who entertain from KSD Tuesday nights, will again go on the air at 7:30 o'clock this week. Their half-hour program will be divided between the male quartet and a string trio, and will include such vocal selections as "Sympathy" (from "The Firefly"), "Sally in Our Alley," "Old Black Joe" and "Silver Threads Among the Gold." The trio will be heard in two numbers.

Short Waves Travel Far.

Short waves, due to their peculiar properties, travel much greater distances than do the long waves with a given power input. This phenomenon is particularly true in the case of transmissions taking place during broad daylight.

...n of KDKA ...d in Greenland

Entire Broadcast From ...Up by Set in Arctic ...untry.

They have not kept their fath... apprised of their movements fro... time to time through KDKA's transmission.

It is the first time in radio history that a whole program has been received in Greenland. The program included messages of a personal nature, for transmission on voice and telegraph waves to isolated traders and trappers in the north country, who could not otherwise have communicated with the outside world during the long wintry months.

A number of settlements, stations of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and trading posts of Revillon Freres and the Hudson's Bay Co. have receiving equipment of some kind. Until KDKA, and finally all of the Westinghouse stations, commenced the special Arctic programs, what little aerial communication there was had to be conducted on short-wave telegraph. The messages sent with the programs were all repeated on short-wave telegraph from KDKA. In addition, this station transmitted on 63 meter wave simultaneously with the general broadcast on 309 meters.

Station KYW will go on the air next with an Arctic program, on Dec. 18. KFKX will follow on Christmas eve, and KDKA on the night of Christmas. WBZ, which finished the first cycle of programs a week ago, will again be heard in the Arctic on the night of Jan. 1.

RADIO SETS TO RELIEVE LIGHTHOUSE ISOLATION

200 Five-Tube Receivers Given by Atwater Kent for All Remote Stations.

No more will relief for the men in the isolated stations of Uncle Sam's lighthouse service depend on chance when an emergency arises. For, with the gift of 200 five-tube radio receiving sets from A. Atwater Kent of Philadelphia, the lighthouse service now has sufficient sets to equip all the more remote stations and insure a method of immediate communication with them at all seasons.

These sets, however, will not only make possible emergency communication in such situations, but will provide a medium by which the loneliness and monotony of life for the keepers of light stations may be relieved by programs of concerts, lectures, sermons, news and weather reports.

Endorsing the movement to equip lighthouses with radio sets, as started by a public-spirited woman who heard how radio had brought Thompson to the bedside of his dying wife, Kent recently wrote Secretary of Commerce Hoover:

"I should like, as my tribute to the men in the lighthouse service to provide each of the 200 lighthouses which I understand are still without radio receiving equipment, with an Atwater Kent receiving set and speaker. I can think of no group of people to whom radio would mean more than to these keepers and their families, cut off as they are for long periods from either contact or communication with the outside world."

In accepting the offer, Secretary Hoover wrote: "Your gift will materially aid in providing relief and entertainment for a worthy class of public servants. At the best, many of these men are forced to lead a dreary, lonely existence, shut off from practically all the ordinary amusements of the average citizen.

"Many of the stations can be reached only when the weather is favorable. At Tillamook Rock, off the Oregon coast, there have been periods when the lighthouse tender has been unable to reach the station for seven weeks at a stretch. At Cape Sarichef, Alaska, the keepers were unable at one time to receive any mail for a period of 10 months. Radio will do much to relieve the monotony of existence in these isolated stations."

Distribution and installation of the sets will be directed by George R. Putnam, United States Commissioner of Lighthouses. Putnam promised to see that all the more isolated stations, from Alligator Reef, Florida, to Cape Hinchinbrook, Alaska; from the old masonry tower of Cape Henlopen light, built in 1765, to the most modern steel station on American Shoal, had radio sets in working order before the winter isolation set in.

Marker for Battery Leads.

A convenient marker for battery leads may be made by taking a piece of flexible cardboard and cut into pieces about ¾ by 1¾ inches. Punch in each end a hole so that they will be about 1¼ inches apart and of such size that the wire will be free in it. Write on the card between the holes any information desired, and thread the wire through the holes, passing the wire on the opposite side of the card from the writing.

Whistles in a receiver are caused by two or more stations being near the same wave length, and by the owner's set oscillating.

AMATEUR STATIONS IN U. S. JULY 1, 14,829

Total Exceeds That in Any Other Country—Midwest Main Center of Activity.

Amateur broadcasting stations in the United States on July 1 numbered 14,829, according to the Department of Commerce. This total far surpasses that in any other country.

The principal center of amateur activities was in the ninth radio district, comprising Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, the upper peninsula of Michigan, Minnesota, Kentucky, Kansas, Colorado, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota, where the stations numbered 3195. The sixth district was the second most active with 2563 stations, located principally in California. The sixth district comprises the States of California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona and the territory of Hawaii. The eighth district ranked third with 2402 amateur stations in parts of New York and Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, the lower peninsula of Michigan.

Other districts and their stations were as follows:

First, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, 1668; Second, the metropolitan districts of New York and New Jersey, 144; Third, part of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, 1331; Fifth, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, 978; Seventh, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and the territory of Alaska, 719; and finally the Fourth, district of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee and Porto Rico, 719 stations.

Of the United States cities, the greatest number of amateur stations were listed in greater New York including Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx where the Government has licensed 609 transmitters. Second to New York was Chicago, with 418 amateurs, and third, Los Angeles with 393 stations. Boston, of all the principal cities was the least interested in amateur radio, offering in Boston, South Boston, East Boston, only 96 "hams."

Philadelphia ranked fourth with 342 stations and Oakland, Cal., fifth with 280 stations.

Other leading cities in their districts were Cleveland, in the eighth with 151 stations; Portland, Ore., in the seventh with 114 stations; Dallas in the fifth, with 85 stations; and Atlanta in the fourth with 57 stations.

In the cities of San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles the greatest amount of amateur activity of any section of the country was displayed, with a combined total of 1013 amateur transmitters.

EUROPEANS SAID TO BE TAKING INTEREST IN U. S. PROGRAMS

That transatlantic radio reception is not only much improved this year, but that Europeans are taking lively interest in American programs is indicated by the unusual quantities of mail received by Atlantic seaboard broadcasting stations from listeners on the other side.

Not long ago WPG, the municipal broadcasting station at Atlantic City, increased its transmission power to 5000 watts. Edward M. Spence, director, sent the following telegram to Radio Digest Magazine Dec. 3: "Fifty-two letters in one mail today from Europe. Twenty-six of them heard the first Whozit announcement and asked details of the contest." The Whozit contest is a game between radio artists at 24 national broadcasting stations. Radio Digest sponsors an award of $26,000 in prizes. The European listeners wanted to take part in the game and try for the prizes, which is taken as an indication that they are hearing WPG regularly.

The cheaper grades of receiving sets are much more subject to climatic conditions than are the better grades.

Overcharging of storage batteries produces excessive gassing and increases the temperature, causing the plates to buckle.

KGO, CALIFORNIA STATION, NOW ON AIR EVERY EVENING

For the first time in the three years KGO has been on the air, listeners may now tune in the Pacific Coast broadcaster every night in the week at 8 and 9 o'clock, Pacific time (6 and 7 Central time).

Heretofore, Friday night has been silent. On this evening a studio program is given, consisting of popular and classical music.

Features on the air from KGO include the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Sunday afternoons, and church services in the evening; Teh Gondoliers, Monday night; The Pilgrims, Tuesday night; a special farm broadcast Wednesday night; the KGO Little Symphony Orchestra, Thursday night; a studio program Friday night, and a special program Saturday night.

Dance music will be heard on Thursday and Saturday nights after 9 o'clock, with popular songs between numbers.

Add audio amplification to let louder signals instead of forcing the detector.

When the set fails suddenly and the trouble cannot be found in the set look at the aerial.

HOW POWER TUBES WORK IN RECEIVERS

Design Permits Them to Handle Greater Volume Without Distortion.

POWER tubes are power handlers, not power producers, as many think.

Of itself a power tube will not produce more volume than a non-power tube. Its design permits it to handle greater volume without distortion.

Most receiving sets are capable of delivering more volume to the last audio tube than can be handled without distortion by the usual types of amplifying tubes. This is where the power tube is needed—in the last audio stage only, where it can receive the volume developed in the earlier stages of the set and pass it on, amplified but undistorted, to the loud speaker.

The electrical characteristics of power tubes are quite different from those of the customary amplifying tubes. Power tubes consume more B battery current and they require greater C battery voltage.

The wrong C battery voltage robs the power tube of its ability to handle greater volume without distortion, resulting in operation little, if any, better than ordinary tubes. In addition, if the C battery voltage is too low the B current consumed by the tube is multiplied many fold, which rapidly exhausts the B battery. Merely substituting a power tube for some other tube in the last audio stage of a receiver will not bring about any noticeable improvement in reception. Provision must be made in the wiring of the set to allow placing the correct value of C battery voltage on the grid of the power tube.

The newest power tubes are CX 371 and UX 171. These tubes can be operated on B battery voltages of 90, 135 or 180 volts. The amount of undistorted power which these tubes can handle when working at 135 volts of B battery is in most cases more than can comfortably be used in the average home. It is only when unusual volume is desired, such as to enable a crowd to dance in a large hall, that the extreme voltage of 180 volts is required. For home use 135 volts of B battery is ample for the CX 371 and UX 171 power tubes.

With these tubes, when the B battery voltage is 135 volts, the C battery voltage should be 27 volts. A new 22½-volt C battery has been introduced by one of the largest manufacturers, and when connected in series with a 4½-volt C battery the combination will deliver the 27 volts required by these power tubes operating at 135 volts of B battery.

The extra power handled by power tubes is furnished by the B battery, and because of this they should never be operated from small size B batteries. Use only the large size of good, reliable make, and be sure to use the correct B battery voltage.

STORAGE BATTERY NEEDS CARE

Install the battery so that all cells are readily accessible for filling and testing. That is, so any of the caps on top of the battery can be removed with the least trouble. Keep the outside of the battery clean and dry. Wipe off any solution or moisture with a cloth dampened with ammonia water. Keep the plates always covered with solution. Do this by regularly adding water (distilled, if possible). Do not fill higher than just below the bottom of the filing tubes; in freezing temperatures, do not add water until ready to begin the charge. Never add new electrolyte or dilute acid, if some of the solution has been spilled, without the advice of a battery service man. Never allow metals or impurities of any kind to get into the cells. Except in emergencies, recharge the battery before the voltage becomes too low for satisfactory operation of the receiver.

Take readings regularly with a reliable hydrometer (at any time except just after adding water) and be guided by their indications as follows: (a) Reading less than 1150 for the high-gravity battery and less than 1050 for the low gravity battery indicates a state of complete discharge. A battery in such condition should be given a complete charge at once. (b) If the reading of one cell differs from the reading of the others by an appreciable amount it indicates loss of electrotyte, wrongful addition of acids or some other trouble. Take the battery to a skilled service man for attention. If the battery is to stand idle for some time, it should first be fully charged. Give it a freshening charge every 30 days, if possible, and between the charges disconnect all wires from the battery to prevent the possibility of any current leading away. If repairs are necessary, take the battery to the best service man available. Do not trust it to unskilled hands. Ammonia water or soda solution will if applied immediately. That is, if acid is spilled on rugs or clothing, apply ammonia water or a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) to it at once.

Keep Work Bench Clean.

When finishing one job of wiring or assembling a receiver, take time to thoroughly clean up the work bench and, if necessary, the workroom, too, before starting another job. It will be surprising what a help this will be.

RADIO BUSINESS IS SETTING NEW RECO

Sales of Atwater Kent Sets and Speakers in This District to Total 25,000 in Year.

The enormous expansion of the radio business within the last two years is illustrated by the prediction that before the end of the year 25,000 Atwater Kent receiving sets and speakers will have been sold in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. This prediction was made yesterday by Norman S. Hall, president of the Brown-Hall Supply Co., Atwater Kent distributer in the St. Louis district. Norman S. Brown, territorial representative for Atwater Kent, says that the fiscal year, which runs from April to April, will pile up a still larger record of sales.

The Brown & Hall Supply Co., which has been in business since 1913, took up radio about five years ago. It has distributed Atwater Kent radio products for four years in St. Louis, Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

It has seen sales of Atwater Kent sets and speakers increase so rapidly that 1927 will break all records by thousands.

In addition to Brown, officers of the company include Fred A. Wiebe, vice president; Gilbert H. Semple, treasurer, and Forrest Brewington, secretary.

Cleanser for Dirty Panels.

Dirty or greasy panels can be cleaned by rubbing lightly over the surface with a soft cloth dampened with alcohol. This will remove the dirt, then dry the panels with another cloth. The alcohol will evaporate quickly without damaging the set in any way, and will leave a high polish. Never use water when cleaning panels or any part of the receiver.

"THE MOST SCIENTIFIC RADIO SERVICE IN ST. LOUIS"

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU!

Two of the officers of our company are electrical engineers holding degrees from Purdue University. Both had special Radio training during the war as lieutenants in the Signal Corps and at Yale University.

Mr. S. B. Singer, who is directly in charge of our Radio Department, is exceptionally well versed not only in the theory of Radio but in its practical application as well. He is an acknowledged expert.

When our Radio Department was opened six years ago, Mr. Singer started the idea of Radio Service in the home. We were pioneers in this. So well was this carried out that in addition to handling a large number of our calls for service, we took care of the service calls that were necessary in the sale of sets for some of the best known downtown stores. They depended on us for the servicing of the sets they sold. All of this gave us a marvelous insight into the requirements of the whole business.

Our reputation soon developed a demand that we sell sets which quickly grew into a large volume of sales without advertising. Today, we have one of the largest Radio Departments in St. Louis because of this exceptional service. We have twelve service men all the time for your service.

Your Radio Set is a more or less delicate bit of mechanism. It takes expert knowledge to correct difficulties which may arise and do this without tinkering with your set and guessing at the trouble. We have the training and the testing equipment to quickly determine what is wrong so that it may be made right.

This expert Radio Service and its assurance of complete satisfaction brings more and more people daily to buy their Radio Sets from us. You buy not only a set but

ALDA SOLOIST IN KSD CONCERT THIS EVENING

Famous Soprano Will Sing Two Arias and Three Groups of Songs.

Frances Alda, famous soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and wife of its manager, Guilio Gatti-Casazza, will sing tonight from KSD in the Atwater Kent hour. Mme. Alda, whose radio concert last winter marked the completion of arrangements made by Kent with the Metropolitan Opera for broadcasting by its stars, says she believes radio is speeding the day when America, as in Europe, will have Government subsidized opera.

Alda's Views on Opera.

"The American people are very appreciative of music, and, what is more to the point, they have been educated by radio to be satisfied only with the best," she said. "I have traveled many hundreds of miles over this big country, and I speak from experience when I say I have found real appreciation everywhere, even in the small communities reached by radio, and the people know what they want.

"What this country needs more than anything else to further its musical advancement is for the Government to do something for the furtherance and control of opera. As the case now stands, different companies of individuals get together and map out operatic plans. They organize, engage singers, get started and run for a little while—they cannot go farther. There was nothing sure about the venture and we never hear about the opera company afterward.

"What the Government could do would be to subsidize opera in the larger cities, or we may look for some progressive state to subsidize an opera company at the state capital, having regular seasons of perhaps 10 weeks every year. Then native singers would be able to secure their opportunity to gain experience and to exercise their talents. It seems to me only in such way can the young American singer find the longed-for field and the people themselves learn to know, appreciate and love opera."

Native of New Zealand.

Frances Alda is a native of Christchurch, New Zealand, and following her education in private schools at Melbourne, Australia, studied singing with Mme. Marchesi in Paris. She made her operatic debut at the Opera Comique, Paris, in May, 1904. Her first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, was in 1908.

WHEN RADIO SET TOOK WORLD TO MINING CAMP

When the gold rush occurred at Red Lake, in Northern Ontario, the first radio set that reached the mining camp was an Atwater Kent.

It was set up in the cookhouse of the Howey Mines. One who was there thus describes the scene:

"Nor will one forget when he tried out the new radio for the first time. The light in the big tent threw shadows. In them Charley Bartley, the cook, moved about mysteriously and softly. Wood crackled in the big stove. Maj. Archie McDougall strode about restlessly. Bob McConnell sprawled big and limber on a bench. Jim McCrea was rolling a cigaret.

"'Let's see if we can get a supper dance from KDKA, said Douglas Wright, as he seated himself beside a big, round, yellow cheese, and began to fiddle with the dials. We waited. He was getting something.

"'KFKX—Hastings, Nebraska.

"That was the first station heard in Red Lake, the first radio contact with the outside. Afterwards we all listened in turn and we got St. Louis, Mo., Shenandoah, Ia., and two or three other places. Getting those stations was a very wonderful thing in Red Lake, and Douglas Wright was as tickled as a 10-year-old with a toy."

The Grid Leak.

There is one place in the receiving set where "staticy" noise may appear, and that is in the grid leak unit. A noise of this kind may occur every time it is jarred. Sometimes a person walking across the room in which the set is installed will produce the same effect. Loose connections, of course, may be the trouble, but if everything looks reasonably secure, just try changing the grid leak. This unit, though very small in comparison with the rest of the set, is of great importance. The position is such that the slightest change in resistance due to a loose contact will create a noise which is amplified many times. It is a good plan to insert a new grid leak in the set each year.

RADIO BUSINESS IS SETTING NEW RECORD

Sales of Atwater Kent Sets and Speakers in This District to Total 25,000 in Year.

The enormous expansion of the radio business within the last two years is illustrated by the prediction that before the end of the year fully 25,000 Atwater Kent receiving sets and speakers will have been sold in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. This prediction was made yesterday by Norman S. Hall, president of the Brown-Hall Supply Co., Atwater Kent distributer in the St. Louis district. Norman S. Pigeon, territorial representative for Atwater Kent, says that the fiscal year, which runs from April to April, will pile up a still larger record of sales.

The Brown & Hall Supply Co., which has been in business since 1913, took up radio about five years ago. It has distributed Atwater Kent radio products for four years in St. Louis, Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

It has seen sales of Atwater Kent sets and speakers increase so rapidly that 1927 will break all records by thousands.

In addition to Brown, officers of the company include Fred A. Wiebe, vice president; Gilbert E. Semple, treasurer, and Forrest Brewington, secretary.

Cleanser for Dirty Panels.

Dirty or greasy panels can be cleaned by rubbing lightly over the surface with a soft cloth dampened with alcohol. This will remove the dirt, then dry the panels with another cloth. The alcohol will evaporate quickly without damaging the set in any way, and will leave a high polish. Never use water when cleaning panels or any part of the receiver.

ALDA SOLOIST IN KSD CONCERT THIS EVENING

Famous Soprano Will Sing Two Arias and Three Groups of Songs.

Frances Alda, famous soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and wife of its manager, Guillo Gatti-Casazza, will sing tonight from 8 to 9 in the Atwater Kent hour.

Mme. Alda, whose radio concert last winter marked the completion of arrangements made by Kent with the Metropolitan Opera for broadcasting by its stars, says she believes radio is speeding the day when America, as in Europe, will have Government subsidized opera.

Alda's Views on Opera.

"The American people are very appreciative of music, and, what is more to the point, they have been educated by radio to be satisfied only with the best," she said. "I have traveled many hundreds of miles over this big country, and I can speak from experience when I say that I have found real appreciation everywhere, even in the small communities reached by radio, and the people know what they want.

"What this country needs more than anything else to further its musical advancement is for the Government to do something for the furtherance and control of opera. As the case now stands, different companies of individuals get together and map out operatic plans. They organize, engage singers, get started and run for a little while—they cannot go farther, there was nothing sure about the future and we never hear about the opera company afterward.

"What the Government could do would be to subsidize opera in the larger cities, or we may look for some progressive state to subsidize a grand opera company at the state capitol, having regular seasons of perhaps 10 weeks every year. Then native singers would be able to secure their opportunity to gain experience and to exercise their talent. It seems to me only in such a way can the young American singer find the longed-for field and the people themselves learn to know, appreciate and love opera."

Native of New Zealand.

Frances Alda is a native of Christchurch, New Zealand, and following her education in private schools at Melbourne, Australia, studied singing with Mme. Marchesi in Paris. She made her operatic debut at the Opera Comique, Paris, in May, 1904. Her first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, was in 1908.

Radio Detector Warns of Coming Storm 50 Miles Off

Device on Roof of Station at New York Rings Sometimes Hours Before One Breaks Over That City.

A wireless storm detector on the roof of the Waterside station in New York City now gives warning of an approaching storm when it is still 50 miles away, sometimes hours before the storm breaks over New York. Incidentally this little radio device, unlike other receiving sets, is helped, not hurt, by static, for the atmospheric conditions which cause static are the conditions which operate the storm detector. This detector consists of an ordinary radio aerial, a short-circuiting switch, a spark gap, a coherer, a relay and battery, a bell, and a condenser with a ground connection.

The nerve center of the entire New York Edison system is the system operator's room at Waterside. Upon the system operator rests the responsibility for the maintenance of electric service throughout the city. He must anticipate every demand for service and give the orders which will enable the system to meet it.

On the big board before his desk hundreds of little colored lights indicate the condition of every generator and every transmission line; meters show the capacity of the entire system and the current transmitted on the various feeders; a gauge shows the boiler pressure. Behind him is the radio storm detector which apprises him of approaching storms and their accompanying darkness long before a cloud is in sight from any point in New York City. At his desk the system operator has direct telephone connection with 80 men. At his left a telegraphic signal system, similar to that used by our fire department, enables him to give any message simultaneously to any or to all of the 40 sub and generating stations in the system.

When a heavy storm headed for New York gets within 50 miles of the city, the wireless detector at Waterside begins to ring intermittently and rather quietly; the system operator immediately passes word along to the boiler and generating rooms, so that they may get ready to put more generating equipment into use; as the storm gets closer and closer to the city, the radio detector rings louder and more frequently; the system operator orders more boilers and generators put into use.

It is a race between man and nature. The faster the storm travels and the more intense the darkness accompanying it, the harder the men in the generating stations must work to beat it. No baseball game or horse race was ever more interesting. Usually when the storm is within half an hour of the city, the generating stations are all ready to cope with the situation. Finally the black clouds appear over Manhattan; hundreds of thousands of persons, perhaps a million—in the big office buildings, in the homes, the factories, the hospitals, the schools—all step to the wall and push a button; all want light at once and they get it.

10TH COMMANDMENT BASIS OF WEAF RADIO PRESENTATION

Another presentation based on a Biblical incident will be offered from WEAF this evening at 9:15 o'clock. It will be developed from the familiar incident of the seizing of Naboth's vineyard by Ahab, which will give a dramatic example of the violation of the Tenth Commandment, which begins with the familiar words, "Thou shalt not covet."

The principal parts will be assumed as follows: Elijah, A. Winfield Hoeny; Naboth, Pedro de Cordoba; Ahab, Charles Webster; Obidiah, Henry Kuckner.

70 SCHOOLS IN ATLANTA HAVE RADIO RECEIVERS

Courses Broadcast Daily to All Public Educational Institutions in City.

Atlanta is the first city to have every public school equipped with radio and to have daily educational courses supplied to the pupils by this means.

Each of the 70 schools in the city has an Atwater Kent receiving set and speaker. They were installed by the Atlanta distributor, without cost to the city.

Saves Teachers' Time, Too.

"We can now," said Superintendent of Schools Sutton, "assemble all our teachers on short notice and discuss important policies directly and comprehensively. Similarly we can save days of time and hundreds of dollars by assembling the children of various classes at all the schools and presenting topics applying to all, thus giving our supervisors and department heads far more time to devote to their duties. One 10-minute message over WSB (the broadcasting station of the Atlanta Journal) may easily accomplish what would require several weeks of a supervisor's time in calling upon individual classes.

"Distinguished educators are constantly coming to Atlanta to study our methods and we shall be enabled to give the schools and the general public the benefit of their presence. Men of national prominence frequently are in the city but the children until now have lacked the opportunity to hear them."

The receiving set chosen for the schools is the one-dial Model 35. With the sets went Atwater Kent radio speakers, Cunningham tubes, Philco A batteries and trickle-chargers and Ray-O-Vac dry batteries.

Parents Listen in.

A microphone was installed in the office of the Superintendent of Schools through which he and other school officials could conduct daily programs from 10:30 to 11 a. m. A wire runs from the microphone to station WSB, where the educational messages are put on the air. In hundreds of homes of Atlanta they were received as eagerly as by the boys and girls in the school.

The details of sending a daily lesson through the air were assigned to an assistant superintendent. In addition, plans for conducting a "public school of the air," for adults as well as children, were set in motion. A morning period for, housewives was also projected. Already it is reported that conferences of principals, teachers, department heads, parent-teacher units and other groups requiring immediate information have been using the radio with noticeable saving of time and efficiency.

The 30-minute period between 10:30 and 11 a. m. is devoted to a systematized program representing every branch of public school education. The Atlanta Parent-Teacher organization conducts a daily period for housewives every morning from 11 to 11:30. At 6 p. m. Supt. Sutton conducts the "public school of the air," devoting 20 minutes or more to such topics as correct spelling, grammatical errors, letter writing, good books, simple arithmetic and many other subjects of interest to many adults as well as children.

Four Types of "B" Batteries.

There are four types of "B" batteries, small, medium, large and extra duty. The extra duty batteries are designed for sets having five or more tubes. The large size of "B" batteries will do for three or four tube sets and are generally used on the five-tube sets. The medium sized battery should be used on one, two and three-tube sets, and the small ones on portable sets and on compact one-tube sets.

How to Clean Hydrometer Barrel.

After the hydrometer has been used several times to test a storage battery the glass barrel usually becomes clouded, due to particles in the acid, and further readings with the device become difficult because of the low visibility of the float. A simple way to clean the barrel is to purchase a six-ounce bottle of denatured alcohol, and after taking a reading with the hydrometer to insert nozzle in the bottle and allow it to fill up. After the alcohol has been squirted back into the bottle, the barrel of the meter will be found to be perfectly clear. The same alcohol can be used indefinitely.

14-TUBE SET ON 'ROUND WORLD TRIP' TO TEST STATIONS IN U. S.

Starting on a trip around the world to ascertain if American broadcasting stations can be heard in foreign countries, James Lawrence Breese and H. C. Snead of Southampton, L. I., have sailed with a special 14-tube receiving set.

The receiver is 9 feet long, comprising four stages of tuned radio frequency, detector, oscillator, four intermediate stages, three iron core and one air core, one stage of audio frequency and two of impedance coupled amplification.

All apparatus is assembled in metal containers of the unit type, permitting various stages to be cut out and others put in, depending on the volume of the signals being received.

Testing the set at Southampton a 24-inch piece of bus wire used as an antenna brought in several Chicago stations with loud volume.

Several nights before sailing, 36 broadcasting stations were logged in various parts of the country, using only two stages of tuned radio frequency ahead of the detector. The four stages are not generally use, because no loud speaker has been found that will handle the volume, according to Breese.

ATWATER KENT 7-TUBE SET IS DISTANCE GETTER

Excellent long-distance reception records have been made in tests in St. Louis with the new 7-tube Atwater Kent receiving set which is known as the Model 32. This set is unusually selective, as well as sensitive, and operates well on a short outside or on an inside aerial. Naturally, its seven tubes give it certain distinct advantages. Tone quality from this receiver is very good. It is operated with only one dial, so is simple and easy to tune.

The No. 32 comes in luxurious console models as well as in the table model. In fact, it can be obtained in virtually any design of radio furniture.

LARGE CARGO OF RADIO GOODS

The largest cargo of radio equipment ever received at the port of Los Angeles recently arrived there on the steamship Lewis Luckenbach from Philadelphia.

The cargo consisted of Atwater Kent sets and speakers, Pooley cabinets and accessories, consigned to Ray Thomas, Inc., Atwater Kent distributor for Southern California.

This Is Said to Be Largest Radio Plant

Twelve-acre factory of the Atwater Kent Mfg. Co., at Philadelphia, Pa., which is said to be the largest radio plant in the world. It is expected to turn out 600,000 sets this fiscal year.

RADIO CABINETS RIVAL RECEIVERS IN INTEREST

Design and Finish of Console or Table Models Assume Growing Importance.

One of the outstanding features of every radio show this year was the critical interest of the public in radio cabinets. The increasing use of heavy batteries as well as equipment for operating sets from lighting current have made sturdy construction an essential of every radio cabinet. There is scarcely a piece of furniture in the house subjected to so great a strain as the radio cabinet when it contains accessories used for operating set.

Design, finish and loud speaker all come in for their share of interest. The buyers of radio today seem to be looking farther ahead than ever before. They not only want cabinets which will harmonize with the furnishings in their home, but cabinets which will last for several years.

The Pooley Company displayed at the radio shows seven distinctive styles of radio cabinets containing Atwater Kent radio sets, as well as three cabinet type loud speakers. These various designs and sizes make it possible to select a cabinet for almost any home setting.

The Pooley-Atwater Kent Armchair model is symbolic of the progress made in radio since its introduction five years ago. At that time the general conception of a radio set was a complicated assembly of funny named parts controlled by a multiplicity of tuning dials.

At many times and places family ties were strained because mother insisted on asking questions or the children romped just as father hunched over his radio with headphones clamped on his ears, was trying to detect the call letter of some station.

Today it is different. Seated comfortably in an armchair or davenport, any member of the family can select, by turning a single dial, programs entertaining to all.

For 43 years the Pooley Company has specialized in making the highest-grade hotel furniture.

A device has been invented which amplifies radio sound waves through a piano. Taking advantage of the synchronization of vibration between the radio waves and the piano sounding-board and strings, the inventor produces volume several times greater than that possible through the ordinary radio amplifier.

LIGHT DINNER MUSIC TO BE PLAYED FROM WJZ 3 NIGHTS EACH WEEK

In the future Middle West listeners to WJZ will have light music with their dinners on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, starting at 6 o'clock. On Tuesday nights the dance music will be furnished by Paul Specht's Twin Oaks Orchestra. On Thursday nights George Olsen's Hotel Pennsylvania music will entertain. The dance orchestra which will fill the Saturday night dinner music has not been decided on.

On the other nights of the week music of a more classical type will comprise the dinner music from WJZ. On the weekday evenings, Monday Wednesday and Friday, Bernhard Levitow's Hotel Commodore concert ensemble will be heard, while on Sunday nights, at 7:30, Henry Van Der Zanden's Hotel Ambassador Trio will play.

This will be a decided innovation for the listeners to WJZ, for in the past the dinner music from that station has been largely of classical variety.

PLANS FOR 5000-WATT STATION IN VENEZUELA

It Will Be at Caracas, Which Is 2000 Miles in Airline From New York.

Luis R. Scholtz, manager of the Venezuela Broadcasting Co., according to the Fada Radio News Bureau, says that plans are considered for erecting a 5000-watt broadcasting station at Caracas, home of Station AYRE.

The word "aire" in Spanish means air and Caracas stands 3000 feet above sea level. This station, established last May, has been heard in Atlanta, in San Francisco and in various other parts of this country. Most of the letters received by the station come from the West Indies. AYRE broadcasts on a wave-length of 375 meters. The nearest station to Caracas is WKAQ at San Juan, Porto Rico, 500 miles away.

United States stations come in clearly at Caracas and surrounding country, reports Scholtz, but the best reception is from Atlantic City with KDKA, Pittsburg, a close second. WOC, Davenport, and WJZ, New York, are frequently received. Caracas is 2000 miles or more in air line from New York. Reception on the coast is better than in the mountain regions.

As many as 36 United States stations have been logged by one DX fan in July—the poorest season for reception—on a Fada, Scholtz reports.

The present station in Venezuela, owned and operated by Empresa Venezuelana de Radiotelefonia, broadcasts programs said to be the equal of those from any station anywhere. It uses four bands—the Marshal band of 45 musicians; the Presidential, of 27; the Bolivar, of 27, and the Brigade No. 1, of 30 pieces. In addition, jazz bands of eight pieces are on the air. Native songs, of course, are rendered.

Guitars are popular and mandolins, too. Songs to the accompaniment of these are frequently broadcast. The harp is another instrument well liked in Venezuela and nearby countries listening in. Humor is a feature of the programs, with recitations and sometimes poetry, although the last is not used as much as in some other South American countries. There are also educational talks, and bedtime stories for the children. English lessons are given regularly over the air. News items are broadcast.

SONIC DEPTH-FINDER IS AID TO NAVIGATION

Navy Surveys Large Area of Ocean Bed Off California With These Devices.

Considerable advance has been made, since the World War, in the art of underwater communication and depth sounding. Up until this was accomplished by the use of audible sound receivers and transmitters. However, discoveries in the application of the principle of electric effect to underwater sound transmission and reception have opened up a new field called "supersonics."

The term "supersonics" refers to frequencies above the limits of audibility of the human ear. For instance, the human ear may be considered a sound receiver insofar as it can receive sounds lying between 30 frequencies of 30 to 30,000 cycles per second. Sounds lying above and below the spectrum are inaudible and the reception of these sounds is accomplished by the use of the Langevin principle.

20 Words a Minute.

By the use of these short waves it has been possible to telephone under water and to telegraph at speeds of 20 to 30 words per minute. This is considered by scientists as quite an advance over the older methods of audible transmission and reception under water.

The development of underwater sound apparatus has been of value not only because of progress in underwater sound signaling but also because of increased speed and accurately in deep sea sounding and charting.

During the World War the menace of submarine menace brought out numerable schemes for detection and destruction of submarines. Of all the methods suggested and tried, that of detecting and determining the hearing by means of listening to the various sounds given off by the submarine was found to be the most practical.

Finds Depth of Ocean.

The navy has found that the use of underwater sound receivers for sounding in depths from 3 to 30 fathoms is a useful aid to navigation and permits vessels so equipped to obtain the approximate depth of the water in which they are cruising at all times without stopping or reducing speed. It necessarily must be done when using the hand lead or other device of weight and line types of sounding machinery.

The largest consecutive survey of any part of the ocean bed ever undertaken was accomplished by the naval destroyers fitted with sonic depth-finders, when an area ranging from San Francisco to San Diego and from the coast approximately 40 miles seaward was sounded with sonic depth-finders.

The result of the work done by these two destroyers amounts practically to a photograph of the ocean's bottom over this immense area; every little furrow or mound on the bottom showed in a much more distinct form than ever before can be shown by employing the old methods.

The navy was recently called upon to survey the route of the war department's submarine telegraph cable which serves Alaska. This cable has given considerable trouble for many years due to the fact that breaks frequently occurred where it was laid over submerged mountains and across submarine valleys.

ELKON TRICKLE CHARGER DIFFERS IN CONSTRUCTION

The successful application by Samuel Ruben of the principle of unilateral conductivity to radio battery chargers has ptu at the service of set owners a charger fundamentally different from anything else. This principle eliminates tubes, acids, alkalis and moving parts in a manner which is still somewhat of a mystery to scientists theoretically, but has proved itself by more than two years of use.

The alternating current from the electric light socket is carried through a series of plates, parallel to each other, the plates being arranged in pairs. Each pair consists of two dissimilar solids, of such a nature in respect to each other electrically, that the alternating current of the house current line in flowing through this is changed to the current needed for "A" batteries.

The Elkon Trickle Charger, in which this principle is employed, is noteworthy in that it is "bone dry"—no acids, alkalis or water—contains no tubes or moving parts, is silent, positive in its trickle action and automatic. It is full wave, cannot overcharge, short circuiting cannot harm it, and it causes no interference.

Tests show that the rectification principle employed is long lived, and on account of its silent operation there is no necessity of turning the device off when the set is in operation.

'LINCOLN PROGRAM' WILL BE REPEATED ON FEB. 8

The Eveready Hour's "Lincoln Program," with Edgar White Burrill again as narrator, is to be repeated from KSD the evening of Feb. 8.

For two years this program, based on Ida M. Tarbell's book, "He Knew Lincoln," has been a Lincoln's Birthday feature of the "Everready Hour." Each time numerous requests have been made for its repetition.

SEES PRACTICAL USE OF RADIO INCREASING

Manufacturer Believes Chief Development Will Be in This Respect.

By A. ATWATER KENT.

The development of radio to date has been chiefly a development of its physical side—a development of the instrumentality by which the broadcasts are made available to listeners-in. This has now progressed to a point where the physical facilities for radio reception may be regarded as efficient, dependable, precise mechanical utilities.

While there will, of course, be a constant advance in radio engineering and the design and construction of receiving sets, progress in that line will not render antiquated or obsolete the carefully designed, well built, standardized receiving sets of today. There will be refinements and improvements, of course, but for all practical purposes present-day sets will retain their value indefinitely.

It is in the application of radio that the greatest changes for the immediate future seem likely. From an instrumentality used chiefly for amusement and recreation, I believe radio is certain to become a practical utility of the utmost value, both economically and culturally.

The use of radio in an increasing degree by the United States Government, as an agency to save dollars and cents to the farmers in the more intelligent care and marketing of their crops is only an index to what may be done with radio as a utility returning dividends in actual cash.

The value of radio as an agency in education is now being sensed by educators, and tests that are now being made in this field, I believe, will inevitably result in the adoption, generally, of radio in the schools.

The city of Atlanta, this fall equipped all its schools with receiving sets and puts on daily programs fitted to the needs of the different grades. Additional programs of an educational and inspirational nature are broadcast for the mothers and fathers.

In Connecticut rural schools are being equipped with radio and programs in music appreciation, as a first subject, are to be broadcast this winter from Station WTIC.

These are but straws indicating the way the wind is shifting. These tests, and others that are to follow, will in my judgment open the door to the general adoption of radio as an educational and commercial utility.

GETS STATION 2996 MILES OFF

Before starting on a voyage around the world, Capt. Kelly of the British Steamship Raby Castle, bought an Atwater Kent Model 20 compact receiving set. His radio log, mailed from Manila, covering a journey of 48 days over the Pacific Ocean, shows that one of the stations he got was Brisbane, Australia.

Capt. Kelly wrote to a friend, James Dunlop, of 20 Broad street, New York:

"The radio set gave us a surprise about a week ago when Brisbane came in on the loud speaker as large as life, and we heard some singing, etc., in our own tongue. The distance to Brisbane was 2996 miles and is about the same now. We have got him every night since. You will agree with me it is some set. I'll tell the world."

SONIC DEPTH-FINDER IS AID TO NAVIGATIO

Navy Surveys Large Area Ocean Bed Off Californ With These Devices.

Considerable advance has be made, since the Wo'd War, in t art of underwater communicatio and depth sounding. Up until 19 this was accomplished by the of audible sound receivers a transmitters. However, discover in the application of the P electric effect to underwater sou transmission and reception ha opened up a new field called "s personics."

The term "supersonics" refers frequencies above the limits of a dibility of the human ear. For stance, the human ear may be co sidered a sound receiver tuned receive sounds lying between fr quencies of 30 to 30,000 cycles p second. Sounds lying above t spectrum are inaudible and the p ception of these sounds is accom plished by the use of the hete dyne principle.

20 Words a Minute.

By the use of these short wave it has been possible to telepho under water and to telegraph speeds of 20 to 30 words per mi ute. This is considered by scie tists as quite an advance over th older methods of audible transmis sion and reception under water.

The development of underwat sound apparatus has been of valu not only because of progress underwater sound signaling b also because of increased spee and accurately in deep sea soundin and charting.

During the World War the enem submarine menace brought out t numerable schemes for detect and destruction of submarines of all the methods suggested an tried, that of detecting and dete mining the hearing by means listening to the various sounds gi en off by the submarine was foun to be the most practical.

Finds Depth of Ocean.

The navy has found that the u of underwater sound receivers f sounding in depths from 8 to fathoms is a useful aid to navi tion and permits vessels so equi ped to obtain the approxima depth of the water in which th are cruising at all times withe stopping or reducing speed necessarily must be done when u ing the hand lead or other of th weight and line types of soundi machinery.

The largest consecutive survey any part of the ocean bed ever u dertaken was accomplished by t naval destroyers fitted with son depth-finders, when an area reach ing from San Francisco to Sa Diego and from the coast approx mately 40 miles seaward w sounded with sonic depth-finder The result of the work done b these two destroyers amounte practically to a photograph of th ocean's bottom over this immen area; every little furrow or mou on the bottom showed in a ma more distinct form than ever cou be shown by employing the o methods.

The navy was recently calle upon to survey the route of th war department's submarine tele graph cable which serves Alaska This cable has given considerab trouble for many years due to th fact that breaks frequently o curred where it was laid over su merged mountains and across sub marine valleys.

ELKON TRICKLE CHARGER DIFFERS IN CONSTRUCTIO

The successful application b Samuel Ruben of the principle o unilateral conductivity to radi battery chargers has put at the service of set owners a charger fundamentally different from any thing else. This principle elim inates tubes, acids, alkalis and moving parts in a manner which is still somewhat of a mystery to scientists theoretically, but has proved itself by more than two years of use.

The alternating current from electric light socket is carried through a series of plates, parallel to each other, the plates being ar ranged in pairs. Each pair con sists of two dissimilar solids, of such a nature in respect to each other electrically, that the alte nating current of the house cur rent line in flowing through them is changed to the current needed for "A" batteries.

The Elkon Trickle Charger, in which this principle is employed, is noteworthy in that it is "bone dry"—no acids, alkilis or water—contains no tubes or moving parts is silent, positive in its trickle ac tion and automatic. It is full wave, cannot overcharge, short circuiting cannot harm it, and it causes no interference.

Tests show that the rectification principle employed is long lived, and on account of its silent operation there is no necessity of turning the device off when the set is in operation.

'LINCOLN PROGRAM' WILL BE REPEATED ON FEB. 8

The Eveready Hour's "Lincoln Program," with Edgar White Burrill again as narrator, is to be repeated from KSD the evening of Feb. 8.

For two years this program, based on Ida M. Tarbell's book, "He Knew Lincoln," has been a Lincoln's Birthday feature of the "Eveready Hour." Each time numerous requests have been sent in for its repetition.

SEES PRACTICAL USE OF RADIO INCREASING

Manufacturer Believes Chief Development Will Be in This Respect.

By A. ATWATER KENT.

The development of radio to date has been chiefly a development of its physical side—a development of the instrumentality by which the broadcasts are made available to listeners-in. This has now progressed to a point where the physical facilities for radio reception may be regarded as efficient, dependable, precise mechanical utilities.

While there will, of course, be a constant advance in radio engineering and the design and construction of receiving sets, progress in that line will not render antiquated or obsolete the carefully designed, well built, standardized receiving sets of today. There will be refinements and improvements, of course, but for all practical purposes present-day sets will retain their value indefinitely.

It is in the application of radio that the greatest changes for the immediate future seem likely. From an instrumentality used chiefly for amusement and recreation, I believe radio is certain to become a practical utility of the utmost value, both economically and culturally.

The use of radio in an increasing degree by the United States Government, as an agency to save dollars and cents to the farmers in the more intelligent care and marketing of their crops is only an index to what may be done with radio as a utility returning dividends in actual cash.

The value of radio as an agency in education is now being sensed by educators, and tests that are now being made in this field, I believe, will inevitably result in the adoption, generally, of radio in the schools.

The city of Atlanta, this fall equipped all its schools with receiving sets and puts on daily programs fitted to the needs of the different grades. Additional programs of an educational and inspirational nature are broadcast for the mothers and fathers.

In Connecticut rural schools are being equipped with radio and programs in music appreciation, as a first subject, are to be broadcast this winter from Station WTIC.

These are but straws indicating the way the wind is shifting. These tests, and others that are to follow, will in my judgment open the door to the general adoption of radio as an educational and commercial utility.

GETS STATION 2996 MILES OFF

Before starting on a voyage around the world, Capt. Kelly of the British Steamship Raby Castle, bought an Atwater Kent Model 20 compact receiving set. His radio log, mailed from Manila, covering a journey of 48 days over the Pacific Ocean, shows that one of the stations he got was Brisbane, Australia.

Capt. Kelly wrote to a friend, James Dunlop of 20 Broad street, New York:

"The radio set gave us a surprise about a week ago when Brisbane came in on the loud speaker as large as life, and we heard some singing, etc., in our own tongue. The distance to Brisbane was 2996 miles and is about the same now. We have got him every night since. You will agree with me it is some set. I'll tell the world."

BATTERIES FREQUENTLY CAUSE OF STATIC WOES

When Run Down, Noises Like Atmospheric Disturbances Are Generated.

Every radio owner naturally begins to look for static disturbances with the coming of warm weather, for he has read many meteorological articles on the subject, but when the static crashes and rattles are ushered in with the first cold weather in the fall, he stops, wonders and studies the apparent paradox. Intermittent noises ranging from the rattle of machine-gun fire down to a rubbing, grating noise may be even more prominent and disagreeable than in the heated season, and the only deduction that he can draw is that atmospheric disturbances are not purely a function of heat and moisture after all.

On the following morning he asks a neighbor whether he was bothered with static on the night preceding, but the latter who has just purchased a new "B" battery vigorously denies that he had trouble, and mark you, another neighbor who has owned a "B" battery eliminator from the beginning, and who is a beginner in radio, not only denies any knowledge of static but states that he brought in several new stations that he never heard before, "clear as a bell." Strange thing this static business, particularly when all three men live within a 50-yard radius and use exactly the same type of radio receivers.

Follows a few nights more of the same grief, and then the party-of-the-first-part buckles down to a serious investigation of the problem. On testing his "B" battery simply as a matter of routine, he discovers that it is way down and buys a new one. Further, he charges his "A" battery up to the standard full charge mark of 1275, and when all of these operations have been complete, he tunes in again.

Gone is the static, the scratching, the crashes, the rattles and the grating that was formerly assumed to be static. Local comes in with tremendous volume and all of the DX stations are clear and sweet. He has at last discovered the nature of 90 per cent of the trouble commonly known as static, the static exists only in run-down batteries.

Keeping up the "B" battery in the prime of health, however, is a considerable expense and a lot of trouble, but "B" eliminators, which draw their supply from electric light sockets require no attention.

HIGH POWER STATIONS CAUSE INTERFERENCE

Pacific Coast Transmitters and Those on Atlantic Heterodyne Each Other.

By CARL H. BUTMAN.

One of the most interesting developments in the radio broadcasting industry during the past five years is gradual increase in power. A 500-watter was a big station a few years ago, whereas today even 5000-watt stations are not considered as powerful; only the 50-kilowatt stations are termed superstations these days. Not all our stations are of high power of course; many of them are tiny local affairs, but the average power today is 840 watts a station, a gain of 619 watts over the average power of 1922 and 135 watts over last year.

The average power has increased as follows: June, 1922, 149.4 watts; 1923, 159.1 watts; 1924, 190.5 watts; 1925, 312.4 watts; 1926, 715.8 watts, and today it is 840 watts, or a total of 510,000 watts for 615 stations. This is a great increase in the past two years, or since the event of a few very high-powered transmitters and an increase to 1000 watts and over by many stations.

It is truly said that the increase in power has been more of a nuisance by causing interference than the increased number of stations and the wave shifters. The reason for this is because, with high power, stations separated by considerable distances now begin to interfere; that is, if they are not separated by a number of radio channels, technically by about 20 kilocycles.

Pacific coast stations and Atlantic coast stations, originally operating on the same channel without interference, now heterodyne each other, and those separated by only a few kilocycles also interfere. Gulf stations interfere with the reception of some Canadian stations since higher power is used.

The limitation of power, it may be recalled, was also held to be beyond the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce at the same time assignment of wave lengths was denied by the acting Attorney-General.

High lights of Commission of Navigation Carson's annual report reveal that of the 528 active broadcasters on June 30, two were rated at 50 kilowatts, one at 20 kilowatts and 16 at 5000 watts. The others were listed with varying power, from four stations with only five watts each to 78 of 1000 watts or more.

Making a Home or Making a Mistake

ONE of the pastimes of old age is to count one's mistakes and to add up one's regrets.

Rarely in America does a man reach three score years and ten without having earned $52,000.00. Usually, the amount is much larger. If one fourth of that income is expended for rent, $13,000 goes to pay for something which brings neither the satisfaction nor the security of home ownership.

Don't let it be your regret, when you reach the age of "the lean and slippered pantaloon" that you did not make a home instead of making a mistake. Youth is the time to build against such a regret, and the opportunities for buying profit-making real estate were never more inviting.

St. Louis and Billionarea properties for both homes and investments offer to present-day buyers opportunities equal to those which wise men of a past generation recognized and took advantage of by buying.

The prosperity of property owners will grow with St. Louis, whose population is constantly increasing.

Let "prosperous property owner" mean you.

Read the Post-Dispatch's "Real Estate" Columns today—and every day. They contain the market's best values. The dealers advertising there will be pleased to discuss the situation without any obligation to you.

No happier, more lasting gift can be found for your family Christmas than a deed to a home. Make it a memorable day for yourself and all by investigating opportunities and making arrangements in time—NOW!

What I Know About Radio

More Atwater Kents are being sold than all other makes are being bought.

The wife judges a radio by the cabinet similarly to the man who selects his sweetheart by her looks.

Buy on the advice of friends, and you will own five hundred and fifty different make sets.

If you marry an Atwater Kent to good accessories there'll never be a need for divorce.

Technical experts make poor salesmen, they say so much you don't understand.

If you want your Atwater Kent to be a prize, don't follow "Early to bed and early to rise."

A poor salesman readily uses the word "guarantee," but forgets it is only as good as the firm back of it.

Folks cannot be dissuaded from buying an Atwater Kent, any more than you can dissuade a young man from getting married.

Procrastinate and you'll disappoint the loved ones who look forward to an Atwater Kent Christmas. Mark Silverstone

Realistic Polar Setting for Debut of Marjorie Niedringhaus

St. Louis Country Club Is Transformed Into Picture of Far North Country at Party Arranged by Her Parents.

TRANSPORTED in the short space of a week from the orange groves of sunny California which characterized the most recent elaborate debutante party, those same fated buds dined and made merry in the scintillating frozen snow fields of the Far North, housed within the familiar confines of the St. Louis Country Club Friday night when Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus made her bow to society.

So realistic was the icy splendor of the scene that the guests easily might have imagined themselves on the far borders of Alaska on a mid-winter night, and hesitated before doffing comfortable fur wraps to greet their hosts.

The living room, where Miss Niedringhaus received with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee I. Niedringhaus, and her guest, Miss Elizabeth Drake of Chicago, represented a pine forest, where dozens of frosted firs and balsams stretched their giant branches heavy with tinsel icicles to the ceiling. Through the trees at one side could be seen snow drifts painted on a blue background, with countless stars flickering overhead.

Traces of an Eskimo population were in evidence. Tall totem poles, symbolic of their form of worship, each with its grotesque figures made more colorful by interior lighting, stood about, and in one corner a canvas tepee simulated the ice houses of the Far North people.

Entering the dining rooms the guests found themselves in a snow storm, the effect produced by millions of tiny cotton balls fastened at intervals to almost as many frosted wires in a blue sateen sky, and the distance enhanced by ciel-blue draped walls covered with flakes. Thousands of silvery white icicles, cut from many yards of prepared linen, hung from the edges of the rooms at the top, and the same icy formations depended from the chandeliers.

At the far end of the clubhouse back of the debutantes' table gleamed the Northern lights, reflections of the sun on vast areas of icebergs, and in the center was the North star, large because of its apparent nearness, set in a constellation of smaller planets. The reflows themselves were grouped on the floor as part of the scene, while flocks of penquins, peculiar to the North country, realistically cut from card board and painted, searched for scant food on mountainous snow peaks.

Over the mantel in another room a blood red Arctic moon glowed, with penquins near by seemingly warmed by its rays.

Not the least of the decorations were the long tables on which were drifts of snow from end to end of each, and where dozens of toy polar bears and cinnemon brown bears climbed from miniature trees and stood on icy slopes. There were 300 guests.

For her debut gown Miss Niedringhaus chose crisp white tulle embroidered in silver and fashioned over silver cloth, making her look like a fairy Princess, with her arms full of roses and valley lilies instead of a wand. Mrs. Niedringhaus wore pink chiffon embroidered in rhinestones over silver and carried orchids, and Miss Drake was in gold cloth.

More than a month had been consumed in preparation for the party, the club's decorators often working far into the night covering the fragrant pines with their frosty preparation, or cutting icicles and preparing wire and the effect was on of singular beauty.

The guests at the debutante table, in addition to Miss Niedringhaus and Miss Drake, include Miss Gertrude Catlin, Miss Roccena Baldwin, Miss Ruth McElroy, Miss Martha Love, Miss Mary Carter, Miss Elizabeth Scudder, Miss Anne Wallace and her guests, Miss Anne Marvel of Wilmington, Del., and Miss Helen Farnam of Chicago; Miss Julia Klipstein, Miss June Morgens, Miss Kathleen Ryan, Miss Jane and Miss Margaret Mahler, Miss Sally Green, Miss Helen Martha Woods, Miss Edith Peters, Miss Dorothy Maxwell, Miss Genevieve Barnickle and Chapin Newhard, Lee Johnson, Fielding Childress, Edwin Wagner, Charles Rubicam, Reginal Hunt, Charles Adams, John Farish, Floyd Stewart, James How, Boyd Ware, Dumont Dempsey, Robert Mudd, James Douglas, George Cale, Everett Brooks, James Raleigh, Carl Meyer, Edwin Link, Wills Engle, Richard McLane, Benoist Tompkins, William Goltra, Tariton Compton,

Each year a limited number of the season's debutantes are invited to become members of the Imperial and this year the much-prized invitations were sent to the following: Miss Martha Love, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Love; Miss Gertrude Catlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Catlin; Miss Elizabeth Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard B. Allen; Miss Genevieve Barnickle, who is making her home this winter with Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lehmann; Miss Elizabeth Scudder, daughter of Charles Scudder; Margaret Rumsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Rumsey Jr.; Miss Mary Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carten; Miss Clarissa Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chouteau Dyer; Miss Roccena Baldwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Warrington Baldwin, and Miss Anne Kennard Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brookings Wallace.

Among the hosts at the St. Louis Country Club New Year's day will be Mr. and Mrs. W. Pelham H. Turner of 4 North Kingshighway, who will entertain at luncheon.

On New Year's Eve Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wooster Lambert will give a party at their home in the St. Louis Country Club grounds.

In a full debutante calendar for this weekend, some of the parties are a dinner last night at the St. Louis Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon W. Wallace for their debutante niece, Miss Anne Kennard Wallace; similar affair tonight by Mr. and Mrs. Stewart McDonald at the Florissant Valley Country Club honoring Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus and Miss Elizabeth Scudder, and a luncheon this afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Langenberg of the St. Louis Country Club grounds for Miss Wallace and Miss Mary Carter.

Mrs. S. S. Engle will be hostess at a buffet supper this evening at her home, 6212 Waterman avenue, complimenting Misses Jane and Margaret Mahler. The invitation list includes Miss Kathleen Ryan, Miss Helen Martha Woods, Miss June Morgens, Miss Florence Brooks and Misses Marian and Sally Green, Herbert Condie, Cary Link, Reginald Hunt, William Weld, Wills Engle, Benjamin Clark, Curry Kirkpatrick and Joseph Folk.

Debutantes Romp at Childen's Party in Appropriate Costume

Bellerive Country Club Is Transformed Into Playground for Miss Helen Martha Woods' Guests.

FORGETTING for a time the enervating demands of the social calendar, 20 debutantes and more than twice their number of men, garbed in rompers and knee breeches, romped and played with the carefree spirit of children at a juvenile costume party given Wednesday night at the Bellerive Country Club by Parker H. Woods for his daughter, Miss Helen Martha.

At the doorway of the club each guest was given a brightly colored hobby horse in response to the proclamation "no admittance unless mounted," and on these they rode to thee dining room where a huge horse shoe table was laid.

Instead of formal damask and lace, paper table cloths printed in kindergarten figures were used, and floral centerpieces were replaced by great Jack Horner pies of pink crepe paper filled with toys and noise makers. Hundreds of gas-filled balloons appeared everywhere and the 'children' roared with laughter when whole bunches of them exploded from a cigarette burn by one of the more precocious.

Following the dinner the guests sat cross-legged on the floor watching the antics of a performing circus bear, and later the slight of hand tricks performed by a magician.

The living room of the club had been transformed into an out-of-door playground covered with green turf and dotted with seesaws, slides and swings. Rag dolls were provided and a loose jointed toy dachshund caused much merriment.

Vines and flowers grew on trellises to cover the walls, and chintz-covered garden furniture added an attractive color note.

Miss Woods was a very attractive school girl dressed for a party, in ruffled blue organdie with pink sash and pink flowers dotting the full skirt. Her hair hung in curls and was caught at one side by a rakish bow. Miss Elizabeth Scudder was a pink gingham-clad miss in Mary Jane pumps and socks, chewing a lollypop as she circled on a tooter-totter.

Miss Anne Wallace wore a short white dress and ribbon sash, with her lovely red gold hair loose about her shoulders, and Miss Julia Klipstein and Miss Edith Peters were boys, the one in blue and the other black and white. Miss Sally Green as a French maid in sleeveless black uniform with stiff fluted organdie ruff about her head, perky cap and ruffled apron, had one of the most attractive costumes, with her sister, Marian, in a short baby blue dress and bonnet, a close second. Miss Helen Frampton wore short pink dress and hair ribbon. Miss Florence Brooks was in peg-topped blue rompers. No other word than cute would describe Ruth McElroy's pink and white checked romper, fearfully and wonderfully made with its ruffled trouser legs and huge white bow at the back. Miss Margaret Ferguson was in a white crepe de chine smock and Miss Frances Reilly in white linen middy and short plaited skirt. Miss Margaret and Miss Jane Mahler were a Dutch girl and Little Red Riding Hood, respectively.

Of the boys' costumes, William Welds made a ferocious French soldier in red spike-tailed coat, white trousers and high French blue hat, and Lee Meriwether claimed he had spent hours corraling the last remaining sunbonnet in town to complete his white costume of dress, silk socks tied up with blue bows, and white shoes. Wills Engle made a very good looking Lord Fauntleroy in the time-honored velvet knickers and jacket. Vand Boyd Ware wore a stick candy striped skirt and much-patched pants. Reginald Hunt had on rompers of nursery figured print, and soldiers and sailors boys were much in evidence.

President Gives State Reception For Diplomats

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Stateliness and picturesqueness vied with one another at the state reception given by President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House Thursday night in honor of the Diplomatic Corps. It was the first of the formal functions of the season except for the Cabinet dinner last Thursday and it marked the beginning of a series of state receptions which promise to rival in brilliancy similar events in this and past administrations. More than 2000 guests were received by the chief executive and his wife.

Behind the line in the Blue Room were Cabinet members, high officials of the Government and distinguished guests. President and Mrs. Coolidge received alone.

A quaint touch was given to the proceedings by the marshalling by each Ambassador, Minister or Charge d'Affairs of his embassy or legation staff in the line behind him.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis were among the guests at dinner and in his box at the opera Monday of Gen. Pershing. Mrs. Davis was the center of attention, for she wore one of the new evening turbans which dispatches tell us are being worn by the women in Continental circles with evening gowns. She was an impressive figure in a handsome evening gown of black velvet brocaded in silver made with a deep V decollette back and front and sleeveless and with a wrapped turban fitting very close to her head of silver metal cloth. Her wrap was a very handsome sable one.

Mrs. Frank V. Hammar of St. Louis was among the delegates to the National Red Cross convention who were entertained at luncheon on Thursday by Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. William Howard Taft, former first ladies of the land, were among the guests at Miss Boardmaa's luncheon.

Mrs. Thomas J. Cole and Miss Ruth and Milton Cole, formerly of St. Louis, have taken possession of their new home at 2110 Sherman avenue, Evanston, Ill.

What Makes the Wind Whistle?

Where does the wind begin?
How do ships sail against the wind?
What is air made of?
Where does the wind go when it does not blow?

CAN you answer all their questions on just one subject? Or do you often find yourself saying, "It would take an expert to answer that"? In the Book of Knowledge the children's questions are answered by a group of experts, each an authority in his field of knowledge. So simple and clear are the explanations, with their striking pictures and diagrams, that children easily understand, and so interesting is the style that they will read this great book for hours at a time completely absorbed.

The BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

The Children's Encyclopedia

Here is the really essential knowledge of the world—Nature, with the animals, birds, insects, trees and flowers, the history, manners and customs of a hundred different countries; the worlds in the skies and the teeming life of the waters; science; invention; play-time activities; stories; poems. Every page in The Book of Knowledge teaches the children something they want to know.

Helps School Work

Children who have The Book of Knowledge stand high in their grades at school. They learn to think for themselves, and can give quick, intelligent answers in class. They have made a long start in the race for knowledge. There are 15,000 striking educational pictures, printed in color, in gravure and in half-tone. They make even the most puzzling facts clear; and lessons learned through the eye in this easy way are never forgotten.

ners of Ground on welfth Boulevard Corer in New York, Presumably Making Deal.

OVIE THEATER FOR BUILDING SOUGHT

ention Centered on Eighth Street Federal Building Ground as Possible Department Store Site.

By Berry Moore.

Speculation is keen in real estate circles as to the future of the southeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Locust street, generally recognized as one of the most desirable sites in the downtown section for a pretentious structure, especially for an office building or hotel with theater.

It was told in the Post-Dispatch, the Delsa Realty Co., represented by A. M. Frumberg, recently entered into contracts to purchase the site from the Essex Realty Co. for the reported consideration of $500,000. Execution of the deed is scheduled for this week.

Representatives of the Delsa company, it is understood, are in New York, presumably to interest moving picture men in plans for a theater in connection with an office or a hotel building on this site. Several months ago, when the contracts were drawn for the Twelfth boulevard corner, the Delsa Realty Co. disclosed plans for a skyscraper with several nationally known concerns available as tenants for the upper floors.

Announcement Expected.

The successful outcome of negotiations with moving picture interests is expected to be followed by early announcement with reference to the improvement of this corner. The site, which is now occupied by a one-story garage, has a frontage on Twelfth boulevard of 150 feet, with a depth on Locust of 150 feet.

The men composing the Delsa Realty Co. are said to be identical with the members of the Chestnut Realty Co., which a year or so ago purchased the Title Guaranty Building. W. K. Bixby is president of the Essex Realty Co.

Developments of the past week have been of a character to arouse speculative sentiment, notably in the downtown section, both east and west of Twelfth boulevard. The Federal Building block, at Eighth and Olive streets, is attracting attention, with the advisability of its sale under discussion and the erection of a new building on another site. It placed on the market this site may be graced with a huge department store, in view of the fact that it has been valued above all others by stores for its large resources. The block is regarded as essentially one for a high-class retail emporium.

Real estate men believe that the improvement of this site with a building of this character would enhance appreciably the importance of this part of the city as a retail center, with a resultant increase in the value of adjacent property.

The talk refers especially to the Administration building of the Board of Education at the northeast corner of Ninth and Locust streets. The Board recently purchased a site on the east side of the boulevard, between Franklin and Bell avenues, for a new administration building, with the intention of selling the Ninth and Locust property, which the members of the board regard as having become too valuable for its present use.

Foresight of Festus J. Wade.

The possibilities of this section were taken into consideration 28 years ago in the selection of the northeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets for the Mercantile Trust Building, according to Festus J. Wade, president of the company. Wade, a site for the proposed new Federal Building, the west side of Eighth boulevard, between Pine and Olive streets and extending 150 feet west on both streets to the Missouri Pacific Building site, has been presented with the statement that it can be acquired for approximately $2,500,000.

The block between Olive, Pine, Eighteenth and Fifteenth streets was submitted with the purchase price estimated at $1,500,000.

Unlimited interest is manifest in the sites taken under option by Scheufield Bros. for their proposed new store. Location of the two is withheld pending a decision.

F. W. Woolworth & Co., with plans for another big store, recently acquired a 99-year lease of the southeast corner of Eighth and Olive streets, now occupied by Greenfield Brothers. Negotiation on behalf of Greenfield are being handled by Isaac T. Cook & Co.

Several noteworthy offers have been reported for the southwest corner of Eleventh and Washington avenues, recently purchased by Charles Cella through the Mercantile Trust Co. This site, which extends through to St. Charles street, with additional ground on Washington avenue is regarded as available for hotel and theater project. It now has a frontage of 70 feet on Washington avenue and 150 feet on Eleventh street, with a third frontage on St. Charles.

Electra Park a Feature.

The story of two notable real estate developments in Northwest and Southwest St. Louis, in the past two years, is being recalled in connection with a third development, Electra Park, now being presented by the Bush-Burns Realty Co.

Electra Park is on Goodfellow avenue north of Natural Bridge avenue. It is within one block of the site of the General Electric Co. plant, which will be one of the largest of St. Louis industrial establishments. It has been divided into 188 lots, of which 52 have been sold in the past three weeks.

In 1924 the same company laid out and developed Hedgleigh Park, 300 lots, at Union and Natural Bridge. This section is now built up with homes and values have increased greatly. In 1925, under the same direction, Northampton was laid out on South Kingshighway at Chippewa street, divided into 430 lots. Here, also, rapid development and large increases in values have ensued:

KINGSHIGHWAY FROM LINDELL TO EASTON AV. RESURFACED

Work of Reconstructing Boulevard With Asphalt On Concrete Base Costing $190,980.

The reconstruction of Kingshighway boulevard, from Lindell boulevard to Easton avenue, which has been under way since last August, was completed yesterday, according to the announcement of W. W. Horner, chief engineer of street construction.

The street was resurfaced with asphalt, laid on a concrete base at a cost of $190,980—30 per cent of that amount being paid out of bond issue bonds and the balance assessed against the benefited property owners. Horner said the completion of the work was delayed because of the laying of a new water main in the street. In order to keep the street open to traffic the east and west halves were reconstructed as separate units.

HARRIS-POLK HAT CO. MOVES INTO NEW 7-STORY QUARTERS

The Harris-Polk Hat Co., moved last week into the seven-story building at 1221-23-25 Washington avenue, which it leased recently to provide for expanding business.

The new building is just east of the building the company has occupied for a number of years. In addition to using the basement and seven floors of the new building, the factory also will occupy the fourth, fifth and seventh floors of buildings to the west all the way to the corner of Thirteenth street and Washington avenue. The factory, therefore, will occupy a space of approximately one-half block on each of these three floors.

The Harris-Polk Hat Co., was organized in 1903 and is the largest manufacturer of felt hats west of the Alleghany Mountains. The officers are John W. Harris, president; F. A. Kroenung, secretary, and J. V. Smythe and W. B. Rust, directors.

Sales by Federer Realty Co.

The Federer Realty Co. reports the sale of a new double flat, 3967 Utah street, for William F. Kuerz to Charles Bender; two new brick bungalows in the Woodland Park subdivision at 6023 and 6021 Hampton avenue, for Joe Berger to Clyde R. Weidner and Martin A. Lohman; for John P. Fendler property at 3975 Walsh street to Edward F. Smith; brick bungalow, 3443 Alberta street, for Daisy Monds to Harry Wipfler; for Harry Wipfler to Wilhelmina Resch property at 3214 South Compton avenue; lot on Fillmore street in Holly Hills for Oswald Diefenbach to Lydia E. Schumadher; lot in Kingshighway Park in Grand-Dover Park, to August Naert for William Green; lot in Kingshighway Park in Grand-Dover Park for Theodore Wehrenberg to Theodore Zlock.

Several Leases Closed.

The Mullin-Walters Realty Co. closed a number of noteworthy leases during the week, reflecting business expansion in various lines. The agency also reports negotiations pending with several outside concerns with plans for establishing branches here.

SITES FOR APARTMENT HOUSES SOLD ON BLUE RIDGE TERRACE

Shaw & Francis, through the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Co., agents for Moorlands Park, Moorlands addition, and Blue Ridge Terrace, report an unusually brisk market in the sale of apartment house locations in Blue Ridge Terrace.

An improvement program is under way. Contracts were let to the Webb-Boone Paving Co. for the paving of the balance of the streets in Blue Ridge Terrace, which will consist of asphalt surface on concrete base, and concrete curbs and gutters. Other improvements will consist of sewers, sidewalks, gas, water and electric street lighting system. The street lighting system in the east half of Moorlands addition is completed. It is planned to install the street lighting system in Blue Ridge Terrace very shortly.

Blue Ridge Terrace lies between Wydown boulevard and Clayton road, extending from Glen Ridge avenue to Westwood drive, and is one of the few apartment house sections restricted and sold as to limited heights in various sections. The use of soft coal or other smoke producing fuel, is prohibited.

Various contractors are figuring on sites in this location for the construction of apartments. Blue Ridge Terrace is served by the Wydown-Clayton street car line. Wydown boulevard was recently resurfaced by the Moorland Land Co.

Bellis Realty Reports Six Sales.

Milton B. Bellis, president of the Bellis Realty Co., reports the following sales: 2 Gregan place, bungalow, purchased by Richard Wickham; 4830 Leduc street, bungalow, sold to Augusta Halwe for Charles J. Hawk; 5129 Minerva avenue, residence, sold to H. Nieson; 3396 Blackstone avenue, residence, sold for Otto Jaech; 3119 Hampton avenue, bungalow, sold to Thomas T. Ramey; 2206 Madison street, flat, purchased by Wilhelm Schriedel.

HUDSON E. BRIDGE'S HOUSE IS NEARLY COMPLETED

The country home of Hudson E. Bridge will soon be ready for occupancy. It is located in the Edgewood subdivision, just off the Price road. The walls are built of whitewashed brick. The architects, Study & Farrar, have given long sweeping lines to the roof, so as to make the house hug the ground as much as possible.

The plan is that of a central entrance hall, from which steps lead down into a long living room, paneled in white pine, in the early American style. Opening from the living room is a sun parlor which commands a view of the wooded neighborhood. Other rooms leading off the entrance hall are the dining room and study or library. The architects have worked out an interesting and economical stairs, known as the inside stairs, thus avoiding much unnecessary waste hall space. The second floor contains the family bedrooms while a wing to the rear provides ample service quarters. The house is equipped with every modern convenience and mechanical device that has been found practical.

WATERMAN AVENUE HOME IS SOLD BY GRETHER & CO.

John Grether & Co. report the sale of a six-room house at 5824 Waterman avenue for Dorrit L. Oakley to James B. Collins. The house is unusually designed and well built, having many conveniences not found in the ordinary home. The screen doors in the areaway are as expensive as the front door and there are unusually attractive lighting fixtures. Three large bedrooms are on the second floor, with spacious tile walled bath room with shower.

John Grether & Co. also report the sale, for Margaret G. Wheeler, of the 10-room brick home at 4248 West Pine boulevard to Joseph Burkett.

United Sales Co. to Move.

The United Sales Co., with offices at 329 Wainwright Building, will remove to larger quarters. A suite of offices occupying the entire southeast corner of the sixth floor of the Wainwright Building have been leased.

JOSEPH B. SCHWEPPE BUYS HOME AT DENNY-ROBYN ROADS

The Schroeder-Watson Realty Co. report the purchase of a residence by Joseph B. Schweppe on Denny and Robyn roads, surrounded by four acres of wooded grounds, overlooking the Sunset Country Club golf links.

The residence comprises eight rooms; two baths and tile solarium. A large steam-heated garage adjoins the residence, with chauffeur's quarters above. A. L. Ellicoct of the A. T. Johnson Real Estate Co. represented the seller.

The Schroeder-Watson Realty Co. further reports during the week the sale of downtown property, 106-08 South Ninth street.

EX-ST. LOUISAN RISES IN BIG MOVIE COMPANY

Harry D. Buckley Is Elected to Executive Board of United Artists.

Harry D. Buckley, former St. Louis showman, once manager of the Garrick Theater and the Columbia Theater here—of the Columbia when it was the Orpheum Circuit house—has been made one of the three members of the executive committee of the United Artists Corporation, vice president of the organization and assistant to the chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Buckley now lives in New York.

The United Artists Corporation was organized eight years ago. It originally was founded as a distributing organization to sell to exhibitors pictures made and owned by Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and David Wark Griffith. Later Buster Keaton, John Barrymore, Rudolph Valentino, Gloria Swanson, Joseph Schenck and Samuel Goldwyn joined the organization.

Buckley, who is 39 years old, first joined the United Artists in 1920 as manager of the Kansas City branch. Two years later he went with Douglas Fairbanks, a member of the corporation. When Fairbanks' brother and manager, the late Jack Fairbanks, was taken ill about two years ago, Buckley took his place. He later became manager for Miss Pickford, also. Before his present position, he was the corporation's acting general manager.

SIGNS CLEAN POLITICS BILLS

President Approves Measure Forbidding Campaign Promises.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Two bills designed toward the purification of politics were signed by President Coolidge today.

One requires all Federal appointees to file affidavits stating they have made no promises of consideration of any kind in exchange for appointment or support in obtaining office. The other makes it unlawful to pay in any form any person or organization for promises of support to obtain appointment.

Charles C. Salveter, 73, Formerly Was Head of Furnishing Goods Store in St. Louis.

Charles Clark Salveter, 73 years old, who until his retirement about 1907, was head of the Salveter & Stewart Furnishing Goods Co., operating a downtown store, died Thursday at his winter home at Seabreeze, Fla., from a complication of diseases. He had been ill for a year.

His body will arrive here this morning for burial, but the funeral arrangements have not been completed. He is survived by his wife, formerly Mrs. Mae E. Wilson; a brother, Henry Salveter of 451 Lee avenue, Webster Groves, and a sister, Mrs. William Campbell of Webster Park. It had been his custom for years to spend his summers in the North and the winters in Florida. For a time he was interested in the real estate business here.

ABSOLVED, GRIMM SUGGESTS INQUIRY INTO ITTNER ETHICS

Former Circuit Judge Also Voices Opinion That Jurists Might Investigate "Some Others."

A STORMY WEEK ON CIRCUIT BENCH

Grimm Urges "Thoughtful Consideration" of Propriety of Pledges for Bench Assignments.

The Circuit Judges, having inquired into the conduct of former Circuit Judge Hugo Grimm and found nothing amiss, are resting from their labors over the weekend, presumably undisturbed by Grimm's suggestion that they inquire into the ethics of Circuit Judge Ittner and "some other members of the bench" before worrying about the ethics of a private citizen.

"At the very time their honors were considering the petty and, according to their own report, groundless charges against a private citizen," said former Judge Grimm, in a statement yesterday, "the newspapers were printing columns of matter concerning the official conduct of one of their number."

Grimm had reference to newspaper reports of Judge Ittner's acceptance of several unqualified bondsmen, one of them a proven defaulter, another an exposed cheat, another a bankrupt and a fourth the possessor of a police record. His statement also alluded to the slot machine pool run by Jake Katz, to whom Judge Ittner granted an injunction against police interference last April.

It was a stormy week for the Judges. Last Monday at a general session Judge Ittner held them to pledges made six months ago, and they assigned him to the Juvenile Court. Friends of the Juvenile Court opposed the assignment, chiefly on the ground that Judge Ittner's injunction allowed the slot machine pool to harvest many nickels from school children. Circuit Judge Franklin Miller voiced this opposition by telling Judge Ittner that his usefulness as a Juvenile Judge would be impaired. But Judge Ittner insisted on holding his votes in line and got the assignment.

Three Ethical Questions.

Regarding this situation, former Judge Grimm asked the Judges "to give due and thoughtful consideration" to the following ethical questions:

1. The propriety of a Judge's action in not only actively seeking assignment to a certain court, but asking his colleagues to pledge themselves to vote in his favor.

2. The propriety of the conduct of certain of his colleagues to make such pledges, and

3. The propriety of such colleagues keeping such pledges despite later developments which made them (or some of them) believe that the public interest demands that the pledges be not kept.

The only ethical question which the Judges considered last week was the propriety of a Boatmen's Bank advertisement which mentioned Grimm's name as trust officer. They discovered that Grimm was in no way responsible for the use of his name and exonerated him.

Doubt Anything Can Be Done.

Most of the Judges interviewed about the Ittner assignment expressed themselves, though not for quotation, as doubtful whether anything can be done about it unless Judge Ittner voluntarily withdraws. His personal friends among the 16 Judges, numbering five or six, are known to have suggested this relief from embarrassment to him, but he has not indicated that he looks with favor on such a solution. Two of the Judge's friends said they were mystified as to why he should insist on the Juvenile Court assignment. Ordinarily Judges dodge this assignment and the general session has to draft a Judge for the job.

The opposition to Judge Ittner's assignment among the 10 other Judges is unorganized. These jurists point out that so long as Judge Ittner is empowered by the people to sit on the bench, he is held to be fit for any assignment the general session gives him. To force his withdrawal from the Juvenile Court would be tantamount to a vote of censure and the further imputation that Judge Ittner, if he could not serve acceptably as a Juvenile Judge, could not serve acceptably anywhere else. The moderates among the opposition are unwilling to bring such a situation about.

ST. LOUIS FOREIGN TRADE GROWING, GEPHART SAYS

Local Firms Buy and Sell in All Parts of the World.

Many St. Louisans do not realize the great and growing extent of foreign trade conducted by business houses here, because there are few concerns that have the major portion of their transactions in other countries, W. F. Gephart, a vice president of the First National Bank and new president of the World Trade Club, told the club Friday, when he was elected.

St. Louis, he said, buys and sells goods in all parts of the world, and the growing diversification of its manufactures is giving it greater need of foreign markets and sources of raw materials. It is, for instance, the fourth largest coffee importing center of the United States.

Mrs. M. Sandhofer

1382 Shawmut Place

You Win the $100 Prize or a New Eden, if You Prefer, Offered in the Oldest Eden Contest

This Eden Washer of Mrs. Sandhofer's has been faithfully on the job since 1910 or 1911, at least 15 years—its serial number, 1448, shows that. Think of it...since long before the war. No one knows, or could even estimate, the amount of money that old patriarch has saved its owner...in clothes wear, in time saved, in actual toil saved!

Something for Every Man to Think About

When we say buy an Eden as a Christmas gift for your wife, your mother, or your sister, we know you are giving her a LONG-LIVED gift. We know it will serve and save, for that is what the Eden has been built to do since the first Eden was made 16 years ago. Naturally, you buy the Eden, but long ere its career is over, it will have paid back its cost to you plus compound interest in the form of actual savings and plus endless dividends in the form of a woman's happiness.

BAKER KEEPS OUT OF ENFORCEMENT OF DRY LAW HERE

Governor Refuses to Direct Gentry to Take Over Duties of Prosecutor Schweitzer.

Enforcement of the State prohibition law in St. Louis, as to the prosecuting end, will be left to Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer. Gov. Baker said yesterday that he would not "do anything about" the resolutions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Antisaloon League, which asked that Attorney-General Gentry should supplant Schweitzer in the task of enforcement.

The St. Louis Federation of the W. C. T. U. and the headquarters committee of the league, in resolutions adopted in the last few days, charged that the Prosecuting Attorney's office has not enforced the State dry law, nor tried to do so, in the six years that it has been in force, and that as a result, "prohibition is not now and never has been in effect in St. Louis."

Could Act Without Order.

They cited a clause of the prohibition law, which declares that it shall be the Attorney-General's duty to enforce that law in any county where the local prosecutor fails or refuses to do so. This is independent of any action by the Governor. In all other matters, the Attorney-General can perform the duties of a local prosecutor only upon the Governor's order. Gentry has said that he would await the Governor's instructions in the matter of the dry law complaint.

"I don't think I will do anything about it," Gov. Baker said to the Post-Dispatch correspondent in Jefferson City. "I have looked over the resolution, but I think we have enough to do to look after affairs here."

Sidener Case Recalled.

The Governor last spring assigned Attorney-General Gentry to conduct an investigation of the Circuit Attorney's office here in connection with the Rutherford murder case. The resultant prosecutions failed, and it is believed that Gentry would not undertake another St. Louis task of magnitude without the Governor's direct orders.

The six-year period mentioned in the resolutions covers the four years of Schweitzer, who lately was re-elected, and two years of Ernest F. Oakley, his predecessor. The dry organizations charge that the prosecutors have failed and refused to co-operate with the police, and have neglected and refused to use the injunction remedy provided by the state law.

BUILDING RECORDS FOR NOVEMBER IN 37 STATES LOWER

869,200 in contracts for new construction work during the first eleven months of 1926, which was a decline of 11 per cent from the amount ($785,143,600) for the corresponding period of 1925.

The Central West.

The total volume of construction contracts let in the Central West (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Southern Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska) during November amounted to $154,205,000. This figure was 10 per cent below October, 1926. However, there was an increase of 29 per cent over November of last year. Included in last month's building record were the following important classes of work: $68,925,800, or 45 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $25,501,600, of 17 per cent, for commercial buildings; $22,243,900, or 14 per cent, for industrial buildings; $13,271,700, or 9 per cent, for public works and utilities; $10,829,800, or 7 per cent, for educational buildings; and $7,463,900, or 5 per cent, for social and recreational projects.

New building and engineering work started in this territory during the first 11 months of 1926 reached a total of $1,541,922,300, as compared with $1,377,431,000 in the corresponding period of last year, being a gain of 12 per cent. The 1926 11 months' total of contract awards has already exceeded the 1925 yearly total by the amount of $54,682,400.

Contemplated construction projects were reported for the district in November to the amount of $174,180,200, being a decline of 6 per cent from October, 1926, as well as a loss of 4 per cent from November of last year.

Decrease in Texas.

The State of Texas had $13,312,900 in contracts for new building and engineering work last month. There was a decrease of 19 per cent from October of this year, but an increase of 32 per cent over November, 1925. Included in the November construction record were the following items of note: $6,515,600, or 49 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $3,253,800, or 24 per cent, for commercial buildings; $1,006,300, or 8 per cent, for public works and utilities; $461,500, or 3 per cent, for hospitals and institutions; $423,000, or 3 per cent, for social and recreational projects, and $291,200, or 2 per cent, for public buildings.

Construction contracts let in the State during the past 11 months amounted to $215,123,200, which is a gain of 28 per cent over the amount ($167,881,100) for the first 11 months of 1925. The 1926 11 months' total of contract awards has exceeded the 1925 yearly total by the amount of $29,765,300.

Contemplated construction projects were reported for Texas in November to the amount of $20,583,700. The above figure represented increases of 3 per cent over October, 1926, and 47 per cent over November, 1925.

DICKMANN FIRM SELLS THREE SOUTHSIDE CORNERS

The sale of three prominent South Side corners featured a number of deals, aggregating $85,000, which were negotiated last week by the Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. The outstanding corner involved in these transactions was the southeast corner of Geyer and Nebraska avenues, improved with a two-story brick residence, situated on a site fronting 36 feet on Nebraska avenue. This property was purchased from Jerome S. Handel and David Craig by Miss Rose Swatsick.

The second corner sold included the northeast corner of Thirteenth street and Lafayette avenue, improved with old residences, which are to be razed for the erection of a business block. It was sold for the estate of Mrs. Katherna Zika to Arthur J. Moberg.

The southeast corner of Fourth and Duchouquette streets was the third corner sold. This site is improved with an eight-story building. The purchaser, who acquired this property from Mrs. Mary Mayer, was Fridolin A. Messmer.

Additional deals closed by the Dickmann firm during the past week included a five-room brick bungalow at 8305 Van Buren street. Vinita Park, which was sold by Roy Kemper to Edward W. Rudolph; a three-family apartment at 4333 Maryland avenue, 5067 Spalding avenue, a single flat; property at 4612 Washington boulevard, bungalow at 3967 Humphrey street.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE INDORSES RIVER FRONT PLAN

At a regular meeting of the board of directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange Thursday afternoon unanimous indorsement was given for the plan offered by the City Plan Commission of St. Louis for improvement of St. Louis' river front.

One of the major purposes for the existence of the Real Estate Exchange is to advance the interests of the city of St. Louis by promoting public improvements, and in keeping with this purpose the exchange directors feel that the realization of the City Plan Commission's proposed river front improvement would reclaim the decayed business district east of Fourth street and stabilize that section.

The Romance OF Hedgleigh Park Northampton Electra Park

we laid out and developed HEDGLEIGH PARK At Union and Natural Bridge, consisting of 300 LOTS, and advised our clients to buy. TODAY this section is built up with homes, flats, apartments and stores, representing a value of $5,000,000, and land values have doubled.

IN 1925

we laid out NORTHAMPTON on South Kingshighway at Chippewa Street, consisting of 430 lots, and again advised our clients to buy. Today 178 new buildings representing a value of $3,500,000 have made a new city of Northampton, and land values have increased enormously.

we announce our ELECTRA PARK on Goodfellow Av., north of Natural Bridge, consisting of 188 lots, every one of which we believe will double in value within the next year.

The development of this Northwest section is a romance in real estate unfolding under our very eyes. The coming of the General Electric plant within one block of Electra Park will bring 25,000 employees with a payroll of $30,000,000 annually.

Will you stand idly by and see this development taking place—or will you get in now and be a part of it, reaping your profit to which your foresight entitles you?

Remember, we have only 188 lots and 52 of these have been sold in the past three weeks.

BOOTLEGGERS CAME WELL RECOMMENDED

Cole County Sheriff Tells of Assigning Federal Prisoners to Rooms in His Home.

By the Jefferson City Correspondend of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 11.—How a little political influence may alleviate the hardships of a bootlegger serving a jail sentence is disclosed in an admission today by Sheriff L. C. Withaup of Cole County, that seven Federal prisoners, sent here from Kansas City to serve their sentences, were given quarters in the Sheriff's residence, instead of jail cells, operated their own dining room and employed another prisoner as cook and houseman.

Rumors have been current that some of the Federal prisoners sent here to serve sentences for liquor law violations were allowed special privileges in the Cole County jail. Sheriff Withaup denied he had any "house guests" at present but readily admitted the seven Kansas Citians, now discharged, had occupied rooms in his residence and had been extended other privileges.

The seven prisoners he named, all from Kansas City, were released several months ago at the expiration of their sentences. From his record Withaup gave their names as Harvey Gillespie, Bud Smith, Adolph Nelms, George Mefford, John Sambo, Otis Samples and Percy Estabrook.

High-class Men, Sheriff Says.

All were under sentences of three to four months for liquor law violations.

"They were all nice fellows," Withaup said. "High-class men. And, anyway, I did it on the instructions of Federal Marshal Parshall."

I. K. Parshall of Kansas City formerly was United States Marshal for the Western District of Missouri. He was not reappointed and was succeeded several months ago by Asa W. Butler of Albany.

"When Parshall brought a bunch of prisoners down he said these men were good fellows—druggists and former saloon keepers and men well known around Kansas City," Withaup continued. "Parshall told me to do everything I could for them."

Assigned to Rooms in Home.

Withaup said he allowed the seven men to occupy three rooms on the second floor of his residence, which adjoins the jail. The windows are not barred. There was no shortage of cells at the time, it was stated.

Bob McDonald, Negro, of Kansas City, also serving a sentence for liquor law violation, was assigned to the Kansas City men as their cook and to look after their quarters, and was paid by the prisoners, Withaup said.

Furnishings of the three rooms were not adequate, so the prisoners purchased additional chairs and tables, and two stoves, one for cooking purposes. The prisoners breakfasted in their room on jail fare, Withaup said, but luncheon and dinner were prepared by the special cook from supplies purchased by the seven prisoners. A daily telephone order was placed with local firms for the supplies.

Made Trips With Guards.

Withaup denied the prisoners were allowed to leave his residence unguarded, but admitted that they were allowed to make trips to the business district, when accompanied by a guard. He asserted no rent was paid for the room and stated "all I got out of it was the 65 cents a day paid by the Government for their meals."

Withaup, who was supported by the Ku Klux Klan in his race for Sheriff, has been active in conducting liquor raids in Cole County.

MISSOURI PACIFIC SCHOLARSHIP AT WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Rental of Francis Field for Pageant Is Used as Trust Fund for Purpose.

Taking rental paid to Washington University by the Missouri Pacific Railroad for use of Francis Field for a pageant last summer, the university has set up a trust fund to provide a permanent scholarship, to be held by a deserving young man or woman employed by the Missouri Pacific or the son or daughter of an employe of the railroad. Income from the fund is expected to be about $250 a year.

Members of the university corporation felt this was a fitting use to be made of the rental money, inasmuch as the pageant, commemorating the road's seventy-fifth anniversary, was of educational value. A statement issued by Chancellor Hadley's office described the pageant as "a contribution to the history of St. Louis and the Middle West."

The scholarship, to be awarded to whichever applicant best meets the entrance requirements.

Christ Knippel, 65 years old, a watchman, of 4143 Delmar boulevard, died at 11 o'clock last night at Christian Hospital. Taylor and Pope avenues, of fractures of the skull and left leg, suffered Monday evening when he was struck by an automobile as he set out red warning lanterns on a torn-up street surface at Florissant and Mimika avenues.

After the death of Knippel, who was employed by a street paving company, Charles Summers, 52, of 6214 St. Louis avenue, St. Louis county, the driver of the car which hit him, was ordered held for the coroner.

50,510 BATTLE DEATHS IN REVISED WAR LIST

35th Division List 1298 and 89th, 1466—Marine-Navy Figures Excluded.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-22 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — Rechecked and verified records pertaining to battle casualties suffered by the American army during the World War disclose that 1298 men of the 35th Division and 1466 of the 89th Division were either killed in action or died of wounds suffered on the battlefield.

These figures were made public today by the War Department in an analysis of the annual report of Major-General Robert C. Davis, the Adjutant General, which stated that complete records for the entire army show there 50,510 battle deaths during the war, of which 37,568 occurred in action and 12,942 resulted from wounds received in action. These records also revealed that 193,663 non-mortal wounds received treatment in the cases of 182,674 individuals. The grand total of battle casualties was 244,173, of which 244,086 occurred among the American expeditionary forces in Europe and 87 among American forces in Siberia.

Many Casualties Not Included.

Battle casualties among personnel of the Navy and the Marine Corps were not included in the totals, not even when members of those services were killed or wounded while serving with the army, the report said. Accidental wounds, received in action or otherwise, and shell shock, including psycho-neurosis and concussion, were not included in compiling the statistics. The number of shell-shock cases, as shown by the isolated records, was 5016.

In the Thirty-fifth Division, the National Guard division, composed of troops from Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and Arkansas, 1018 men were killed in action and 280 died of wounds. The total of nonmortal casualties in this division was 5998 and the grand total of battle casualties 7296.

1600 Missouri Men Lost Lives.

The Eighty-ninth, or National Guard Division, organized at Camp Funston, Kan., had 1466 battle deaths, of which 980 occurred on the battlefields. The remaining 486 died of wounds received in action. There were 5625 nonmortal casualties in this division, and the grand total of battle casualties was 7091, according to the report.

Statistics for expeditionary forces, classified according to states, showed that 1173 Missouri men were killed in action and 427 died of wounds received on the battlefields, making a total of 1600 battle deaths. The nonmortal wounds among men from Missouri numbered 6562, putting the grand total of casualties at 8162. The total number of individuals represented by these casualties was 7908.

Toll for Illinois 2746.

The men from Illinois killed in action numbered 2011, and the number receiving wounds resulting in death 735. The total of battle deaths among Illinois men was 2746. There were 12,011 nonmortal wounds suffered by Illinoisans and the grand total casualties numbered 14,757, representing 14,207 individuals.

The total battle deaths among Arkansas men were 439, of which 335 were deaths on the field of battle and 104 as the result of wounds received in action. The number of nonmortal wounds was 1537.

The Middle Western troops were in some of the fiercest engagements of the latter part of the war. The two major operations which cost the most American men were the Aisne-Marne and Meuse-Argonne offensives, the report showed. The Aisne-Marne movement resulted in 32,636 casualties, of which 6992 were deaths, and the Meuse-Argonne offensive cost a grand total of 122,063 casualties, including 26,277 deaths.

Dogs' Fancy Dress Parade Follows Cat Catastrophe

Cherokee Business Association Turns Out a Growling Success This Time, With a Prize for Every Entry.

Promoter W. L. Moore, who was at the bottom of the great cat catastrophe sponsored by the Cherokee Business Association last Nov. 27 changed his publicity tactics yesterday afternoon "put on the dog." That is to say, he arranged a fancy dress parade for dogs. Up and down the length of Cherokee street, from Eighteenth to Iowa avenue, they marched to martial music in all their unnatural finery.

The "feline flop," as Moore calls it, took place three weeks ago. He offered 25 cents apiece for cats. The cats were to have been tagged with cards extolling the wares of Cherokee street merchants and released for public inspection. But the Humane Society through its executive secretaryy, R. F. Sellers, nipped the scheme in the bud, threatening the arrest of the members of the association if the plan were carried out. In the row that followed, President Harry Schuessler, an anti-cat man, resigned his position in the association and William Speidel, an insurance man and cat advocate, filled his place. This was deplored by Moore, who then cast about for means to restore harmony. Yesterday's dog parade was the result. Not only was it favored by Sellers, but Schuessler himself saw the virtue of it and led the procession in person. As his resignation was never acted upon, it is said by members that he will be restored to power.

The Dog Parade.

The parade, then. Yesterday at 2 p. m. 26 dogs assembled at Eighteenth and Cherokee streets. No family tree was necessary for entrance; as Moore expressed it in the circular put out: "Fix him, doll him up, dress him up and get him in this parade. The wide dog, the narrow dog, the fat dog, the lean dog, the aristocratic dog, the common dog, the long-haired dog the short-haired dog, and the dog without any hair at all. They all have a chance of winning."

All of them were there with the exception of the hairless dog. One was dressed in red cloth trimmed with cotton to represent Santa Claus; a racing whippet had its naturally svelte lines accentuated by the addition of a corset of ancient vintage. Others rode in baby carriages, gayly decorated. Some were dressed as clowns, some as tramps, and one wore a bathing suit, modestly cut.

At Moore's signal they started westward behind the band. They were all even at the post, but the whippet took the lead with corset strings dangling. Soon the minor mishaps incidental to an unrehearsed performance began. Dogs nipped their neighbors; barks, yowls and growls drowned out the band; Charlie Chaplin's trousers slipped off and he obstinately resisted all attempts to replace them.

As they crossed Indiana avenue, Santa Claus was wantonly attacked by a villainous black and tan disguised as a Red Cross nurse, and escaped after a severe loss of cotton.

When they reached Texas avenue the children holding the leashes began to show the pace and hardly had energy enough to repel the onslaught of a fierce Airedale that bounded out of a doorway intent upon breaking up the party. At the intersection of Ohio, a street car was forced to stop when "Brownie," who later won first prize, leaped from his go-cart, disarranging his duds and dropping his spectacles.

By the time they reached Iowa, the turning point, most of the dogs were hysterical. All were bedraggled. The fuzzy poodles, especially, showed the effects of their indulgent, misspent lives. Most of them were being carried by their owners, and their tongues lolled at alarming length. They were cheered on the way by Cherokee merchants and housewives, who lined doors and windows along the route.

At Iowa the line of march right-about-faced back to Virginia avenue, where Promoter Moore and officials of the association were doping out the winners. Santa Claus looked fine at the start, they said, but he so

ATTORNEYS ARGUE TEST CASE INVOLVING SALE OF TRANSFERS

Contend City Usurps State Rights; Call Street Car Ordinance Class Legislation.

Judge Gayer of the Court of Cirminal Correction yesterday listened to arguments on the validity of the city ordinance which prohibits the sale or giving away of street car transfers, and reserved judgment until Jan. 8.

Victor Packman, an attorney, charged with the sale of a transfer to Jesse Bishop, another attorney, who now is acting as counsel for Packman, is testing the city's right to enact such a law.

Bishop argued that the Board of Aldermen usurped powers of the State Public Service Commission by regulating the United Railways, a public utility, and Packman called the ordinance class legislation, since the transfers issued to patrons of busses were not included in the regulations.

City Counselor Charles Dolan and counsel for the street car company pointed out that the Board of Aldermen was empowered to pass ordinances for the welfare of the entire public and that the law regarding transfers was for the benefit of the public and not particularly for the street car company.

POLICEMAN SHOT BY FUGITIVE WHO LATER IS CAUGHT

Sergeant Thomas O'Brien of East St. Louis Wounded in Arm by Escaping Man Chased Into Alley.

A fugitive's shot struck Police Sergeant Thomas O'Brien, 33 years old, of East St. Louis, in the right forearm, disabling him and preventing his returning the fire early yesterday morning, but the fugitive later was captured and, with a companion, confessed to three holdups of gasoline filling stations, two on Friday night and the third last Thanksgiving day.

Sergt. O'Brien and Detective Samuel Strautz were on the lookout for two men in a Ford runabout who had held up the filling stations, when a Ford with two men as passengers passed them at Twenty-first and State streets. They pursued in a police automobile, Sergt. O'Brien firing from the running board and finally puncturing one of the pursued car's tires. It was not until Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue was reached, however, that the officers overtook the Ford and forced it to the curb.

Fugitive Escapes.

One of its occupants jumped and fled, Sergt. O'Brien in pursuit through alleys. At Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, the fugitive turned and fired three shots. The first struck Sergt. O'Brien in the forearm, causing him to fall and drop his revolver. The fugitive escaped.

Detective Strautz captured the second occupant of the Ford. He said he was Joseph Isom, 18 years old, of 1501A St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis, son of Dr. W. C. Isom, a physician, and named Clarence Burch, 25, of 1128 Trendley avenue, East St. Louis, as his companion. Burch was arrested in his home at 4 a. m.

He and Isom admitted, the police announced, the robbery of the three filling stations. They obtained $28 from a station at Twenty-fifth street and Lynch avenue, at 9 p. m. and $50 at another station at Tenth street and Brady avenue at 10 p. m. They admitted also, the police declared, that they had robbed a filling station at Tenth street and Missouri avenue on Thanksgiving day, obtaining $42. Burch, however, denied that he had shot Sergt. O'Brien.

Third Man Arrested.

On information furnished by Isom, police later arrested Stanfell Seyler, 23, of 4111-rear Bond avenue, who declared that he and Burch held up two filling stations and a truck driver, stealing small sums, in November. Burch denied he had ever seen Seyler before.

ALIEN PROPERTY MEASURE READY FOR HOUSE ACTION

Commission to Handle $100,000,000 Appropriation Is Provided in the Measure.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The House Ways and Means Committee today reported a bill to provide a payment of alien property claims as awarded by the German-American Mixed Claims Commission. Under an agreement between leaders it will be taken up by the House Wednesday.

The measure, drafted along lines suggested by representatives of those who will benefit under the awards, will not be made public officially until it is introduced next week. It places German and American Nationals on an equal basis in settlement of the claims and provides for an immediate part payment on each of the awards.

A commission would be created to determine the value of ships, radio stations and patents seized by the United States from Germany and an appropriation to cover this amount, which it is estimated will be slightly more than $100,000,000, would be authorized.

Such an appropriation, plus funds now held by the Alien Property Custodian, would be used to meet immediate payments, while money due the United States under the Dawes' reparation payments would be utilized to curtail the balance.

WOMAN WHO KILLED GIRL FREED

Shot Victim Because She Had Stolen Her Husband, Her Defense.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Blanche Richmond, 38 years old, of St. Joseph, Mo., who shot and killed Carrie Sparks, 16, also of St. Joseph, here Nov. 26, for breaking up her home, was freed on a charge of murder after a hearing before Justice of the Peace Frank Benanti.

Mrs. Richmond testified she shot Miss Sparks because the latter had induced her husband to come to Kansas City and live with her. The wife found Richmond and Miss Sparks together and fired, she declared, when the girl went to a dresser, apparently to get a weapon. The husband has not been found by the police.

Zinc and Lead Ore Prices Stand.

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., Dec. 11.—Zinc and lead ore prices remained unchanged in the Tri-State field during the week, zinc bringing $46 a ton, basis, and lead $100. The zinc ore market was weak and producers would not have been surprised at a cut in prices. However, few, if any, of them are making any money at present prices and smelters doubtless take this into consideration. There is talk of a general shutdown of two weeks over the Christmas holidays. This was done last year, when zinc ore was $55 and lead ore $125.

Automobiles

PART TWELVE.

YOUTH, WHOSE CAR H KILLED MAN NEAR SIGNAL POST, HELD

Edward Broderick, 19, Son of Attorney, Charged With Criminal Carelessness by Coroner's Jury.

The change of an automatic traffic signal giving automobiles the right of way while pedestrians still are crossing the street does not absolve the driver from blame if an accident occurs.

This was the decision reached by a Coroner's jury yesterday, when Edward Broderick, a 19-year-old student of 5342A Terry avenue, was held for the grand jury on a charge of criminal carelessness after an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the killing of Joseph W. McDonald of Willisville, Ill., Thursday night.

McDonald, who was 68 years old, was struck and fatally injured by Broderick's machine while attempting to cross Newstead avenue at Delmar boulevard and died two hours later at the City Hospital of skull fracture and concussion of the brain.

Testimony at the inquest disclosed that McDonald, accompanied by his wife, son, daughter and daughter-in-law, were walking east in Delmar and at Newstead started across the street with the traffic signal reading "Go." They were walking in a line with the women in the center. As they reached the middle of the thoroughfare, however, the traffic signal changed, giving the right of way to north and south bound traffic and leaving them marooned.

Car Failed to Slow Down.

According to the story of the son, George McDonald, Broderick's machine was approaching from the south at a fast rate of speed and, when the signal changed, continued on through the intersection without slowing down. The elder McDonald, he said, was a step in advance of the others and was caught by the car and carried for several yards before the machine was stopped.

Patrolman Chollbske, a traffic officer standing nearby who witnessed the accident, also testified the machine was speeding as it approached and went through the crossing at 30 to 32 miles an hour. The speed was great enough, he said, to cause the driver to lose control after striking McDonald and to run over the curb on the north side of Delmar before a stop could be made.

Defendant Son of Attorney.

E. C. Jourdan of 4252 West Pine boulevard, one of two youths riding with Broderick, denied the machine was traveling faster than 20 or 25 miles an hour through the intersection. He said they saw the party crossing the street when 100 feet away but that the elder man stepped in front of the car as they reached the crossing.

In view of the testimony as to the speed of the car and also in view of the fact that the law requires a driver to exercise "proper caution" in approaching an intersection, the jury decided Broderick had been guilty of culpable negligence.

McDonald, accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Amanda McDonald, and his daughter, Miss Bessie McDonald, came to St. Louis last Sunday

YOUTH, WHOSE CAR KILLED MAN NEAR SIGNAL POST, HELD

Edward Broderick, 19, Son of Attorney, Charged With Criminal Carelessness by Coroner's Jury.

The change of an automatic traffic signal giving automobiles the right of way while pedestrians still are crossing the street does not absolve the driver from blame if an accident occurs.

This was the decision reached by a Coroner's jury yesterday, when Edward Broderick, a 19-year-old student of 5342A Terry avenue, was held for the grand jury on a charge of criminal carelessness after an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the killing of Joseph W. McDonald of Willisville, Ill., Thursday night.

McDonald, who was 68 years old, was struck and fatally injured by Broderick's machine while attempting to cross Newstead avenue at Delmar boulevard and died two hours later at the City Hospital of skull fracture and concussion of the brain.

Testimony at the Inquest disclosed that McDonald, accompanied by his wife, son, daughter and daughter-in-law, were walking east in Delmar and at Newstead started across the street with the traffic signal reading "Go." They were walking in a line with the women in the center. As they reached the middle of the thoroughfare, however, the traffic signal changed, giving the right of way to north and south bound traffic and leaving them marooned.

Car Failed to Slow Down.

According to the story of the son, George McDonald, Broderick's machine was approaching from the south at a fast rate of speed and, when the signal changed, continued on through the intersection without slowing down. The elder McDonald, he said, was a step in advance of the others and was caught by the car and carried for several yards before the machine was stopped.

Patrolman Cholibske, a traffic officer standing nearby who witnessed the accident, also testified the machine was speeding as it approached and went through the crossing at 30 to 32 miles an hour. The speed was great enough, he said, to cause the driver to lose control after striking McDonald and to run over the curb on the north side of Delmar before a stop could be made.

Defendant Son of Attorney.

E. C. Jourdan of 4252 West Pine boulevard, one of two youths riding with Broderick, denied the machine was traveling faster than 20 or 25 miles an hour through the intersection. He said they saw the party crossing the street when 100 feet away but that the elder man stepped in front of the car as they reached the crossing.

In view of the testimony as to the speed of the car and also in view of the fact that the law requires a driver to exercise "proper caution" in approaching an intersection, the jury decided Broderick had been guilty of culpable negligence.

McDonald, accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Amanda McDonald, and his daughter, Miss Bessie McDonald, came to St. Louis last Sunday for a week's visit at the home of George, 3974 Delmar. His death was the 160th motor vehicle fatality of the year.

Broderick is the son of Joseph A. Broderick, an attorney, with offices in the Federal Commerce Trust Building.

HOUSE COMMITTEE VOTES TO SHELVE TAX LEGISLATION

Coolidge's Reduction on Income and Democrats' $335,000,000 Cut in Levy Ditched Together.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—No tax reduction legislation at this session of Congress will be undertaken, the Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee decided today.

By a party vote, the committee adopted a motion by Representative Hawley, of Oregon, ranking Republican, to table all revenue proposals. It carried after brief but sharp debate had brought out that the President's suggestion for an income tax reduction next year would be included among those pigeon-holed.

This means that the treasury surplus will be applied to reduction of the public debt at the end of the fiscal year next June 30. That disposition was recommended by the President as an alternative for this tax credit proposal. In his message to Congress he estimated the surplus at $383,000,000 while Democrats placed it at $550,000,000.

Prior to action on the Hawley motion another clear-cut party line-up rejected a motion by Representative Garner, of Texas, ranking Democratic member on the committee to hold hearings on the $335,000,000 Democratic tax reduction bill.

Garner, author of the proposal, precipitated the discussion by urging the committee to take up his bill, drafted with the approval of all Democratic leaders. He then vainly sought to use the President's proposal as a vehicle to bring the subject to tax revision before the committee.

After the meeting chairman Green issued a statement asserting that Republican committee members felt.

"There is much to be said in favor of this (Coolidge's) proposal, but of necessity the benefit of this reduction would be limited to income tax payers, whereas a reduction of the national debt insures to the benefit of all taxpayers.

Green recalled that President Coolidge in his message had put it up to Congress to decide whether income tax credits should be extended or the surplus applied to debt reductions and added that the Republican committee members deemed the latter course would "best serve the public interest."

Garner asserted the action showed there was not a single vote among the Republican committee members in favor of the President's tax plan.

Declaring that the Democrats are "united in support of their bill" and he added: "We have been and now are ready to go along with Republicans in an effort to get a tax reduction bill at this session. They, however, are the majority party."

KIRKWOOD VOTES SUPPORT OF PUBLIC LIBRARY, 400-11

Half Mill Tax to Bring About $3000 Yearly—$1000 to Employ Full Time Librarian.

The proposition for a one-half mill tax for the support of the public library in Kirkwood, was carried yesterday by a vote of 400 to 11. It is estimated that the new tax will produce about $3000 yearly, one third of which will be used to employ a full-time librarian, another third for the purchase of new books, and $1000 will be set aside for a building fund.

The library has been maintained by voluntary subscriptions, and fines on books taken out by members. About two years ago, 7000 books were collected by the founders of the library, and they were given space in the City Hall. The institution has been conducted by a committee headed by Mrs. H. C. Walker.

WELL POISONING LAID TO TEACHER'S REMOVAL

Two Brothers Held on Stories Told by Three Younger Ones.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Ind., Dec. 11.—Prosecuting Attorney Morrison Rockhill of Kosciusko County announced today that 13-year-old Robert Riley had confessed putting poison in the well at Mount Tabor school at the behest of his older brothers, Athol and Samuel Riley, 23 and 18, respectively. Athol and Samuel are under arrest. Two other brothers, George, 10, and Edward, 7, and Robert say they were with Athol and Samuel when the two older brothers bought the poison at Nappanee.

The poisoning of the well is generally supposed to have been the Rileys' retaliation on the School Board of Trustees, which recently removed a sister of the Rileys as a teacher at Mount Tabor.

The lives of 13 children who drank from the well were endangered, but so much of the poison was poured into the well that it acted only as an emetic. Athol and Samuel Riley deny they had anything to do with the poisoning of the well.

In his search for the perpetrators of the crime, Rockhill traced the removal of Mary Riley from the Mount Tabor School to the Hepton School, a greater distance from her home. Ruth and Beatrice Riley previously had taught at the school. All are sisters of the accused men. The removal of Mary incensed the Rileys, Rockhill found out. Neighborhood gossip aided him and the questioning of the Riley boys gave him the confessions.

In entering a plea of not guilty for the two older Rileys, their attorney said the county authorities had coerced the younger boys into implicating their brothers. The three younger Rileys are not held.

Marriage Is Broken by Court and Annulled by Rome, but DOT GOES MERRILY ON

When the Duke of Marlborough Married Consuelo Vanderbilt, $2,500,000 Was Tied Up in a Trust Fund That Endures.

Consuelo Vanderbilt from 1895 to 1922.

The Duchess and her mother, now Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

With her second husband, Jacques Balsan.

HE law courts six years ago divorced the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough. Both have married again. The Holy Rota, highest court of Roman Catholic law, has decreed recently that the marriage of Consuelo Vanderbilt to the Duke of Marlborough never existed.

When the Duke traded his title, his far-reaching estates, his crest and coronet and ancient lineage for a slice of the Vanderbilt millions, a trust fund agreement was drawn up that the law courts of England and America, the holy court of Rome and all other powers on earth might not break.

So the Duke's dot goes merrily on to the tune of nearly $2000 a week. Until the Duke's last breath will the income from his dowry of $2,500,000 continue. After his death his heirs are destined to receive yearly over $100,000 from the fruits of the labor of that first fortune-building Cornelius Vanderbilt, a fierce, profane man, who wouldn't have known a Duke from a doorman.

There is nothing emotional about a trust fund. Love ends, birth and death bring joy or tragedy, yet those 50,000 shares of New York Central stock that William K. Vanderbilt set aside for the Duke will go on producing. Already the Duke has realized $3,100,000 from this dowry.

Behind this trust fund, behind the long marital unhappiness that has marred the life of Consuelo Vanderbilt, behind the flurry that the annulment decree has caused, there is the social ambition of a pretty girl from a Mobile, Alabama, family—Alva Smith. She married William K. Vanderbilt. New York's Four Hundred would not recognize her; million-dollar town and country houses, and fabulous fancy dress balls, were of no avail. Austerely closed remained the doors of the few who mattered to Mrs. Vanderbilt.

Then this energetic, ambitious woman, with unlimited wealth, pried open the magic portals of the smart worlds of England and America. She married her daughter, Consuelo, to the Duke of Marlborough, ninth in that line, descended from the first Duke, who had won glory on the field of Blenheim.

This is what the world saw on that notable wedding day, November 6, 1895. The greatest fortune in America was being united to one of the oldest titles of England. It was a love match, it was said, although a certain comparatively small share of the Vanderbilt fortune would go as a dower to replenish the depleted Marlborough coffers.

CONSUELO, 17, was slender, sweet, fragile. There was a certain shy, elfin look about her which came from neither her father nor her mother. Brought up under the eyes of tutors, nurses, governesses and servants, like a fairy princess, she knew nothing of life. The young handsome Duke, 24, was a polished man of the world.

Fashionable St. Thomas' Episcopal Church was adorned as it had never been adorned before. Eight hundred tree ferns, orchids, smilax, bougainvillaea, lilies, violets and roses obscured the original design of the church. The guest list of 4000 included the great names in America and England.

Thousands gathered along Fifth avenue to see the pair pass into the church. Inside, the rolling tones of the great organ were supplanted by the soft strains of the New York Symphony Orchestra and the orchestra, in its turn, gave way to the voices of a specially trained and chosen choir. Mrs. Vanderbilt had the satisfaction of knowing that the Goelets, the Oelrichses, the Astors, the Belmonts had waited on the steps of the church more than half an hour so that they might be certain of good seats.

One unpleasant incident marred the great occasion. The groom, suave, urbane, distinguished looking, was forced to wait, in full view of the throngs that filled the pews, 20 minutes for his bride. But even this was forgotten when the organ pealed out "Oh, Perfect Love" as the bride, on the arm of her father, approached the altar.

Later, at the Vanderbilt town house, a band, imported from Hungary for the occasion, spun out the waltzes of Strauss, and everything was forgotten but how radiant the young bride and bridegroom looked, how gorgeously she was gowned in lace that had to be made to a special pattern for her.

Another story that the world did not know has just been told. Officials of the Holy Rota have made public an outline of that tribunal's annulment decree which makes that glamorous wedding day a tragedy. To aid her daughter in annulling her first marriage, Consuelo's mother, now Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, testified that she forced her daughter into marriage with the Duke.

Secretly, the 17-year-old girl was engaged to a youthful American, intelligent, keen with excellent bearing, and of good family. This made no difference to the socially ambitious mother. Once the marriage had been negotiated she would hear of nothing else. To make sure that her daughter would not elope with the man of her choice, a guard was posted outside the girl's door.

THE marriage to Marlborough was arranged by attorneys. The Duke, there is reason to believe, thought that the $2,500,000 which was all that William K. Vanderbilt would allow, was niggardly. However, he decided to bide his time, living in hope that a larger portion of the Vanderbilt fortune would come to him by inheritance. Consuelo also was to receive $100,000 a year.

Now that at least a part of the truth is known, that delay of 20 minutes takes on a new significance. Forced into a marriage against her will, almost frightened by the great panoply and fanfare her mother had created about the wedding, it is not difficult to imagine how the young girl spent those 20 minutes before the words were spoken that united her for a lifetime to a man she scarcely knew.

What a man she found him to be in the years that followed! In the most conservative ranks of English society he was known as cold and uninteresting. There was always the intimation of a sneer on his face.

What a contrast the impulsive American girl afforded to this man! She was lost in a world of intrigue, and gossip, of snobberies untold, of strait-laced, unyielding social distinctions. Even so, she won a large portion of society to her side.

To console her in a loveless marriage, came two children, the first the Marquess of Blandford, the second, Lord Ivor Charles. The Duchess turned, too, to charitable work. The grounds of Blenheim Palace, the great estate awarded by Queen Anne to the first Duke, for his valor and generalship at Blenheim, were opened to the public for picnics and merry-makings. This distressed the Duke, as did his wife's increasing preoccupation with nursing homes and other charitable works in the slums of London.

John Churchill, first Duke of Marlborough.

ANOTHER cause of dissension arose. Hundreds of thousands of dollars of the Vanderbilt money went into the palace of Blenheim. Not only repairs, but plumbing and other improvements were necessary before the American Duchess could live there in comfort. Not content with this expenditure, the Duke began the construction of a huge and costly London house in fashionable Curzon street. This took almost unbelievable sums, which the Duchess wheedled from time to time from her father. In due course, certain newspapers printed a story that Vanderbilt millions were going into the Duke's town house. This infuriated the Duke and was the cause of frequent quarrels with his wife, whom he blamed for such publicity.

When William K. Vanderbilt married a second time, on April 25, 1903, the Duke's annoyance and chagrin were unconcealed. He saw in the second Mrs. Vanderbilt, who had been Mrs. Anne Harriman Rutherford, a rival for the millions which her husband controlled. The Duke had dreamed vague dreams of a viceroyship, of high political honor, all of which went glimmering when the prospect of great wealth no longer loomed. He had hoped that the Vanderbilt millions could do for him what the fortune of Joseph Leiter of Chicago had done for the ambitious Lord Curzon.

Public rumors of a separation came as early as 1901. In later accounts of the marital unhappiness of the Duke and Duchess, the name of Gladys Deacon, one of Consuelo's best friends and a bridesmaid at the wedding, was mentioned. It was said that at a house party at Blenheim, the Duke had been attracted to Miss Deacon, the daughter of a wealthy and FREMONT, Nebraska.

SOMETIMES it snows and blows in Nebraska and sometimes it only blows. But it always blows. These rugged Nebraskans might die of suffocation if it didn't, because the temperature never gets more than 40 degrees below zero on a nice winter day and in the summer time the heat is vastly more oppressive. The worst torture a Nebraskan can think of, one brawny farmer told the writer, is a summer day in St. Louis where it hardly blows at all. Wherever Nebraskans assemble there simply must be wind. And if there are those other climatic advantages enjoyed in common with the Eskimos, so much the better. On the day when 5000 persons turned out here recently to see the "World's Series of the Cornfields"—that mighty event in which the champions and near champions from seven states fought it out for the world's cornhusking title—it was both snowing and blowing, and so a good time was had by all, or almost all. There were present a few from Missouri who, thinking Nebraska was in the United States instead of Siberia, came out here wearing low shoes and a tropical garment called B. V. D. It was a bad guess. Against these Nebraska breezes they might just as well have tripped forth in one of Gilda Gray's stage outfits.

And then to contribute to the depression, both Missouri cornhusking entries lost. Literally and figuratively they got completely snowed under. One—the Missouri champion—managed to scramble out in seventh place, but they almost had to send out a searching party for the other in a field of 12 contestants, he was firmly intrenched in twelfth place when at last they dug him out.

AT THAT, though, he did almost as well as the Illinois champion and last year's world champion. This highly touted husker came to Fremont with a gallery of 20 rooters from his home county and then, after offering prayer out there between the wind-swept corn rows, came in no better than eleventh. It never was quite clear whether he was praying for success in the contest or for divine protection against the blizzard, but if it was for the latter it looked as if he were passing along a lot of responsibility for he went into action coatless, bareheaded, barehanded and bare armed.

The Iowa and Nebraska champions didn't offer any prayers, so far as the spectators could see, but they wore their gloves and caps and kept their sleeves down and didn't do any unnecessary hopping around for the edification of the gallery. They knocked 'em. Let it be said again that Fred Stanek of Iowa and Joe Sudik of Nebraska knocked 'em. They did it with all the finesse and speed one would expect to see exhibited by champions of the cornhusking game.

Doing that, they finished one-two in the contest.

In one hour and 20 minutes Stanek, a big, rangy, good-natured farmer from Fort Dodge, ripped and tore the natural covering from 28.2 bushels of corn. To those who have husked corn the figure speaks for itself. To those who haven't it is merely suggested that they try sometime to husk a fourth of that amount in 80 minutes.

WITH still more clarity it may be said that this accomplishment in a cornfield "World Series" was a performance comparable to that of hitting three home runs in one game of a baseball world's series. Both the result and the method of achieving it were fully as spectacular. All through the contest the work of the mighty Stanek loomed just as conspicuously as the clouting of Babe Ruth ever did. When the gun signaled the end of the 80 minutes' struggle in which 12 men fought each for himself, the stalwart Iowa husker was nearly three bushels ahead of anybody else.

Sudik covered the most ground and flashed even greater speed at times, but a fast man can make errors in a cornhusking contest just as he can make them in a baseball game. That is what Sudik did. He made a lot of errors by overlooking corn in the field and leaving a few husks on the ears thrown into the wagon. These piled up against his total so that he was credited with only 25.3 bushels at the finish. That won second place, but won it only by a nose. Or, was it by an ear? Anyway, it wasn't much ahead of third and fourth marks of 25.2 and 25.1 which went to Carl Seller of Illinois and Otto Sorenson of Nebraska, both of whom had been only second bests in their respective state contests.

In Sudik's favor it must be admitted, however, that he had a bad "break." That's another way cornhusking can be like baseball. Even in a field which was remarkably uniform on the whole, he had the misfortune to get into a strip of corn a little lighter than the rest. The picking was a little slimmer. It was as if he had gone to bat against Alexander while his opponents were slugging at a second-rater. It undoubtedly helped to cut down his score, for the speed he displayed made him look a good deal more than a tenth of a bushel better than his closest rival for second honors.

BUT it can't very well be said that any of these 12 contestants looked badly except as contestants. They didn't look badly as huskers. Any one of them, performing as he performed in the contest, would make an average husker look amateurish indeed. The average farmer considers himself a whirlwind if he can shuck and crib 50 bushels of corn in a 10-hour day. That is approximately two big, double-sideboard wagon loads. At Stanek's rate he would shuck 168 bushels and have two hours left for shoveling it into the crib. Of course, even such champions as Stanek probably couldn't keep up that rate all day, but they would assemble a very respectable crib of corn. Any one of these 12 huskers, therefore, would make himself a valuable man to have around anybody's farm in this great Middle Western corn belt at this time of year when farmers are wondering how they are going to get their hogs fed through the next snowstorm.

That is a good reason why a champion crowned in this annual cornfield classic ought to merit a place in the sun along with the champions of baseball, channel swimming, golf and pugilism. He has a sound utilitarian value. His prowess is good for something in everyday life. On the contrary, what good are channel swimmers? How many times in the course of a day's work does anybody ever have to swim a channel? Not once in a million years unless commuting between Dover and Calais or simply trying to show off. But a champion cornhusker—that is something every rural household ought to have.

Of course the calling has its disadvantages. A champion husker can't cash in on his reputation like a lot of other champions do. He is not a hero except in the corn field. For obvious reasons he can't do his stuff on the vaudeville stage and it would be unusual if he could attract a box office following by means of his personal beauty. Husking kings as a rule aren't Apollos. The honor and a little prize money are about all he gets out of being champion. Eventually he may look forward to the cutting of a fat World's Series melon but just now there are no melons to cut.

CORNFIELD World's Series are new and no great premium is placed on grandstand seats, which aren't seats at all but merely plenty of room in which to follow the contestants up and down the corn rows. The winner of the recent series got only $100, but if the stake had been a thousand or ten thousand it is unlikely those 12 men would have entered the fray with any more blood in their eyes or made the corn stalks take any more punishment. Neither is it probable that they would have attracted a larger following or stirred more enthusiasm with their frenzied labors.

The widespread and lively interest the event had aroused was apparent the moment one set foot on Nebraska soil at Omaha, and as the journey progressed toward the scene of action, 35 miles away, the evidence of excitement grew steadily. Even taxicab drivers and hotel bellboys in Omaha wanted all the advance "dope." And when the contest was over, newspaper correspondents who sought to wire accounts to their papers from neighboring towns were literally swamped by the local demand for details. Most of them wanted to know especially how Joe Sudik had performed. Nebraskans are patriotic and naturally Sudik was their favorite. Even if he couldn't win they wanted him to beat Elmer Williams, the "praying husker" from Illinois who won last year's title. With that done, any further result was fairly satisfactory.

Insofar as any locality in Nebraska could be ideal on a snowing and blowing day, the setting for this monumental clash was perfect. The field chosen and prepared for the bout was on the farm of Joe Roberts in the Platte River valley five miles east of Fremont and some 35 miles northwest of Omaha. This area is almost in the center of Nebraska's greatest corn growing section. Great open cribs bulging with yellow ears dot the landscape on both sides of the Lincoln Highway all the way from Omaha and for a great distance beyond Fremont. All the way along the road, spectators bound for the big arena got atmospheric touches which imparted the spirit of the event to follow. Farmers could be seen in the fields everywhere hastening to get their morning loads gathered before time for the contest. In one field a woman walked beside a wagon and kept the golden ears beating a tattoo against a high bangboard. It looked as though she might have made a good showing in the contest, but women were discouraged from entering. They were told in advance of the state elimination contests that they might enter but were warned that they would find the going mighty tough. And those who walked in the field behind the competitors that day admitted it would have been.

It was about noon and the blizzard advancing from the west was just beginning to strike when the crowd began to gather at the Roberts farm. The rising wind was driving snow flakes like bullets and even some of those hardy Nebraskans shivered a little in their cowskin coats and high rip-proof galoshes. They wouldn't admit it, though. No, it was a fine day and they didn't know what they would do if they ever had to hit St. Louis again on a day like that one last summer. It was observed, however, that they crowded into the barn (the contest headquarters) and all but sat on those two little oil heaters which were doing their utmost, but not making much impression on the climate. It wasn't long until the barn was filled to overflowing and later comers went for a big tent, near the field, where a War Veterans' organization was serving "hot dogs" and coffee. Pretty soon the tent was full, too, and then there was nothing left but automobiles and the great open spaces, of which, it may be remarked, this illustrious commonwealth has plenty. A good many chose to sit in their cars until the contest started. There was an abundance of these. More than 1900 by actual count had parked in the big pasture around the tent when the afternoon's festivities commenced.

THIS took place around 1 p. m. After donning overalls, adjusting hooks and pegs and holding a conference with the officials on the contest rules, the 12 huskers fared forth to their wagons. The stove warmers then had to quit swapping lies at the barn and follow them to the field. It was a pity, too. They had got going in great form and it is probable that many a classic yarn about climatic rigors was lost then and there. The huskers were provided each with a wagon, a driver, two gleaners to pick up the leavings against him, and a field judge. With this elaborate equipment assigned and distributed, they drove out into the storm and the crowd stood by to cheer their favorites. Joe Sudik, being a native son, got most of the cheering, but Williams, the champion, was a close second. He had brought a lot of rooters along. You could see them everywhere with badges proclaiming that they were from Stark County, Illinois, "the home of the world's champion husker." There was one preacher in the group and he was out there to help William pray when the struggle began.

The seven states represented in the series were Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Indiana and South Dakota. Each of these had two entries with the exception of Indiana and South Dakota which had one each. The entries were those who finished first and second in their respective state contests held earlier in the season. William Fry of Keytesville and Layton Roberts of Brunswick were Missouri's standard bearers. Although Fry is by trade a telephone lineman engaged in his first year of farming and Roberts is only a youth of 18, both are great huskers. They eliminated 62 other good men in the state contest at Keytesville on November 11.

It is true they didn't make much of a showing in the big clash, but there were several reasons for this, one of which was that Stanek of Iowa was a better man than either, and so was Cottroff from the same State. Illinois pinned her hopes on Williams and Seller. She had a lot of confidence in Williams and not much in Seller, but this lad from Oneida was good enough to show the erstwhile champion something about husking corn when they got out here in Nebraska, where the husks are tight. Sudik and Otto Sorenson were the Nebraska entries; Walter Schmidt, State champion, and Bert Hanson represented Minnesota; Henry Maass bore the South Dakota colors and Charles Budd was there to show them how it is done in Indiana.

THE excitement was tense as these young farmers were getting their wagons lined up. The crowd pressed against the gates and got ready for the rush into the field at the sound of the starting gun. Here is the plan the huskers were to follow:

To each man was assigned a "land" of four rows, all standing, the down rows having been gathered when the field was laid out for the contest. The rows were half a mile long. The huskers were to work in one direction for 50 minutes, gathering two rows, and then, at the sound of the gun, were to turn and husk back on the two remaining rows for 30 minutes. All corn produced by the two rows being covered was to be husked whether the stalk was standing or down. The gleaners were to walk behind the contestants with sacks and take all the corn they had missed. At the finish the gleanings were to be weighed and the contestants docked three pounds for every pound of corn he had passed over.

The corn was to be husked cleanly, too. There were additional penalties for husks left on the ears. A hundred pounds of corn was to be measured up from each man's load at the finish, and the stray husks were then to be stripped from this portion and weighed alone. If they weighed more than four ounces—the amount allowed to each husker—the penalty was to be imposed, and the penalty was the deduction of 1 per cent of the load for every ounce of husks in excess of four per 100 pounds. The penalty advanced to 3 per cent if the husks exceeded eight ounces per 100 pounds. Thus, with these rules in effect, the contestant was compelled to husk his corn just as a farmer would demand if he were paying for the job.

It looked like a stampede of buffalo when the starter's gun sounded and the gates were thrown open to the gallery. Fully half of the crowd rushed into the field, everybody seeking his favorite husker and getting up as close as possible behind the wagon, but careful not to knock down any corn of the two rows still standing. Then, after following their favorite for awhile, the spectators scattered out and swapped places to see how the opposition was coming along. Sudik, who, partly on account of his lighter corn, was forging ahead of the others, naturally had the largest following, but Williams was a close second for attention. He was the world's champion, and everybody was curious to see how he did it. And Williams was willing to show them. He made a very spectacular operation of it, ripping the husk open with the peg on his right hand and literally squeezing the ear out with his left. But he was a "peg husker," and that fact alone was enough to beat him. Pegs worked all right on Illinois corn, where the ears were large and the husks loose, but these Nebraska husks are too tight. They require a pair of flying, ripping hooks like those worn by Stanek and Sudik.

STANEK'S exhibition was a sight worth travelling far to see. He worked with the precision of a machine. Timers following with stop watches repeatedly clocked him at 53 ears a minute, and scarcely ever did his pace vary from that figure. His hands flew so fast one could hardly see what he did to an ear of corn, but it appeared that he merely slapped it on each side and threw it, bright and clean, into the wagon. There was no lost motion, no scurrying around, no missed holds. And virtually every ear in his territory found its way into the [wagon]

Symonds, Soldier of Fortune

Unreconstructed Rebel, Fighter for France in 1870, Revolutionist in Latin-America and Texas Ranger—He Dreams by the Fire.

NACOGDOCHES, Texas.

PEACEFUL days have come again to Colonel George Wolsey Symonds, C. S. A., after a long lifetime of soldiering under many flags, riding border as a Texas Ranger and adventuring wherever adventure was to be found. He sits by the fireplace now, with his pipe and his memories, and lives again through stirring scenes of other days, brought back by the friendly flame and the curling smoke.

It is a long, long trail that winds back from the fireside to the beginning. Sixty-six years, not counting the boyhood that ended at the age of 16, for he is 82 now. But not an old man, be sure of that. Still spry and fit to fight if need be, but resigned to sit at the fireside and give the younger men a chance.

He is getting old, he admits that. He was reminded of it when they wouldn't let him enlist in the World War, and that was some time back. It is hard for a man who is only 82 to lose step with marching men, but he is not as others who had had to drop out of the ranks. He still can hear the footfalls of comrades. The mists have not come over his memories. It is as though a magic crystal were incandescent in the flames that leap in the fireplace. The dead past comes back out of the ashes and lives again on the hearth. And when the old man sitting there has gazed his fill, he sighs and turns to the present and tells what he has seen, the stories of a life of high adventure.

THEY begin, as it is fitting that a fighting man's memories should begin, at the outbreak of the Civil War. He was a Kentucky schoolboy then, scant 16 years of age. His loyalty was to the Southland, and he felt himself old enough to fight. So he offered himself to Colonel John Morgan, greatest of cavalry leaders, he still thinks, speaking out of the richness of experience in 12 or 14 wars, and Colonel Morgan, liking the lad's spirit, commissioned him a Third Lieutenant, and after that he was one of "Morgan's men," raiding the Northland's nearest region, the Ohio and Indiana counties that lay beyond the Ohio.

Morgan's men come galloping out from behind the backlog, sending up a shower of sparks, and go charging across the hearth, and among them is young George Symonds, sitting his horse well for a kid, taking a man's part in the day's adventure. There are bricks in the hearth that serve very well for the river counties of Ohio and Indiana. Over these range the raiders, spreading terror and demoralization among the inhabitants, a thorn in the side of the Yankee army, outnumbered 20 to 1 by the enemy, but moving with such rapidity that to be greatly outnumbered does not greatly matter. Maintaining their mobility by fresh mounts, but paying for these and throwing in their jaded horses to boot. Gathering plunder from county seat banks, for the South needs money.

Swift-passing days of gallant exploits and then a day of disaster, there on the hearth. They were to re-cross the river at the foot of Buffington's Island, but the river was up and a crossing there would be hazardous, so they are picking their way along in the fog, looking for a better place to cross. There rides young Symonds at the right of his company. "Look out there, boy, or you'll go over the bank." Too late. Over the bank go horse and rider and the boy's ankle is sprained. Out of the fog at the other side of the fireplace come the Yankees, hordes of them, and there's a skirmish, Morgan's men making a good fight, but, greatly outnumbered, surrounded at last and some of them captured. Young Symonds with the others.

There's a big red-headed Sergeant among the Yankees set to guard the prisoners. He is bending over the boy with the sprained ankle. "This boy's hurt," he says, and calls for a bandage. There's no bandage to be had, so he tears one from his shirt, and the boy is supplied with a rude crutch and goes hobbling along with his captors toward their camp.

THE fog still hangs heavy and, anyway, there's no danger of the injured boy escaping, so the vigilance is not great and presently the boy finds himself wrapped in the fog and nobody right near him, so he drops over the bank and hides there until the column has moved on, his absence unnoted, and swims the river, for swimming is easier than walking, and, besides, there may be friends on the other side.

The girl standing up there at the edge of the bluff, waving a red tablecloth, is singing "Belle Brandon," and that's a sign she's Confed. Like as not it is a signal to some Johnnies hiding out. So he will take a chance. He finds a path and crawls up through the underbrush and comes to the cabin and a woman and a girl are there, the girl who waved the tablecloth and sang "Belle Brandon." The woman looks him over and says: "Why, he's one of our folks," and makes him welcome. Her husband is home on furlough, hiding out from the Yankees, and, sure enough, the tablecloth and the song were signals to him. He comes home and they bid the young cavalryman stay until his ankle is healed, and the other Johnnie makes room for him in the burrow under the floor, where they hide when Yankees come riding by.

"And, sir," says Colonel Symonds, turning from the fireplace, "I was walking along the street in Detroit a few years ago, and I saw a sign, 'Carruthers Bros., Shoes.' I needed a pair of shoe laces, so I went in, and the man who came to wait on me was big and red-headed and I knew him as soon as I set eyes on him. So I says: 'Hello, Sergeant,' and he says: 'Who are you?' And I says: 'I am the lame Rebel that got away from you down in Indiana.'"

The fire has burned low. It is dark there on the hearth. Morgan's raiders are in camp 15 miles from Manchester, Ohio, two to three thousand men. It is a cold night. A drizzling rain. But the Yankees are near and the orders are no fires. The troopers are wrapped in their blankets. Young Symonds is on grand rounds. Here he comes, riding with General Basil Duke.

The riders pause. "I smell smoke," says General Duke. There's a sentry post near. No fire there, but scattered embers tell their tale. It is a case calling plainly for discipline, but General Duke notes that it is a sheltered location. A little warmth would not be amiss. "Build up the fire, boys," he says. They gather the scattered embers. Symonds goes to his saddle pockets for matches. Paper is needed. He finds in one of the pockets a package that he had picked up a few days before in a bank at Ripley. He opens it and finds twenty $1000 unregistered United States bonds. Doubtless they will burn well. He starts to set a match to them. "Better keep them," says General Duke. There is a hollow tree nearby. Into that he thrusts the bonds.

"One day up in Montreal, when the war was over," says Symonds, "General Duke says to me: 'Colonel, have you got nerve enough to go back to Ohio and get those bonds? They would come handy now.'

"'Sure I have,' I said. I found the hollow tree and the bonds were there, a little mildewed, but perfectly negotiable."

Many battles and skirmishes there on the hearth, with the fortunes of war falling to one side and the other, and now the men of the South, their backs to the wall, are fighting a stubborn losing fight, none more stubbornly than the mountain Cherokees of North Carolina and Georgia, under command of Colonel George Symonds.

Now the war is over and the victorious men of the North are marching home and the vanquished men of the South are making such shift as their particular cases call for. In the case of Colonel Symonds, a hasty departure for Mexico, for some question had been raised as to the regularity of his command and the prudent thing was to go away until the hard feelings engendered by the war had subsided.

There was a war going on in Mexico, as usual, and the young American joined, but three days later it ended as abruptly as it had begun and he never found out definitely what it was all about.

From Mexico, by way of California, Oregon and Washington, to Canada, for change of scene, and a stay at Montreal of four months, with other refugees as companions, General Basil Duke among them.

THE bricks of the hearth serve just as well for the map of Europe as for the counties of Ohio and Indiana. Now the armies of France are marching there. With the soldiers of France, in the Foreign Legion, Colonel Symonds, late of the C. S. A., over for a little excitement. Plenty of it, for the Prussians are coming. The walled fireplace is Paris besieged. It falls at last, and out of the chaos comes Captain Symonds of the Foreign Legion with the Cross of the Legion of Honor on his breast.

"I've had a lot of things like that, from first to last," says the old soldier, "but I had no place to keep them, moving about so much and I lost them."

Now death is there in the dead ashes. The yellow fever is raging in the South. It has fastened upon Symonds, soldier of fortune, following the paths of peace for a time. He lies there as one dead, among the dead. The doctors have pronounced him dead. Men are putting together a pine box. Presently they will carry him out to a quickly dug grave. He knows what is going on and hears what they say. A queer notion comes to him. "Wouldn't they jump," he says to himself, "if I sat up and yelled at them. I'll bet they'd be scared damn near to death." The men are driving the nails into his coffin. But he cannot move. A robed nurse comes in. She stands beside him. "The man is not dead," she says.

HONDURAS, South America, the Congo, come and go in the fireglow. A jumble of motley, ill-clad fighters. Fighting under one flag or another, they look much the same. Among them, though, Symonds, the soldier of fortune, fighting for the fun of fighting. He tries to remember how many wars there were, from first to last, in which he played a part, but he cannot. Twelve or fourteen, perhaps. It is difficult to be exact. Didn't miss any intentionally. They didn't need him in the Spanish-American trouble. He wanted the worst kind to get into the World War and tried to enlist, but they turned him down. Said he was too old. That was where they made a mistake. Missed getting a good soldier, for he was plenty young enough and as fit as a fiddle.

Wars are all right in their way, but for a man who likes adventure they scarcely measure up to the Texas Rangers. So, when the old Ranger sits by the fire, it is the Rangers who come most frequently out of the past, riding hard, shooting straight, regulating the border as the border used to be along the Rio Grande.

That blackened furrow where the log had burned to ashes is the Pecos Valley in 1875. A band of Lipans and Tonkawas, hostiles off of the reservation, have passed this way, attacking isolated ranches, murdering the ranchers, driving off their stock. Here comes the men of Company E, Texas Rangers, riding hard, their mounts big American horses, selected for their speed and endurance, gaining on the pony-riding redskins. Riding among them, George Symonds, once described by another Ranger as "the guttiest little cuss that ever straddled a hoss." Riding at his side, Doug Coulson, a curly-haired, blue-eyed, sunny-tempered fellow, tender-hearted as a woman and brave as a lion.

But he is grim now. A nameless dread grips his heart. His father's ranch is down the Pecos, the way the Indians have gone. His father is there, and his stepmother, and his twin sister and his baby half-brother. "Faster," he urges, "faster." And the Rangers spur their mounts to greater speed.

Ranch after ranch is passed. Ashes of burned buildings. Scalped and mutilated bodies. "Faster," urges Doug Coulson, and the Rangers press on down the Pecos.

The second day's sun is setting when they come, at last, to the Coulson ranch. Death and desolation are there. Ashes of burned buildings. Scalped bodies of Doug's father and stepmother and little half-brother. But the body of Doug's twin sister is not there.

"Forward," commands the Captain, "Maybe we can catch these red devils before it's too late." The Rangers leap to their saddles. They are riding madly now, Doug Coulson in the lead.

THE Indians have reached the Rio Grande, at the mouth of the Pecos, and crossed. They will feel safer now, and will not travel so fast. The Rangers do not stop. They go splashing into the chocolate water of the Rio Grande and swim their horses across.

Off there from the river, five miles away, is a motte of hackberries. Doug Coulson has unwillingly fallen back and two of the best trailers of the command have gone on ahead, following the dim trail. They ride warily in among the hackberries. One of them emerges quickly, spurring his horse, galloping back.

The Captain gallops to meet him. They rein in as they meet and the Ranger lurches toward the Captain, not wanting the others to hear. "For God's sake, Captain," he gasps, "keep Doug back—we've found her."

Mrs. Ada Johnson, in whose home the old fighter is spending his peace-days, comes quietly into the room. "Dreaming again?" she asks. There's a look on the old man's face that is not good to see. "I was thinking," he says, "of something that happened down on the Rio Grande in '75. Some day I'll tell you the story."

He told me the tale another day when I came and sat with him beside the magic fireplace, about the fate that befell Doug Coulson's twin sister and the vow of vengeance that Doug Coulson took, and how he kept it as long as he lived. And other Ranger tales. Sitting there and looking into the flames, seeing there the things that he told. Tales, that of Doug Coulson, and the others, worthy of being retold in these pages at another time.

Revinsky Again Escapes From Prison

Diamond Thief, Painter of Religious Scenes and Slayer of Mae Goodwin Is Back on the Road

John Revinsky.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

MEMPHIS, Tenn.

REVINSKY has escaped again. The Russian fox, whose trade is stealing diamonds, and whose avocation is painting altar pieces, has taken to the road. Beneath the world of free laughter, of light, of the cheery stir that comes before Christmas, a shadow is fleeing across the continent. For the third time John Revinsky has become the shadow of a man, groping his way among the other shadows of a half-world for freedom.

Twice before has the precise, scientific machinery of the law materialized from the shadowy underworld the man who killed Mae Goodwin. Twice before have the pictures, the fingerprints, the descriptions of John Revinsky been sent out along the network of searching eyes that exists to watch the nether world of shadows of men and women. Revinsky's third try may be a charm.

Time—perhaps only a long time—will tell. On the second flight, after seven years of freedom, he had thought his appearance so altered as to be unrecognizable, that he was safe, that those peering eyes would never find him; but they did.

All the ingenuity and skill gained through years of experience Revinsky needed to make this last escape. His ability to act a part, his unflinching, unquailing eyes, too, all stood him in good stead in the trial of craft and endurance that placed him outside the walls of the Tennessee State Penitentiary at Nashville, once again the hare in the interminable hunt waged by the foxes of the law.

Here in Memphis they say that there is a new element in this pursuit, a figure from the half-world who seeks revenge for an old grudge, a man whose passion for Mae Goodwin was so great that for 10 years he has nursed in his heart a hatred for the one who killed her. They say that he sold a profitable business to start on the trail that will end for him only on that spot of earth on which the lifeless body of John Revinsky may chance to fall.

The tangled ends of many lives centered about the room in which Mae Goodwin was murdered early on an October morning in 1916, after the last light had been dimmed, the last ribald laugh silenced, in that house where no good woman was ever seen.

It was easy to fasten the guilt on Revinsky, for it is his misfortune to have a thumb missing and a scarred face in his eternal warfare with the world of order and property. The sooty print of a hand, without a thumb, was found near an open window through which the murderer had climbed. He had previously spent much time in the house, posing as an easy spender, learning the whereabouts of Mae Goodwin's diamonds and her money. The girls knew him. He was a marked man.

THE first chase was on. So miserable was Revinsky's luck that it was at an end almost before it had begun. A negro janitor found him in the loft of a church which he tended, because, as it chanced, the bell cord was broken.

Changing trains on the way back to Memphis, he threw snuff in the eyes of the detective who was returning him, and he was off. But a few shots from the gun of the half-blinded officer brought him to a standstill. Revinsky dreaded the return to Memphis; stories had come to him along the underground way about the oath that Mae Goodwin's lover had sworn: Revinsky shall never know freedom again.

On the witness stand he made the most spectacular attempt for liberty in his long career. With a crude pathos that was as moving as it was realistic, he told the jury and crowded courtroom why he had murdered Mae Goodwin. Mae Goodwin, he said, in a voice that had the deep inflections of profoundly felt emotion, had taken his sister from the respectable home he had made for her when they had come to America together and had sold her into bondage. Mae Goodwin, the procuress.

The story startled even the lawyer whom the State had employed to defend the prisoner, for Revinsky had evolved it secretly during long, black nights in the confinement of his cell. Strangely enough, it tallied with certain evidence that had been introduced.

At any rate, the story saved his neck. The jury gave him 20 years on a second-degree murder charge. Twenty years! Revinsky must have laughed at that. A few months later he sawed his way through the roof of the jail in which he was held while an appeal to the Supreme Court was pending. With four other prisoners, he made his way to the ground by means of a hose used in connection with the prison laundry. Once outside, he went it alone.

FOR seven years, Revinsky roamed over Mexico and the countries of Central and South America. For a time he earned his living at Vera Cruz by painting religious pictures. There was something spiritual in his work.

Once in South America he was recognized, he related when he had been recaptured. The glare of the match he held to his cigarette illumined his face.

"You're John Revinsky," a voice said, close to his ear. A hand was upon his shoulder.

"What're you going to do about it?" Revinsky whirled abruptly.

"Nothing. Nothing." Just a familiar shadow passing in the half-world.

There was a most elaborate attempt at disguise. A surgeon in one of the South American cities performed an operation on Revinsky's face. Scar tissue that had formed a livid brand across his right cheek was replaced with normal tissue.

Police photographs of Revinsky, taken at Memphis in 1916, and at Los Angeles in 1924.

A mustache, formal and austere, was grown. He made an artificial thumb from scraps of paper and glue. He always wore gloves.

At Tia Juana he lost almost all the money he had. Whisky bolstered his courage, and his need was great. Venturing to Los Angeles, he attempted a robbery and was caught.

It did not take the men whose business it is to know the identity of every spectre of the underworld long to discover that the burglar who gave the name of Harry Trafole was John Revinsky, wanted in Memphis for murder. An artificial thumb and the faint trace of an old scar played a part.

When there could no longer be any doubt when the fine, twisting, curving lines of the prisoner's fingertips had been compared with photographs on file in Los Angeles, Revinsky defiantly admitted his old crime.

"I can't see why those Memphis folks make such a fuss about a woman like Mae Goodwin," he protested. "If she was bumped off, she was bumped off. One less bad woman in the world."

That was that, so far as he was concerned. The law is less direct in its concept of justice, and it was only a matter of weeks before Revinsky found himself at last, after a game of hide-and-seek that had lasted for seven years, behind the walls of the State Prison at Nashville.

They said his cell was escape-proof. Revinsky must have realized that this was no easy task before him, no simple matter of sawing through the roof as he had done in the old Shelby County Jail at Memphis.

He began his preparations at once. His first task was to learn every possible detail of the plan of the prison. The main structure of the penitentiary having been built 35 to 40 years ago, numerous wings have been added until there are now many ramifications, twistings, turnings. New things, too, have replaced outworn and antedated equipment.

REVINSKY had not been in prison long when he learned of the existence of a heating system no longer used. As a part of this system an unused tunnel, 800 feet in length, extended under the entire structure. This opened into an air chamber, and through it into another shorter passage, and thence into a deserted tower room, in which there was a barred window that looked out on the prison yard.

Next, the prisoner set himself to placate his guards. He did not do this in the method of the ordinary convict, by wheedling and cringing, by snitching, by licking boots. Revinsky set himself a pose, a kind of sturdy independence, a plain honesty that might disarm suspicion.

When the guard who paced the corridor looked at him suspiciously, his eyes did not drop. Not in the least. He returned stare for stare, and Revinsky's gaze is not pleasant.

"His face is like that of only one other criminal that I have ever seen," Judge Tom Marsh, who presided at his trial in Memphis, once said. "If you saw him on a lonely road, you would be frightened. Not because his face is vicious looking, but because of the strange, fierce look in his eyes."

Revinsky made good use of his stare. The guards didn't exactly like him, but, in a sense, they respected him—they didn't like to loiter long before his cell.

After several months of good behavior, it was natural that the Warden should be lenient when Revinsky asked for pen and ink and a few crude colors with which he might try his hand at sketching, lettering and drawing. This was his old trade, he said.

Soon the walls of his cell were covered with sketches. The guards were mildly interested, but for the most part they did not bother him. Many visitors to the prison bought them, paying $8 to $10 apiece for his pictures.

Revinsky was ready at last for the great try for freedom. Behind the wall of his cell, near the floor, he had discovered, ran the unused hot-air tunnel. With infinite caution, he began digging.

Every available tool was used—purloined parts of eating utensils, broken glass, fingers made hard and callcused, and, as well, it is said, one or two actual tools, smuggled into prison to him. The work on the foot-thick steel and concrete wall was concealed behind his bunk and carelessly flung clothing.

FINALLY, the hole was large enough to admit his body. In the dead of night, pillows and blanket puffed out in his bunk to look like a sleeping form, he made an exploratory trip to discover that another wall at the end of the tunnel barred his way to the deserted air chamber. Through long, patient hours, between 1 and 3 in the morning chiefly, a passage was made in this barrier. Months more were required to pierce into the second and shorter tunnel. The last task was to sever the bars of the window in the deserted tower room, concealing the work from passersby on the outside.

On the night of last October 12, just 10 years after he had shot Mae Goodwin to death, everything was in readiness for the flight. An hour, shortly after dusk, made favorable by a change of guards, was chosen for the escape. Fifteen men squirmed their way toward freedom through the tunnel, following each other along the passage, which was just large enough to let the procession pass.

Through the hole in the wall at the end of the tunnel they made their way, into the air chamber, thence into the second passage, finally through the severed bars of the window and, at last—the rain in their faces, the open sky, even though it was the prison yard. A dash, and they had cleared the prison gates before the great alarm bell could be set booming, and the siren warn the whole countryside.

IT WAS a night of beating rain, thunder and flashing lightning. Soon the pursuit was on, the game of hare and hounds, which the law plays with the aid of every scientific weapon that man has devised. Each car that passed along the roads from the prison was stopped; faces were carefully scrutinized under the glow of flashlights; guards were sent out to watch remote, little-used highways; sheriffs in all nearby counties were warned by telephone. The word was passed around that Revinsky was going it alone.

The next day, seven of the prisoners were recaptured; two had lost themselves in the dark mazes beneath the prison, and had been forced to surrender; during the following two or three days two more were retaken.

Revinsky had made his way to freedom. Playing a lone game, using the tricks he had learned through so many years, he had got beyond the cordon of guards that had been thrown out.

"Wanted for murder and escape," the telegraph clicked. "Hair black. Complexion sallow. Eyes gray. Occupation, painter. Left thumb missing. Tattoo of nude woman on left forearm, also anchor tattoo. Light cut scar on right side of mouth, partly concealed by attempt at facial surgery. Two cut scars on top of head. Bullet wound on calf of right leg."

THEN an unassuming man closed out his shop in Memphis. Knowing the shadowy nether world better than police or detectives, he is given an even chance to find the man he has sworn to kill.

"We aren't at liberty to reveal his name," attorneys for this man state. "He played a part in the previous search for Revinsky, and we have reason to believe that he came very close to getting his man just before Revinsky was arrested by the police for burglary. For five years our client's offer of a considerable reward was on record.

"This man's wife divorced him for his affair with Mae Goodwin. He lost his high position. By a strange psychological twist, certain types of men are prone to give more passionate devotion to an unvirtuous woman than to a faithful and respectable wife. Our client has given up virtually everything that life once meant to him because of this woman, the memory of whom is enough to send him on a wild chase like this."

Before these two ancient enemies, the law and his sworn avenger, the shadow of John Revinsky flees. Mexico is probably his goal.

There is a chance to win. Even shadows have friends; and there are loyalties—strange, grotesque loyalties, too—in that world that is not seen by light of sun.

Arkansas Neighbors Still Believe in "Barney"

Courts of Nebraska and Ohio Have Convicted John W. Barnhart of Forgery and He Has Served One Prison Term and is Serving Another, But His Friends Think He is a Victim of Mistaken Identity and Are Standing by Him.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LINCOLN, Nebraska.

N OHIO Sheriff was waiting when the gates of Nebraska's State Penitentiary opened to let John W. Barnhart out. The man's friends down at Forrest City, Arkansas, hadn't figured on that. They thought if "Barney" was free he would be free. They had a job ready and waiting for him. They would have arranged things so Barney could live even had they found it necessary to make up some kind of fund and fake up some sort of job, as an excuse to pay him the money, for they knew it would hurt his pride to live on charity.

His friends down in Forrest City, Arkansas, know John W. Barnhart, former planter and former banker, as "the best man who ever stepped in shoe leather." State Sheriff "Billy" Condit of Nebraska and sheriffs and peace officers in some nine or ten other states believe he is "the most notorious forger on the American continent." When the doors of Nebraska's penitentiary closed behind him the State of Ohio took possession of John W. Barnhart and possession is nine points of the law. He was taken to Canton, Ohio, in custody. On an indictment issued in 1912 he was tried. It took a jury just eight minutes to convict him. Eleven years of ceaseless work by his friends in Arkansas had gone for naught. At the age of 76 John W. Barnhart began a new sentence in the penitentiary—a sentence of from one to 20 years.

From September in 1919 until March of this year his old friends down in Arkansas had worked unceasingly for Barnhart's freedom. He, the foremost citizen of their town, had been convicted of a crime of which they were convinced he was innocent—unless one man can be in two places at one time. When John O'Connor, canny real estate agent and politician of Fremont, Nebraska, was defrauded of $3000 by a forger on January 13, 1910, John W. Barnhart was in Forrest City or at his plantation nearby. That much is attested by five unquestioned witnesses. They are willing to believe what Barnhart said—that he is the victim of a case of mistaken identity. When their testimony in affidavit form was refused by the State of Nebraska they sought to win freedom for their friend by getting him paroled. That effort came to naught. Then they discovered that Judge Frederic W. Button—who had been Prosecuting Attorney when the case was presented to the Dodge County grand jury and who had refused to disqualify himself as trial Judge on that account—had sentenced Barnhart under a law that did not exist at the time of the crime, for Nebraska's indeterminate sentence law was enacted some years later.

So John W. Barnhart was freed—at the age of 76—and tasted freedom for a few minutes for the first time in eleven years, only to be taken into custody again and start anew a prison term.

DISCOURAGED are these good friends in Arkansas. But they are loyal and working. They have reason to believe they can establish an alibi for Barnhart. They are certain he was in Forrest City when the forgery of which he was convicted was committed in Ohio.

In the town of Forrest City you won't find a single man to speak a word against John W. Barnhart. All are his friends. Roughly those friends may be divided into two classes—those who drank and gambled with the former planter and those who did not. A. L. Stevens, who is a leader in the Methodist Church, is even more active in trying to free Barney than Charley Lewis who never objected when the stakes were high at Barney's poker table. County Judge E. H. Rolfe has contributed to the expense incurred in freeing Barnhart just as has S. L. Hodges, Justice of the Peace, who says he drank "right smart of Barney's whisky." All of them admit that John W. Barnhart was a "high roller." Men like Charley Lewis and "Squire" Hodges fight because he was their friend. Men like A. L. Stevens believe injustice has been done by Justice. It is their duty as citizens and men, they say, to correct the error the blind goddess made.

Back in 1906 John W. Barnhart came to Forrest City from St. Louis with liberal bank credits. He met Squire Hodges. They liked each other.

"We were in Tony Vaccaro's," says the Squire, "and he was tellin' what he wanted—a plantation where he could grow cotton and corn and one with some hill land where he could raise stock. Matt Dawson had such a place and I went down with him to see it. Barney liked it and they made the dicker. I think he traded in a saloon he had in St. Louis."

Whether he did is uncertain in the memory of others in Forrest City. It makes little difference. He had been in the saloon business. He had "sporty friends" from St. Louis. He liked to drink and he liked to gamble. He was a "good spender," charitable, progressive. "And square as they make 'em." Everyone in Forrest City tells you that.

IT is a curious fact that a photograph of William H. Hudson, the English naturalist and author, would pass for one of John W. Barnhart, according to his friends.

For a photograph of Hudson was among the papers entrusted to A. L. Stevens by Barnhart—the collection the prisoner had made in prison hours with the hope of convincing Nebraska's parole board that he was not the man who had tricked John O'Connor out of $3000. With them also was a clipping from the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine—the story of that striking case of mistaken identity by which Adolph Beck, a Norwegian mining man, was twice convicted of swindling in the courts of London and had served five years in penal servitude before the arrest of his guilty double, William Thomas, revealed his innocence to the world.

No man ever bore a better reputation for honesty in Forrest City than this man Barnhart, whom police and sheriffs in ten different states accuse of almost two-score clever forgeries by which bankers and traders were swindled out of tens of thousands of dollars.

"He paid his bills on the dot. He was good for any sum. He never quibbled." Perhaps it was that credit standing at home which caused John W. Barnhart to be elected a director of the Planters' Bank and Trust Company.

"If ever," said Jim de Rossit, "a man heeded the Bible's command to let not the right hand know what the left hand doeth, it was Barney.

"What his right hand took in, his left hand gave out in charity. No man gave more. But Barney never paraded his giving. No one knew of it but those he helped. And if a man was hard up he could go to Barney and get a few dollars. A dollar, five, ten, twenty-five, according to the man and his needs. No questions asked, either. Barney was that way."

Barnhart was progressive. He was the first man to bring an automobile to Forrest City. "He brought three," says Squire Hodges. "One of them was a Kissel Kar. Barney never used it. He just had it for me and some of his friends to go fishin' in. He'd furnish the car and the gasoline and the whisky and we'd furnish the time and the fish."

His role of planter and first citizen was a continual joy to Barnhart. On the hill east of town he built his wife a home, with great pillars after the old-time Southern fashion—a mansion fitting for a plantation owner of ante-bellum days. On his plantation, which consisted of 1000 acres, he had upwards of a dozen negro families living. Yet the old Southern tradition was not in his blood. Barnhart was born near Mansfield, Ohio. He was typically a Northern man. He had ventured West in early manhood and was in business in Colorado and later he tended bar—if the biography Sheriff's officers have pieced out may be believed—in Breckenridge, Minnesota. Next came his life in St. Louis. And then Forrest City.

When plantation life, or Forrest City, palled on John Barnhart he took a trip. Usually he returned with money, as his friends remember it. And Squire Hodges thinks the money was deposited in small sums among the various banks at Forrest City. For the Squire has this to say: "It may have been that Barney didn't do right, that he didn't walk straight when he was away from Forrest City. I don't know. I always thought he'd been away on some gambling expedition; that he had some place spotted where the picking was easy. And even if he did trim up those fellows up there, he always picked out loan sharks and bankers. They say there was one fellow looked Barney over and says: 'Well, you're the man all right. You got my money but I'm not kickin'. You got it when my eyes was open.'"

AMONG those who are willing to admit that Barnhart was a forger there has grown up a Robin Hood sort of legend. If he was in fact a swindler, they say, he took from the rich and gave to the poor.

"I don't say Barney ever did those things they charge," said Charley Lewis. "He'd play poker or faro and he'd drink liquor. Even if he took money, he was generous with it to unfortunates.

The home that Barnhart built at Forrest City, Ark.

"They'd never taken Barney away from here if they'd arrested him in Arkansas. First place, the Governor would never have honored a requisition. In the second place, the people of Forrest City wouldn't have let them take him. He was as square as a die in this town. He'd run a bill with me the whole year through, sometimes buying as much as $500 at a time. And the second day of January he'd ask for his bill and pay me on the spot—in cash."

It was Barnhart's habit to carry money in large sums—"a wad running into the thousands," his friends say. So that if they saw money in his pocket when he returned to Forrest City the fact was not necessarily proof that he had gotten it while away from there. And though Squire Hodges and Charley Lewis don't seem unwilling to accept as fact that their friend was a swindler they have no evidence at all. They are simply taking the story of detectives at face value. The worst thing that I could find against John W. Barnhart in Forrest City was the fact that he would not have his photograph taken.

"There was a cock-fight, once at my brother-in-law's," said James Alley, the photographer. "Barnhart was there. I snapped some pictures and he was on the films. I never got to develop them. He asked me for them and threw them in the fire right then."

His friends admit that once he broke jail. That was in Wisconsin, where he served a term in the penitentiary under the name of George Adler. It was the first trouble Barnhart had ever been in, so far as Forrest City knows. His friends had rallied to his aid. While they were working there was a jail delivery. Barnhart was not in the plot, according to his friends, but when he found the cell doors open "he just walked out." That was the story he told and Forrest City believes him. Whether that escape was a confession of guilt or the last resource of an innocent man who wanted freedom, Forrest City does not agree. But whether or not John Barnhart was guilty then, Forrest City is convinced that the State of Nebraska wrongfully took seven years out of his life and that the State of Ohio wrongfully holds him now.

Before you understand their attitude you must know how the swindler operated. That method is described in circulars from all over the North Central United States collected by State Sheriff "Billy" Condit of Nebraska, the man who arrested Barnhart for the O'Connor swindle.

WHETHER he was Barnhart or not the swindler would be dressed as a farmer and would enter town with a pretended purpose to purchase land—usually for a son-in-law, a nephew, or perhaps for himself, a widower with a married daughter who, with her 14-year-old son, would make her home with him upon the farm.

He would visit a bank or banks in some small town. He would pick out some farm he thought was satisfactory, usually one worth between $10,000 and $15,000. He would secure the signature of the owner to an option. He would himself execute a power of attorney for some mythical friend who was to close the deal. He would leave.

It was not difficult to secure a duplicate of the notarial seal attached to the power of attorney. By the time he had it the swindler would already have made out a warranty deed to the farm in question and forged the owner's signature. The notary's signature and seal were attached. Armed with this forged deed the swindler sought his victim.

And the victim was usually a banker or a realtor with money to loan. The swindler explained he needed $3000 for improvements. He had the deed to show his recent purchase of the place. He took his victim over the ground. And he got the money on a mortgage. A year later when interest payments fell due the mortgagee would find his paper worthless. The farm had never changed hands. There had been no sale.

Such an operation, of course, took days and sometimes weeks. It is just because it took so long that Forrest City is convinced John W. Barnhart is innocent of the Nebraska and Ohio crimes at least.

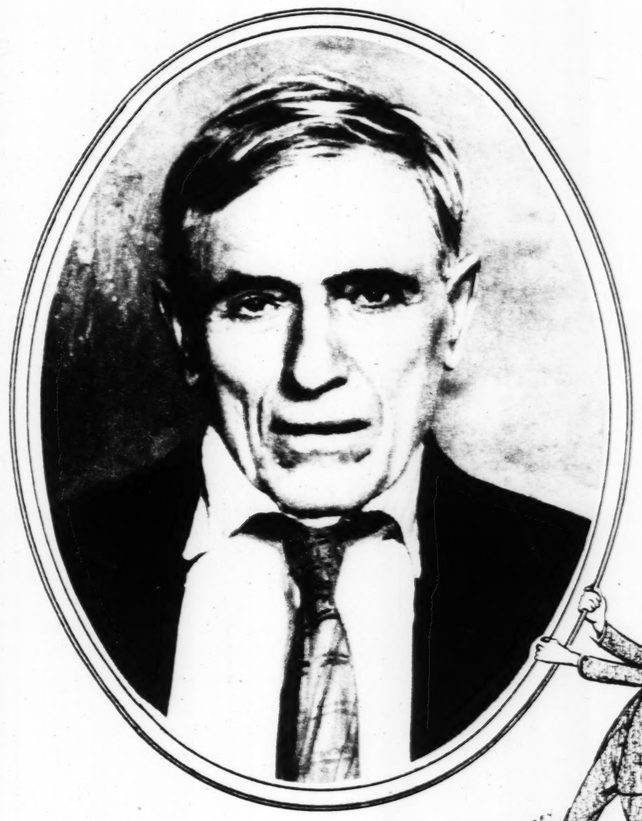
Certainly the man who under the name of Henry G. Fisher swindled John O'Connor was in Fremont, Nebraska, January 13, 1910, and again on January 23 that year. At that time, his Forrest City friends aver, it would have been physically impossible for John W. Barnhart to have been in Nebraska.

IN the first place his plantation foreman, George Schmidt, was ill during that month and Barnhart took his place in directing the plantation's affairs. Schmidt has sworn to this, so has Dr. W. S. Bradford, physician of Haynes, Arkansas, who attended Schmidt, and so have Schmidt's wife, Mrs. Lena Schmidt, and F. C. Danehower, owner of a neighboring plantation and of a cotton gin which Barnhart rented. These agree that at no time in January of that year was Barnhart absent from his plantation two days.

The man had methods of doing business peculiar to himself. When he was absent from Forrest City his manager could make purchases up to $25 or $35 in value, but that was all. Just enough to tide the commissary on the plantation over a crisis. Any larger purchase was made by Barnhart personally, and in person. And no one ever paid his bills for him. He appeared in person and paid in cash.

Consequently when A. L. Stevens, at that time vice president of the Forrest City Grocery Company, produces a record which shows purchases of $79.56, $92.68 and $103.15 on January 3, 15 and 27, it means that John W. Barnhart visited the grocery company's warehouse on those days, and when the books show credits on January 11 and 15 it means he was in the offices those days. Stevens has sworn to that; sworn absolutely that the man was there. He could not possibly, then, have been in Nebraska on January 13.

Similarly, it is charged that Barnhart was in Ohio five weeks at the time of the swindle of which he was convicted and for which he is now serving sentence. That was in September and October, 1912. Yet Fred Shreve, who was his plantation manager at this time, remembers that Barnhart was at the plantation at the time, fixing the fact and the date by the arrival of certain machinery. The books of the Forrest City Grocery Company show him to have been in Forrest City on September 9, 17 and 28. Stevens says, and the records of the Planters' Bank disclose his presence in Forrest City during the time of the Ohio swindle, according to Stevens, who has looked them up.



J. W. Barnhart when he was in Nebraska prison.

Stevens' integrity is unimpeachable. That is true of the others who have made affidavits. There was a tendency in Nebraska to belittle these sworn statements as though the alibi had been "faked." Forrest City answered as one man. Upwards of 40 statements and affidavits were submitted attesting to the honor and truthfulness of those first affiants. Among the signers were Governor Tom J. Terral of Arkansas; Herbert R. Wilson, chairman of the Arkansas Highway Commission; Judge E. D. Robinson of the Circuit Court; C. E. Mingling, Prosecuting Attorney; A. L. Hutchins, Chancellor of the Chancery Court; J. F. McDougal, Sheriff; E. A. Rolfe, County Judge; James Scott, Mayor of Forrest City, and 37 lawyers, bankers and merchants and planters of Forrest City and vicinity.

What is the truth about John W. Barnhart? State Sheriff Condit out in Nebraska has pieced out a record to show that the man victimized a man at Hart, Michigan, of $600, thirty years ago, and in 1898 by the forged deed trick secured $8970 in Kansas City. The total of the frauds he charges against Barnhart reaches $136,000. It is averred that Barnhart was the John H. Klein who served a penitentiary sentence in Missouri for the Kansas City swindle; that he has been known also as G. M. Beck, John H. Cline, George Keeler, John Hoover, John H. Hoover, William Hoover, John H. Snyder, George W. Snyder, John L. Butler, George L. Butler, J. L. Miller, Charles W. Neumann, George W. Walters, H. G. Fisher, Georg Fesler, William Sadler, George Adler, George Fisher, Samuel T. Hatcher, Henry Snyder, Franklin Miller, Henry Becker and Samuel Kramer. He is said to have operated the swindle at Clinton, Muscatine, Council Bluffs, Sioux City, Dubuque and Olwein, Iowa; Fond du Lac, Delevan, Racine, Portage and Baraboo, Wisconsin; Minneapolis and Winona, Minnesota; Champaign, Rockport, Quincy, Princeton, Waukegan and Danville, Illinois; Marshall, Ionia, Jackson and Kalamazoo and Ann Arbor, Michigan; Tiffin, Wooster, Chillicothe, Kenton, Bowling Green and Canton, Ohio; Reading and Meadville, Pennsylvania; Macon and Nevada, Missouri; Anderson, Indiana, and Fremont, Nebraska.

On the other hand is the testimony of those who knew him best: "A square man if there ever was one." And the firm conviction of these neighbors that it was physically impossible for Barnhart to have committed the Nebraska and the Ohio crimes.

NINE years had passed between the time John O'Connor paid out $3000 to Henry G. Fisher, at Fremont, Nebraska, and the day he identified Barnhart as Fisher upon the stand. He had once before identified another as the man who swindled him. "The prosecution is political and mercenary and they have not only robbed the defendant, John W. Barnhart, by throwing him into bankruptcy and taking from him his life's savings, but they persecute him further for the sins of the alleged Henry G. Fisher by continued prosecution and confinement in prison," declared J. E. Daley, attorney for Barnhart in his brief on appeal in the Nebraska Supreme Court. Of that partisan statement this much at least is true. Barnhart was rich when arrested in Wisconsin. Those who claimed to have been his victims swooped down upon the Arkansas plantation and his estate there. That has been partitioned among them long since. The mansion on the hill, which his wife—now dead—then owned, was tied up by litigation when she sought to sell it to get means for livelihood. Out of the fortune he had there is not one cent for John W. Barnhart nor for the orphan daughter, once Mary Joe, that the Barnharts 20 years ago adopted.

All is gone but the hope of freedom. Barnhart at 76 fights on for that. His friends fight, too. Justice they feel was blind and picked him for a victim. "For even if all the United States was agreed," says A. L. Stevens, "how could he have so many friends at home if Barney had been crooked?"

HER SOCIAL SECRETARY

Wealthy Mrs. Manfred, With a Handsome, Unmarried Son, Was Extremely Annoyed Over What Happened. Of Course, It May Have Been a Mistake.

By Alice Duer Miller
and Franklin P. Adams

"Look at her!" cried Mrs. Manfred. "Can you doubt now that I was right?" The girl looked up at him solemnly, silently, like an animal in pain.

WHEN Mrs. Manfred read in the morning paper that Mrs. Howland Kilpatrick Vaughan of Baltimore and Miss Adelaide Vaughan were spending the winter at the Madlex Hotel, her eyes lit up with joy.

Mrs. Manfred was sitting up in bed in a room recently done over for her by a decorator whose good taste was equaled only by his self-confidence—a symphony in pink, blues, lilacs and grays. The bed itself was a beautiful old French bed and should have contained a pearly blonde, instead of a middle-aged lady in a fur-trimmed bed-jacket, reading the paper through tortoise-shell spectacles.

A tap came at her door and her son, Raymund, entered—his dark serge and white collar looking somehow severe and unsuitable to this eighteenth century delicacy of decoration, although, as a matter of fact, his smooth, fine face would not have done badly in brocades and ruffles.

His mother snatched off her spectacles to get a good look at him. She loved her daughters with a sensible, slightly contemptuous, maternal affection. All three, like the female relatives of Captain Reese, R. N., were married to peers of various degrees in England and Italy. She understood them thoroughly—competent, rather grasping young women. Much of her relation to them consisted in the struggle on their part to obtain from her, the custodian of her dead husband's immense fortune, more of that fortune than was quite their due. She respected their energy, and sometimes yielded to them. There was no magic in her relations to them.

But her son she could not understand at all, and she expended more finesse in trying to make him take what she thought he ought to have than in keeping from the girls what they demanded. He was a psychologist. Instinct was the subject of his studies. He had spent three months on a lonely Caribbean island, studying the habits of sea gulls. And now she saw by various signs that he was wearying to be off to Africa, where a certain ant offered rich information. She counted greedily the days he stayed at home with her. She was powerless to keep him, but she knew one thing that would: marriage—marriage to a soft, luxurious creature, who would be a poor traveler and would take no interest in insects, however instinctive.

The summer before, at Bar Harbor, she had found the girl—Miss Vaughan of Baltimore, a lovely, languid being, whose family fortune had been lost because of the conviction, held unalterably through five generations, that the aristocratic luxuries of the world belonged by right to the Kilpatrick Vaughans, no matter what their bank accounts might happen to be. Nor was the lovely Adelaide any exception to this rule.

MRS. MANFRED felt, no doubt, that Adelaide, loved Raymund—as any girl would, of course—but she knew also that Adelaide had been brought up to believe that a husband of great wealth was her inescapable destiny.

Raymund had been interested in the girl during his long summer holiday. In the early winter he had gone to Baltimore for a week-end, which he reported as having been very gay and delightful. He talked a great deal about the friendly spirit of Baltimore, the excellent cooking, the available country-side, but very little about the lovely Adelaide.

Mrs. Manfred saw that something must be done, and now she was delighted to observe that Mrs. Vaughan was doing it.

"Good morning, dearest," she said. "I ordered the car to take you across to the museum." The first heavy snowstorm of the winter was in progress.

Raymund thanked her warmly, but she had no conviction that he would really use the car. It would be just like him to send it away and walk—walk in all that snow, and the wind blowing. The idea was intolerable to her.

"Promise, dear," she said, "that you'll take the car."

He laughed at her affectionately. "I'll promise that if I walk it won't do me any serious injury."

He seemed in a hurry to be off, and his mother wasted no more time.

"I see that Adelaide and her mother are in town," she observed, for so do New Yorkers refer habitually to a visit from the citizens of any other metropolis.

"Good heavens!" cried Raymond, and hastened to explain his tone: "Adelaide wrote me that she'd be here about this time, and I forgot all about it."

A WEAKER woman that Mrs. Manfred would have accepted defeat, at this, but she said: "Shall I ask them to dine, dear? Or perhaps you would like to take Adelaide to the theater some evening—just you and she?"

"She'd much rather have a lot of people to meet her," he answered quickly. "You should have seen what they did in the way of entertaining for me in Baltimore. Get Miss Bing to telephone, will you, mother, and——"

"I don't have Miss Bing any more," said Mrs. Manfred. "She was really too doddering—very good on the social side, but for my business affairs I needed another type. I have a very sweet young college girl now, who comes every morning and puts all the bills and telephones through in half the time Miss Bing took. I must own that for invitations and personal letters she does a little lack that courteous touch that . . . Hush, that's probably she," Mrs. Manfred added, as a knock, sharp though light, came at the door. "Come in," she said, and her new secretary entered. "Good morning, Miss Lance. This is Miss Lance, Raymund, my new secretary."

Miss Lance had taken off her outdoor things, but there was still snow on her amber-colored hair, and though she wore a neat, fawn-colored coat and skirt and carried a stout fountain pen, like a dagger, in her right hand, she looked as if she should have been trundling a hoop among other babies, or dancing on a moonlit hill, with stars and with flowers in her hair.

RAYMUND had seen Miss Bing go to and fro in all weathers without protest, but the idea of this slim, childlike creature breasting such a storm to write his mother's letter now struck him as horrible—showing that it is not necessary to go to islands in the Caribbean to study instinct. He said:

"What a day for you to be out!"

Miss Lance laughed gayly. "It's no treat for me to stay at home," she answered. "The roof's been leaking so all night that my sister slept under an umbrella."

"You should notify your landlord at once," said Mrs. Manfred, who had to perfection the art of using any misfortune, with which she did not sympathize, as the text of a severe criticism of the sufferer. "I must say, my sympathy is all with the landlords—tenants never notify them of these catastrophies until just the moment when"—— She paused in her eloquent defense of an abused class, observing that the eyes of her son and her secretary, which had been moving about casually, had now met and seemed disinclined to separate again. "Oh, Miss Lance," she said, "I left some correspondence on my desk."

Miss Lance moved like a sleepwalker to the desk, from which the crack and rustle of opening envelopes was presently heard, and Mrs. Manfred went on: "I might ask her to a big dinner, too."

"Who?" asked her son.

"Adelaide."

"Of course—of course. Do whatever you think best, mother. I leave it entirely to you." He dismissed the subject, and yet seemed to have lost his sense of early morning hurry. He stood staring at his mother, like a person listening for something, and then slowly his head turned toward the desk, and the rattling of paper died quietly away.

A few days before, Mrs. Manfred had seen a device in a motion picture theater which stopped the motion of the actors in the middle of a dive, or a jump—suspended them in midair. There was something vaguely reminiscent of this in the trancelike stillness of her son and her secretary.

"WELL, don't wait, dear," she said. "I'll have Miss Lance telephone and let you know."

Raymund kissed her, bowed to Miss Lance and left the room.

"Miss Lance." Like a good scholar, with her slate and pencil, Miss Lance approached the bed with book and pen. "Telephone the Madlex Hotel and say I wish to speak to Mrs. or Miss Vaughan."

Standing beside the bed, Miss Lance did this, and when a soft, Southern voice drawled back: "This is Miss Vaughan," she gave the instrument to her employer who, balancing it upon the front of her person with the dexterity of long practice, began as follows: "My dear, how glad I am to hear that sweet voice of yours again. Yes, Raymund just told me that you were here and asked me to call you up at once and make you say you would come here and dine. . . . Oh, well, I know how busy you are. . . . Of course, his idea was to run off with you alone to the theater some night". . . . It did not occur to Mrs. Manfred that she was lying—not even when, looking up, she caught the blue eyes of her secretary staring at her in wonder. . . . "But I told him you would much rather meet some amusing people at dinner. . . . Oh, really, would you? How pleased Ray will be to hear that." She herself was so much pleased that she beamed—beamed, looking up at Miss Lance, who simply averted her eyes. "Now give me two alternate evenings when you are free—the nineteenth and the twentieth. I'll call you back as soon as I get hold of Raymund. . . . Oh you're going out now? Very well, I'll have my secretary drop you a little note and leave it at the hotel." A few more cordial nothings, and Mrs. Manfred hung up the receiver.

AS SOON as it seemed probable her son had reached the museum, she gave orders that he was to be called. Standing beside the bed, Miss Lance said: "Mr. Manfred, please. Mrs. Manfred's secretary speaking." A pause, and then Mrs. Manfred heard quite plainly her son's voice: "Is that you? Isn't that queer, for I was just thinking" . . . Mrs. Manfred reached up and took the instrument, though for a second it seemed to her that her secretary attempted to retain it.

Once more balancing the telephone upon herself, Mrs. Manfred said: "Oh, Ray, dear, I got hold of Adelaide for you. And she's free either the nineteenth or the twentieth. Have you any choice? Oh, I see, a lecture on the twentieth. Then I'll make it the nineteenth. What do you mean, you suppose so?" Again she hung up the receiver. Certainly she did not understand her son.

She directed Miss Lance to write a letter to Miss Adelaide Kilpatrick Vaughan, at the Madlex Hotel, saying that she expected her to dine on the nineteenth at 20 minutes past 7 sharp, as Raymund was taking her to the play. "And give it to the chauffeur and see that he leaves it at once," she added. Then she went back to reading the paper, and did not notice when Miss Lance left the room. She had not brought the letter for signature.

Mrs. Manfred was a little annoyed. "I told you," she said, "that I always want to sign letters of a social character. I told you that, Miss Lance."

Miss Lance apologized. She said she thought this was just a memorandum. Anyhow, it had gone now.

The intervening days passed uneventfully. Every morning Raymund came in to see his mother and lingered until the arrival of Miss Lance, and then lingered a little longer. One day he asked if Miss Lance could find time to classify some of his notes on the behavior of seagulls. It wouldn't take very long, he said, particularly if she was familiar with psychological terminology. Miss Lance, it appeared, had taken a senior course in psychology.

"With Bollinger?" cried Raymund.

Yes, with that great man. They talked about him until Mrs. Manfred interrupted, pointing out to her son that he was wasting her time and Miss Lance's, because she could not possibly spare the girl to do his work. "Get a secretary of your own," she said, with an effort to be playful.

ON THE evening of the nineteenth, Mrs. Manfred, in her best gray tea gown, with no jewels to speak of but the string of priceless pearls (which she made no secret she intended to leave to Raymund's wife, because she could not choose among her three daughters), sat by the fire and attempted to put Raymund into a good humor. For he was distinctly cross. In the first place, he had supposed that they were having a dinner for Miss Vaughan and instead of that he found he was to take her alone to the theater; and when he exclaimed at this his mother reminded him that he had said he would leave it all to her to arrange, and, of course, he had said so. This was irritating. Then he had been obliged to dress in a hurry for an early dinner, and he had already seen the play for which his mother had bought seats, and he had found it dull. He stood on the hearthrug, looking very blank and silent, and made only two observations—that the house was too hot and the scent of the lilies-of-the-valley, which stood in a turquoise vase on the table, too overpowering for his taste.

At 7:30 he looked at his watch and observed that Adelaide was late.

"These Southern beauties," said his mother, attempting to be gay. Then, seeing by his expression that she had made a mistake, she added more seriously, "But she'll be here."

"Oh, yes, she'll be here," he answered. The words were the same, but there was a difference in the tone. There was no divine anxiety in his tone.

AT 7:45 Mrs. Manfred began to be really anxious and, ringing, told the butler to call up the hotel and see if Miss Vaughan had started. The man came back with the word that Miss Vaughan had gone out half an hour before. As the hotel was not five blocks away, Mrs. Manfred's anxiety increased. She decided to call up Mrs. Vaughan, and left the room to do so.

When she came back, she was in a towering rage, and her brown eyes snapped fire.

"Well, what do you think?" she said.

"I suppose Adelaide's got her dates mixed," said Raymund. "She's rather muddle-headed, you know."

"Nothing of the kind," answered his mother. "That idiotic girl. I've finished with her."

"With Adelaide?" said Raymund mildly.

"Of course not—poor Adelaide. It's not her fault. It's that incompetent, useless little secretary of mine. She put the wrong date in the letters. Mrs. Vaughan read it to me over the telephone. She wrote the twentieth. I've sent for her to come here. We might as well dine, I suppose. And now you'll have to give up that lecture for tomorrow night."

"I certainly shan't do that," said Raymund.

"My dear boy, you can't insult Adelaide because my secretary is a careless, incompetent"——

"Anyone may make a mistake," said Raymund, and suddenly found himself able to remember every mistake of a similar nature which his mother had made, a slow rehearsal of which did not tend to make dinner any pleasanter. "I remember that time you cabled from abroad and made a mistake in the number of your own house. And the time you sent me that check at school and forgot to sign it, and the day"——

His mother interrupted to say: "A secretary is hired not to make mistakes, and, besides, I'm not at all sure she did not do it on purpose."

HER son looked at her. "What do you mean?" he asked. For the first time that evening, she had his full, concentrated attention. She wished now that she had not spoken. She did not care to share with him the theory that had more than once flashed into her mind. "Oh, some people like to make mischief, for the fun of it," she answered—rather weakly, as she herself felt.

Her son, usually so gentle and admiring of her, sprang at this. "I don't think you ought to say a thing like that of a girl earning her living. In the first place, it's obviously absurd and unlikely . . ." He fell into deep thought, and, emerging, asked: "What made you think it was deliberate?"

His mother explained to him how this note, out of all her voluminous correspondence, was the only one that had not been brought to her for signature. Again she had his full attention; but he did not answer, and they went back to the drawing room.

Miss Lance was sitting there, sitting on the edge of her chair, with her small hands clasped in her lap, when they entered. She rose and clasped her hands behind her back, and, with her head bowed and her eyes raised, stood like a child who is thoroughly conscious of having been naughty, but means to behave as innocently as possible.

Mrs. Manfred sank into a chair and said: "Miss Lance, I have sent for you to tell you that the one use of a secretary is to be accurate. If she is inaccurate, she is incredibly annoying, and I do not intend to complicate my life with incompetent assistants. I shall give you a check for your services—so-called—to date, and you need not come tomorrow. Let me offer you a piece of advice: Do not attempt to take another position of the same kind, for if anyone asks me, I shall be obliged to say you are the least successful of all the secretaries I have ever had, and that is saying a good deal, I assure you."

"Mother," said Raymund.

"Please do not interrupt me, my son," said Mrs. Manfred.

"I was only going to say," said Raymund, "that I'm afraid Miss Lance and I will miss the whole first act if we don't get started pretty soon."

"You and Miss Lance?" cried his mother very shrilly. She had never thought of that.

"WHY, yes," said Raymund. "There is no use in wasting these two tickets which you were so kind as to secure for me." He turned to Miss Lance. "You will go to the theater with me, won't you?"

"Yes," said Miss Lance.

"Raymund!" cried his mother. "How can you!—that girl!—after what I told you about her!"

"What did she tell you about me?" asked the girl.

Raymund was perfectly calm. "My mother is of the opinion that you made this mistake"——

His mother screamed his name, but failed to stop him.

"My mother," he went on, "is of the opinion that you made this mistake on purpose, though with what object she has not yet explained."

There was a silence, during which Miss Lance blushed—not a faint, rosy, imperceptible flush, but a deep, crimson, unmistakable, accusing flood of color.

"Look at her!" cried Mrs. Manfred. "Can you doubt now that I was right?"

The girl looked up at him solemnly, silently, like an animal in pain.

"Will you still take her to the theater?" asked his mother, mistakenly supposing that she had triumphed.

"Yes, indeed," answered Raymund. "This interests me very much. First as a psychologist," he opened the door and the girl moved out into the hall, but before the door shut behind them Mrs. Manfred heard the end of his sentence, "but even more as a man."

Two days later, the morning papers carried the following item:

"Mrs. Howland Kilpatrick Vaughan and Miss Adelaide Vaughan, who have been spending 10 days at the Madlex Hotel, have returned to Baltimore for the winter."

Mrs. Dumbly

Christmas Gifts.
She's Hard at Work.
But What Are They For?
Criticisms by Stupid Artie.

THE discussion began yesterday when Artie discovered that I was sewing ribbon roses in his old suspenders.

"I thought I'd thrown those away three years ago," he began.

"Of course you did," I said. "That's the reason I'm using them. Aren't they sweet? I've shirred silk over them—I got it from pieces I cut off the bottom of one of my last year's dresses—and I've hung on them a clothes brush, a bottle of peroxide, a jar of powder, a case of needles, a stove lifter, a bottle of arnica, a ball of darning cotton, a box of matches, a telephone list and a toothbrush. And then you see, I've decorated them with these little pink rosebuds. Aren't they clever?"

"Yes," he admitted. "Clever disguise. I'll bite; what is it?"

"Why, it's a Christmas present," I explained. "You know, I make all my Christmas presents. I begin weeks before Christmas and I work day and night. Why, you know"——

"Yes, but what do you call that thing," he interrupted. "What's it for? What's its name?"

"Why, I just told you, it's a Christmas present," I explained patiently, although I was amazed at his stupidity. "And isn't this darling? It's a mousetrap holder. I made it out of the toe of your old bedroom slipper, painted to look like red lacquer and trimmed with Florida moss. Isn't it adorable? I'm going to put one of my decorated mousetraps on it."

"Decorated mousetraps," he repeated after me, as though he were in a daze.

"Why, of course," I said. "I didn't make these, but they're handpainted. I bought three dozen of them. I'm going to have them all wrapped up with a card saying 'Merry Christmas and all my love' written on them, but no names, so that they'll be ready if I should receive presents from persons whom I hadn't expected to remember me."

"How much do you pay for them?" he asked sourly.

And when I told him a dollar apiece he burst forth into a tirade, insisting that mouse traps could be bought in any store for 25 cents apiece—and that they'd catch mice just as well as the decorated ones would.

"BUT that isn't the point," I said. "The fact that these are decorated makes them Christmas presents. You can decorate anything and put it in a little fancy box and it's a Christmas present. I get can openers and carpet tacks and kitchen knives every Christmas, but they are always in these dear little boxes with sweet little verses on them. Now, each of these mousetraps has a tiny piece of cheese on it, with a sprig of holly in it and this little verse.

"I hope this cunning little trap
"Will bring you Christmas cheer
"And your house won't be so full of mice
"Throughout the coming year.

"But the meter in that verse is wrong," he objected.

"Christmas-card verses aren't supposed to have any meter," I told him. "And speaking of meters, I've made a cunning gas meter cover—it's a little colonial lady with silk skirts that cover the meter completely"——

"I know," he interrupted. "Like those things you put over telephones. I never can find the telephone in our house unless central rings it for at least half an hour, and then it's as likely as not to to be in a basket of roses, or a parchment box with a dozen silk fastenings. Why do you have to hide the telephone like a family skeleton. I know it's a badly behaved thing and always interrupts when you don't want it—but then"——

"Very well," I said, indignantly, "if you don't appreciate the things I've done for my friends, let me show you the presents I've evolved for you to give your men friends. Now look at these."

"Yes," he answered, foolishly.

"NOW, these are little cases for men to put pins in under the lapels of their coats. I made them out of cigarette papers folded and stitched together with baby ribbon. You fasten them onto the lapel with these cunning little gold safety pins, or you can tie them with a baby ribbon through the buttonhole. And I've made crocheted cigarette holders."

"Good Lord," he interrupted.

"Artie Dumbly," I said, angrily, "I'm only going to show you one more thing. Here is a silk embroidered bag to cover the mailbox with—decorated with hand-painted storks."

"And who," he asked, "is to receive this delightful, dainty, clever, darling, adorable thing?"

"Your bachelor friend, George," I replied.

"The mail boxes in the apartment house where George lives are built into the wall—so he couldn't possibly use that thing," he replied, in a tone that had a curious note of triumph in it.

"What difference does that make?" I asked. "They can have new mail boxes put in the apartment, can't they? And, anyway, I don't expect him to use it. It's a Christmas present, isn't it?"

Really, men are so stupid, sometimes.

M. A. Carleton, Professor of Botany and Roamer of the World, Brought New Varieties of Grain From Russia and Rescued the Farmers, Who Had Been Through Season After Season of Failure.

WICHITA, Kansas.

MARK CARLETON, the man who remade the wheat crop of the West and died forgotten in a foreign land, started out from Wichita on the career that put millions of dollars into the pockets of the wheat raisers of the nation. Between 1887 and 1899 he was professor of botany at Garfield University, now Friends' University, of Wichita. Congressman Will Ayres was one of Carleton's pupils and is one of the few men here who remember him. But his beginnings here are almost as obscure as his memory among the wheat raisers whom he rescued from season after season of failure with the introduction of Kubanka durum wheat and the hard red Kharkoff winter variety.

Paul de Kruif, one of the country's foremost bluraphers and scieqtific research writers, says of him:

"There is no question that Mark Carleton, who died most miserably forgotten last year in a pesthole in Peru, put uncounted millions of dollars into the pockets of American farmers, millers and grain men. There is no doubt that this same Carleton, who was kicked out of the Government service in 1918, discovered the magnificent Kubanka durum wheat growing in its ancient home on the Turgai steppe and brought it to a new home on more than 4,000,000 acres of land in the Northwest.

"It cannot be denied that Mark Carleton—who at the same time lost one of his children and his home, to say nothing of his teeth as well as his job—was the man who by his sharp-eyed explorations brought the tough red winter Kharkoff wheat out of windy Starobielsk in Russia onto almost 20,000,000 acres of the dark earth of our great plains of the West.

"Now, the strangest part of his grand and melancholy story is this. That the very qualities which made him one of the most valuable and notable of all Americans also brought him to his ultimate disaster. For he was a visionary. That was what caused him to revolutionize our Western wheat industry. He was a dreamer. That was what brought him to his end."

BORN in Jerusalem, Ohio, he attended a country school there. In 1873, when he was 10 years old, his family moved to Cloud County, Kansas. That year the black stem rust rode the wind and destroyed thousands of acres of the grain men depended upon to furnish them a living. The experience of that year probably was the first thing to focus Carleton's mind on the subject of wheat. In 1887, at the age of 21, he was graduated from the Kansas State Agricultural College and accepted a position in Garfield University here, to teach botany.

Carleton was not a man to attract attention or to make many friends. Nobody connected with Friends' University, which succeeded Garfield, remembers Carleton, and records now available do not carry his name as a member of the faculty.

Carleton was not satisfied with his work here. The narrow confines of a room were not for him. His laboratory was the wide world, and he went back to Manhattan, where he was made assistant botanist at the experiment station. When he was 27, he made the discovery that black stem rust varied in different plants. Everyone believed it could jump from oats to rye and from rye to wheat. But Carleton's endless, tireless and practical experiments disproved this theory.

He went to Washington in 1894 as a cerealist to supervise the Government's work on wheat. There he continued experiments in the hope of finding a wheat that would defy black rust and other ailments. He sent to the ends of the earth and got samples of the best varieties of all countries. In the Maryland climate they thrived, although inoculated with disease. Unsatisfied, he brought the seed of all varieties to the Stimmel farm near Salina. That year, a dry, cold winter came and blew it all out of the ground. Carleton was pleased, if anything, for it proved his point that a tougher wheat must be found.

IN ROAMING about the wheat country, as was his wont, he encountered the Russian Mennonite farmers of Kansas. The bitter years of the 1890's had driven more than a quarter of a million people out of Kansas. But the Mennonites were not driven out. They raised from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre while ruin raged about them. Turkey wheat, it was called. It came from Turgai. Their fathers had brought the seed when they came across the ocean. Each pioneer carried a bushel of seed wheat besides his baggage.

Carleton became obsessed with the notion of going to Russia to seek the ideal wheat for his own country. He bulldozed Washington officials and when only the excuse remained that he could not speak the Russian language, he crammed away at the language and finally talked his superiors into sending him. Diligently, he roamed the black lands of Russia in the summer, autumn and winter of 1898. He came to the Turgai steppe in Siberia, and there he found Kubanka and knew his search was over.

He bought up large quantities of seed and shipped it to America. He came home and became the prophet of the wheat of the plains, preaching constantly to farmers to raise the hard wheat he had sent them, to millers to build mills to grind it, to bakers to bake the better bread the Kubanka would produce. It was a hard job. They didn't take the protein content business so seriously in those days—the protein content that has brought Kansas wheat into demand.

IN 1909 Carleton went back to Russia and returned with the Kharkoff wheat. His big year was in 1904. Farmers were planting two acres of Fife and Bluestem to one of Kubanka, for the grain men were offering low money for it.

Then came the black rust. It was amazing. Through Nebraska and the Dakotas, from 50 to 60 per cent of the soft wheat went under and Kubanka was hardly scratched. In five years durum wheat yields jumped from next to nothing to 20,000,000 bushels. Kharkoff caught on first in Kansas and spread like wildfire.

In 1897, Carleton married Amanda Faught of Kingman, Kansas, daughter of Robert Faught, once Sheriff of Kingman County. His personal troubles began when one of their four children was stricken with infantile paralysis. The climax came in 1917, when he found himself deeply in debt and with no way to turn for money. Charges that he was neglecting his work were preferred against him, but were dropped.

Carleton borrowed $4000 from a rich man of the opposite political party, and that was his undoing. He was given a 90-day furlough, during which time, he was told, he would have to pay back the loan or give up his official position.

The daughter died, the mortgage on his home was foreclosed. To save burial expenses, it was necessary to have his daughter's body cremated. Carleton fainted during the ceremony. He was afflicted with rheumatism. De Kruif remarks in sarcastic vein:

"But here is a bright spot! He was relieved of that rheumatism by having 17 of his teeth pulled."

From one forlorn hope to another Carleton wandered about the world, principally in South American countries. He was lonely. His family was in the North. He wound up in Paita, in Peru.

KANSAS prides itself on its wonderful, hard wheat. The State's wealth was made possible by Carleton. In Wichita, in the heart of the wheat belt, few remember him. Congressman Ayres is among the few, but Ayres had contact with him in Washington. Even Ayres did not know of the man's death in a pesthole in Peru. Carleton was almost unknown and his passing from Wichita was not remarked, although he left this city to embark upon a mission, the accomplishment of which makes him the greatest Jayhawker of them all.

The Jousting Match of Knights of the Cornfield

The table of results compiled after the meet showed Stanek was not docked an ounce for excessive husks and only 36 3-4 pounds for corn left in the field. That meant he actually missed only 12 pounds—possibly a dozen or fifteen ears. It was a remarkable showing.

Stanek is a big fellow, about 6 feet 2 inches tall, and weighs around 185, and has a twin brother whom strangers cannot distinguish from the husker. This brother and Stanek's father, a great mountain of a man, with a white beard, were the champion's devoted followers during the contest. They walked beside his wagon, coaching him and lending encouragement. When other fans ran around to watch the opposition, they stuck by their favorite. The elder Stanek takes enormous pride in his son's achievement, for, he says, he trained the champion and showed him from the start just how it ought to be done.

There were at least two other contestants who had devoted followers, too. These were Fry, of Missouri and Williams of Illinois. The followers were their wives. Throughout that wild afternoon they stayed with their champions. The snow beat in their faces and they shivered and shook, but they quit never. And Mrs. Fry trudged up and down those corn rows in slippers and silk stockings.

IN SPITE of the temperature of about 20 degrees and the biting wind, virtually all of those 12 huskers were perspiring and puffing when the final gun was heard. They clambered on their wagons and drove to the barn, where the officials were to weigh the wagons and determine the winner. Nearly everybody who had seen the men in action and observed the bulk of the loads expected the winner would be either Stanek or Sudik, but the others were so near that appearances could not be relied on for even a good guess.

Everybody fell far short of Stanek's record, as will be observed, but for most of the others it was a close race. Second, third, fourth and fifth places, for example, were separated only by a few ears, and the same is true of sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth places. Tenth and eleventh places were also close to a draw. Some of the state champions, especially Williams, were far from satisfied with their showings, but all losers declared the contest had been conducted fairly and they had simply met men better than themselves. Several pointed out they had been handicapped by the fact that the corn was listed instead of checked. They had been accustomed to checked rows, where the hills are all the same distance apart. The huskers from Missouri, Illinois and Indiana also explained that the tighter husks of the Western corn gave them a lot of worry. The peg huskers in particular suffered. These were Williams and Roberts. Their records show that they were docked far more than the others for husks left on the ears.

Stanek, who has worn the same world's champion crown once before, declares he is through now and is going to retire. He has taken part in so many contests, he says, that he never had an opportunity to watch one. That he intends to do next year when the event is held in Minnesota. Stanek won the title back in 1924, but lost it last year when he was beaten in the Iowa contest. If he doesn't compete next year, of course, he will lose it again. That is one way in which corn-husking championships are different from pugilistic titles. The title holder has to fight to hold his crown after he wins it. He has got to renew his lease every year or be ousted.

A Divorce Trial.
One Witness Called.
So, Wife Wins the Case.
Judge Tries to Date Her Up.

THE day of my divorce hearing dawned bright and clear. By the time court opened it was just right for the spectators, but a little warm for the litigants. The vast crowd was on hand early and appeared highly entertained at the antics of the rival bands. The 12,000 co-respondents named by me made a tremendous bit when they marched into the courtroom, stopped and formed a C and, pointing at my wife, sang their alma mater, "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby!"

Hugga and I were called to the center of the room, where we first shook hands and then cut for positions. Hugga cut the high card and chose to sit near the west window where there was a slight breeze. The officials were Judge Ogle, Attorney Dumb, for me, the plaintiff, and Attorney Wheedle, for Hugga, the defendant.

(Editor's note: According to newspaper accounts, Mr. Lardner turned down a suggestion of his counsel's that the case be tried before a petty jury, saying that if Hugga found out they were even the least bit petty she would insist on a party instead of a trial.)

A transcript of the testimony will best show what a raw deal I got. The only witness was Clena Sheets, a chambermaid in the Baldwin Hotel at Curve, Tenn.

Direct examination by Attorney Dumb:

Q. Did you ever see this defendant? A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Who?

Q. This defendant. A. I seen her at the Baldwin Hotel, in Curve.

Q. Was she alone? A. Why, I suppose so. I don't think they ever was a time when we had more than one guest.

Q. Did you know she was married? A. I know she wasn't. She had a single room.

Q. What was the number of her room? A. Five hundred and two.

CROSS-EXAMINATION by Attorney Wheedle: Miss Sheets, how it is that you remember the number of this defendant's room? A. I remember it because it's the only room in the hotel.

Q. If there is only one room, in the hotel, why is it numbered 502? A. That's his favorite number.

Q. Who? A. Jack Downey, who runs the hotel.

Re-direct examination by Attorney Dumb:

Q. Miss Sheets, you are under oath and you will find it to your advantage to tell the truth. Kindly give the honest reason why the only room in your hotel is numbered 502. A. All the other rooms was burned up in the big fire.

Q. Leaving only room 502 standing? A. That's right.

Q. Was room 502 on the fifth floor? A. Where and the he—ll do you think it would be? (Laughter.)

Q. And were all the rooms below, above and on the same floor as 502 destroyed by the fire? A. Yes. (Catcalls.)

Q. And room 502 alone was unscathed. How do you account for that? A. I have nothing to do with the accounting. That is attended to by the bookkeeper. (Bird calls and bugle calls.)

Q. Was this defendant in room 502 at the time of the fire? A. Yes.

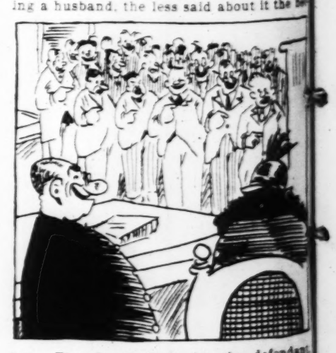
Q. How do you know? A. If she wasn't she'd of been burned. (Violins, violoncellos, etc., pizzicato.)

Q. Have you ever seen any of these co-respondents? A. Yes, all of them.

Q. Where? A. In the writing room.

Q. What were they doing? A. Co-responding. (Cries of "Goodness!" and "Touchdown! Touchdown!").

JUDGE OGLE: "It seems to me that this defendant proved herself a woman of extraordinary acumen in selecting the only fireproof room in the hotel. If she had used half as sound judgment in choosing a husband, the less said about it the better. The Court finds for the defendant, awards her $12.00 per week allimony, a Colonial house within walking distance of a golf course, five bedrooms, three baths, garage, electricity, water and gas, and might add if she has no engagement for this evening, why neither has the Court."



Thus ended my first marital venture, and I will state here that I bear no ill-will toward Hugga, who, I am told, is doing very well as an elevator starter at the Olympic Games.

Beachcombers' Bench Hears Strange Tales

The Old Wooden Seat Gives Way to a New One of Stone for the South Seas Idlers Who Still Frequent Papeete Waterfront.

By James Norman Hall
Author of "Kitchener's Mob," "High Adventure," etc.

(The author-adventurer who sends this story from the South Sea Island where he has been making his home ever since he left Boston in 1911, had one of the most exciting experiences of any American in the war. Except for an occasional brief return visit to Boston, Mr. Hall has made his all-the-year-round home in Tahiti. Only once did he leave the South Seas for a long stay, when he chose for some strange reason to spend one year in Iceland.)

FEW weeks ago while I was having my customary afternoon walk along the waterfront at Papeete, on the island of Tahiti, I was both astonished and horrified to see some workmen tearing down the old wooden benches which, for many years, have occupied the shady grass plots between the road and the lagoon beach. Tahiti workmen are usually the most leisurely of men. If they chance to be shoveling earth into a wagon, they will lift one shovelful, and rest for a quarter of an hour before lifting the next one. If they are building a house, they will nail one board to the scantlings, then go home and have a siesta before placing another beside it.

But workmen the world over seem to have a passion for demolishing things, and while they are at such business there is never a moment's lait. These particular ones were wrecking the benches with a sort of demoniacal abandon. The staccato of their hammers was like salvos of machine-gun fire, or the rapid drumming of compressed-air riveters. Splintered planks flew in every direction and old rusty nails came out with groanings and complainings, heart-rending to hear—but out they had to come, whether they wanted to or not.

I say that I was horrified to witness this work of destruction, and with reason, for these benches had offered comfort to who knows how many generations of islanders? And not only to the Tahitians themselves. Innumerable travelers from all parts of the world have sat on them through innumerable afternoons, and through the cool of innumerable evenings, watching the afterglow fade from the sky and its reflections from the still waters of the lagoon. Indeed, so ancient were they, that Capt. Cook himself may occasionally have occupied one of them during his first visit to Tahiti, in 1869; and so hospitable, that Dr. Cook may have rested his limbs there after his discovery of the North Pole, when he was avoiding the public acclaim which this discovery brought him.

AS FOR the tourists who have strolled through the little town on the monthly steamer day, they must remember these benches gratefully, for each of them offered a vantage point for the enjoyment of one of the loveliest tropical island views in the world.

But there was one particular bench which I think of with the deepest regret. It was called "The Beachcombers Bench" because it was most frequently occupied by men of that profession. It stood on a grass plot near the postoffice. Close by is the barrel of an ancient cannon, set upright in a foundation of cement which is used as a mooring post for vessels. If other more important and populous countries would put their cannon to the same uses how much pleasanter the world would be!

The beachcombers bench was rarely empty, whether by day or by night, and its seat-planks were smoother and shinier than the others, just as the seats of beachcombers' trousers are shinier than those of other men. As I looked on at its destruction I was conscious of a feeling of pain almost physical in quality, as though the blows of the destroyers were being rained upon me; and I wanted to say—to paraphrase an old poem—

Workmen! Spare that bench!
Pull not a single nail!
From every splinter hangs a yarn,
In each crack lurks a tale.

And this is quite literally true, except that I have greatly underestimated the number of tales which have been told there by those happy men of leisure. I am glad that there are so many beachcombers in the world to polish public benches. Without them, and the tramps and hobos who follow the same useful calling away from the seaboards, where could we look for men who have the courage and the capacity to make a fine art of the business of looking on at life?

Well, the nails in the beachcombers' bench complained more loudly than any of the others as they were pulled, and they came forth more reluctantly. And it was a sad thing, to me, to see old residents of the islands passing by with only cursory, disinterested glances at the work of the vandals.

But to tell the truth life in Tahiti is not what it used to be. Nearly everyone here has been seized by the world-craze for profit. Money, money, money—that's all they think about now. They hope to make Tahiti a fashionable tourist resort, and I shall probably live to see the day when this once delightful little island will be as damned, insofar as picturesqueness and everything else worth while is concerned, as Honolulu.

The bench was so solidly built that it required nearly half an hour to demolish it; but at last the ruin was complete, and the splintered planking was piled indiscriminately with the rest, in a wagon, and carted off for firewood to a Chinese restaurant. I gazed mournfully at the spot it had occupied, and the ghosts of all the beachcombers who have enjoyed its hospitality in the past, seemed to gather round me. Where are they all now?

I knew some of them, and they were interesting men, almost without exception, who loved to sit and watch the world go by, and when it ceased to move as rapidly as they could wish, they themselves moved on to other places, leaving behind them only the slightest visible traces of their sojourns here; a few whittled matchsticks, the ashes of pipefuls of borrowed tobacco and the like. But scarcely one of those I have known failed to leave with me a vivid impression of his personality, or perhaps it was some tale of his wanderings which I often think of with pleasure.

WHERE, now, is the little Cockney with the receding chin, the mild blue eyes and the two lonely front teeth whom I met one sunny morning, four years ago? For several months he had been wandering along the beaches, always followed by a small, brown and white dog of humble birth, with a sprightly, up-curved tail?

I had occasionally seen him at the mouth of the Fautua River bathing his dog and himself, whereupon he would wash his one shirt and pair of trousers, and then have a sun bath while his clothes were drying. At other times he was to be found on the beachcombers' bench, with his dog curled up at his feet. He was a Londoner, he told me, and was 'orrible 'omesick to go back to London. Not to stay, of course. He merely wanted to frequent, for a time, his old haunts, and to eat the fried fish and chips he had been accustomed to eat in boyhood. I suggested that he try for a job as deckhand on one of the Clan Line tramp steamers that call at Tahiti now and then on their voyages between Sydney and London.

"Yes, I might," he said, "if it wasn't for me dog. They wouldn't let me take 'im on shipboard, and I couldn't leave 'im be'ind."

"Where did you find him? Here on the island?"

"Yes, only it was 'im picked me up. I've never 'ad a chum like this dog. 'E thinks the world of me, and I wouldn't chuck 'im, not if you was to pay me twenty quid."

For more than a year thereafter, this same little Cockney was to be seen at Tahiti, and his dog was always with him. Sometimes he worked for a day or two, at any odd-job he could find, but for the most part, he sat on the beachcombers' bench, becoming more and more homesick for London. He told me he had had several opportunities to leave, but only on the condition that he leave his dog behind, and of course he couldn't do that. I was afraid that he might weaken at last, and desert his friend, but my fears did him a great injustice. He remained at Tahiti for 15 months, solely for his dog's sake, and at length he found a skipper of a four-masted schooner bound for Liverpool, who gave him a job as a cook's helper, with permission to bring his companion along.

When I last saw him, the schooner was being towed away from the wharf. He was sitting outside the galley peeling potatoes, and his "chum" was looking on with an expression of pride and deep interest, as though he thought there was not another potato-peeler in the world to be compared with his master.

ONE February afternoon when the rainy season was living up splendidly to its reputation, I observed a long, lank, dripping figure on the beachcomber's bench. His threadbare woolen suit was soaked through, but tropical rains are warm, and beachcombers, by the very nature of their profession, are used to them. This one was a man of 50, smooth-shaven—at least he had been a week or so earlier—with a cadaverous jaw and large bony hands. He sat with his elbows on his knees, gazing at a small parcel—all his worldly possessions, no doubt—wrapped in a piece of oilcloth on the ground between his feet. I sat down beside him, and we exchanged a few desultory remarks.

"You've come to Tahiti at a bad time," I said. "We've had nothing but rain since a week ago last Sunday."

He glanced at me, rather scornfully. "Do you call this rain? Man, it's only a sprinkle. You ought to see it rain in North Australia in the wet season."

"Do you come from those parts?"

He nodded, adding, "I've been knocking about in the back country."

"I've often wanted to do just that," I said. "What's it like, anyway? And what about the Australian blacks? I suppose they're all more or less civilized in these days?"

"I wouldn't say so," he replied. Then he reached down and drew up one trouser leg, exposing a long, thin shank.

"See that scar?"

On the outside of his thigh, just above the knee, was the mark of a wound quite recently healed.

"A black boy gave me that. No, they're not all what you might call 'civilized.'"

"It's a neat-looking scar," I said. "What was it, a spear?"

"Yes. What kind of a spear would you say, just to make a guess?"

I examined the wound more closely, and told him I had no idea.

"Of course you haven't. And, if I had $10,000 I'd be willing to lay it against one cocoanut that you couldn't come anywhere near guessing in 10,000 tries."

He pulled down his trouser leg and wrung the water from the bottom of it.

"You know," he went on, "the world moves on so fast in these days, and people are so busy inventing new ways to be nice and comfortable and safe, that they forget there's any savages left in the world. There's not so many, of course, but you'll find a good few just the same, take one place with another. Most of the Australian black boys have been taught to walk on their hind feet, as you might say, and do jobs around white men's houses on the ranches. But away out in the back blocks you'll find others that haven't been tamed at all.

"I got this souvenir on my leg one evening just about dark. I had a job driving a wagon with supplies, across country. There were two other men in the same outfit, and we were making for a waterhole in the desert country, about 80 miles from the nearest ranch. Well, I reached it about a half an hour before the others. I'd just watered my horses and built a fire to cook supper when I heard a noise in the bushes behind me. I looked around just in time to get this spear in my leg instead of my back. I didn't see whoever threw it, but I had sense enough to grab my rifle and start firing into the bush. I didn't hit anything, but I scared the blacks off, and a few minutes later my two pals came up. I was bleeding a good deal, but they bandaged me up, and the next day I rode in one of the wagons. We were a week in reaching the next ranch. It was no fun, that ride over rough country."

"What about the spear?"

"I was coming to that. It was made of glass—that is, the spearhead was."

"You don't mean to say that Australian blacks know how to make glass?"

"Of course not, but they know how to use it, once it's made. White men, trekking through the bush, have to carry most of their supplies with them. You could follow their trails by the empty tin cans and bottles they leave behind—you could, that is, if some band of black boys hadn't gone that way before you. They pick up everything, especially the bottles which they grind down to make spear heads. I've got the one I was stuck with. Like to see it?"

"I surely would."

He untied his bundle and brought forth a paper parcel. The spearhead had been broken in three pieces, but he fitted them together on the bench. It had been made, evidently, from the side of a square bottle and the point was as sharp as that of a needle, and the edges ground to a razorlike keenness. It was impossible to say what the bottle had contained, but this fragment of it bore an inscription in the glass itself, which read, "Guaranteed Under the Pure Food and Drugs Act."

"It's a curious relic," I said, "and looks as though the man who made it was something of a practical joker."

"I DOES look that way; but, of course, he couldn't know what the words meant. I suppose he thought it was some kind of a charm. It's a pity, though, that the name of whatever was in the bottle wasn't stamped on this piece, too. I reckon I could get something for it, then, if I was to send it to the makers of the stuff."

"Why not send it to the British Museum?" I suggested. "They have a fine South Sea collection, and they might like to have this as a recent example of the blessing of civilization to primitive man."

"Yes, I suppose I might," he replied, doubtfully. "By the way, you haven't got any pipe tobacco about you? Mine's wet."

I left him there, contentedly smoking in a downpour of rain.

I've heard hundreds of tales from the beachcombers' bench, and I hope to hear hundreds more, for the new benches are all in place now. They are made of cement and in keeping with the modern spirit, are harder and handsomer than the old ones. The new beachcombers' bench seems even harder than the others, but they are adaptable men. As I passed this morning I saw three of them sitting there with that air of having nothing to do until the year after next which distinguishes all members of their profession. "When I was in Frisco"—I heard one of them saying; and no doubt within a few months from now he will be thousands of miles away, at Sydney, perhaps, or Batavia, or Port Said, or New York City, polishing just such another public bench, saying, "When I was in Tahiti—"

THE rugged grandeur of the Canadian mountains has attracted the skilled brush of Carl Rungius, a New York illustrator, known for his pictures of big game, in the painting of Lake McArthur reproduced on the front page from the 1926 Annual Exhibition of the Work of American Painters at the City Art Museum, St. Louis, through the courtesy of which this reproduction is made. The painter was born in Berlin, Germany, August 18, 1869. He was a pupil of Paul Meyerheim in Berlin, and in 1894 came to the United States. In 1913 he was made an Associate, and 13 years later was admitted to membership in the National Academy.

Belmore Browne, whose study of the infinite moods of that gem of the Canadian Rockies, Lake Louise, is also reproduced through the courtesy of the City Art Museum of St. Louis, where it was exhibited in the 1926 Annual Exhibition of the Work of American Painters, lives at Banff, Canada, in the heart of the country he paints. His art studies were with Chase and Carrol Beckwith, and he was a Julian pupil in Paris. He is a member of the Society of American Animal Painters and Sculptors, of the League of American Artists and the Salmagundi Club of New York.

Marriage Is Broken and Annulled but Dot Goes Merrily On aristocratic Boston family. The definite break, terminating numerous quarrels came at last. In 1906 they signed a separation agreement of a private nature which was to run until their two sons were of age.

Frequent reconciliations were attempted, but each ended in failure. King George and Queen Mary intervened. The Duke desired political honors, but these could not come if there were domestic troubles. The King and Queen, who were fond of the fragile and charming American Duchess, suggested that if the Duke had an income of $1,000,000 a year the Lord-Lieutenancy of Ireland would be open to him. The elder Vanderbilt was interviewed, but to no avail.

In November, 1920, the Duchess was granted a decree of divorce. She named a woman with whom she charged the Duke had lived in Paris. He did not contest the suit.

Shortly after the decree was made absolute, six months later, both Duke and Duchess remarried. The Duchess took as her mate, Jacques Balsan, a French Catholic, an old friend of the Vanderbilt family and a famous sportsman. The Duke married Gladys Deacon.

For a time the newspapers and the world at large forgot them. Then came the news from Rome that the Holy Rota had annulled the marriage of Consuelo Vanderbilt to the Duke of Marlborough, on the petition of the former Duchess, whose husband, a Catholic, could not live in the grace of the church while married to a divorced woman. Too, it was reported that the Duke had decided to become a Catholic. The case had been carried first to the Catholic diocese of Southwark, in which the Duke and Duchess had lived. The diocese granted an annulment decree, which the Defensor Vinculi, official defender of the marriage bond, appealed, arguing the validity of the match, and the case was taken before the Supreme Rota.

AT ONCE, with the announcement of the decree, a cry of protest went up from the Protestant churches of England and America. This was undermining the sanctity of the marriage bond, it was argued, when two wealthy and influential persons could have a marriage of 25 years standing, of which two children were born, annulled.

"If couples who have lived years in wedlock can procure annulments merely by discovering that undue pressure in some form was used at the time of their marriage, divorce will become unnecessary," Bishop Manning of the Protestant Episcopal Church of New York said in a message to his diocese. "This is an unreal plea and it is itself a scandal that any woman of middle age, after years of married life, should be willing to swear that her parents sold her for worldly gain and against her will."

So strenuous was the protest that high officials of the Catholic Church, against all precedent, slightly lifted the veil of secrecy so that the world might have some insight into the story that had been told before the Rota, the story of a timid, young, American girl coerced into marriage with a man whom she scarcely knew. Had the Duke been a tramp and the Duchess a pauper, such a marriage would have been annulled, officials of the Vatican said, pointing to the ancient laws and traditions of the church, under which King Henry VIII of England had been refused a divorce from Catherine of Aragon, and more recently Prince Rospigliosi, of an old Catholic family, had been denied annulment of his union.

"My sister, God has brought you at last to peace," said the chaplain at the Chapel Royal, London, who married the Duchess to Jacques Balsan. "And after all the storm and struggles and difficulties, which some people have more than others in this world, He has brought you at last to a haven of rest, to new simplicity, to new cheerfulness."

The Balsans are living quietly in the South of France. The latest photographs of the two indicate that Madame Balsan has found a quiet happiness which she never knew before.

But whether this be so or not, whether the new Duchess has found the Duke a more congenial husband than did the previous mistress of Blenheim Palace, regardless of all this, of divorces and annulments, of new marriages and old loves, of wills and courts of law and Holy Rotas, the Duke's dot goes on. Two thousand hard, round American dollars each week roll merrily over the Atlantic.

Gems of the Whelpley Indian Collection

COLOR photographs on this page are of Indian relics from the collection of the late Dr. Henry M. Whelpley, dean of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, and possibly the foremost collector of old Indian implements in this country. From the age of 12 Dr. Whelpley devoted himself to gathering specimens of the handiwork of the American aborigines. At the time of his death his collection was said to be valued at $250,000. The implements and symbolic stones shown on this page are pictured in their exact size and coloring. They are among the finest specimens in the entire collection, so valuable that some of them are kept in safe deposit vaults. They were loaned to the Post Dispatch to be photographed by Dr. Whelpley's widow, Mrs. Laura E. Whelpley—herself an expert on Indian archeology—who has not as yet disposed of the collection.

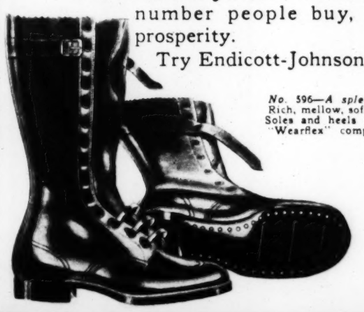
Boys' and girls' shoes made with old-time wear plus modern style and comfort

NOT many decades ago, when parents wanted real sturdy shoes for their children, they had them made to order. And what shoes they were! All the shoemaker's skill and all his knowledge of leather went into those shoes. He knew his name and reputation would go with them; that upon the service they gave would depend his customers' future patronage.

The incentives which inspired the old-time shoemaker are precisely the incentives which make Endicott-Johnson shoes unusual. In this great "Industrial Democracy"—the only organization of its kind in the world—shoemaking is a matter of individual pride and responsibility. Here every worker has virtually a proprietary interest in each pair of shoes he helps to make. Upon the satisfaction Endicott-Johnson shoes give, and the number people buy, depends his prosperity.

Try Endicott-Johnson shoes on your children and see how they reflect old-time shoemaking pride and principles. Note the leather—tanned by our own special process as leather should be tanned. Examine the workmanship. Consider the price—boys' and girls' shoes $3, $4 and $5; smaller sizes proportionately less. And then, as you watch these shoes wear and wear, think of the value.

There are Endicott-Johnson shoes for every use; styles for every occasion—for men, women and children. (Our trade-mark is on the sole.) Leading stores everywhere sell them. If you can't find one readily, we'll gladly direct you. Write, asking also for interesting booklet, "The World at Play"—for boys, girls and grown-ups.



No. 596—A splendid Hi-cut for boys. Rich, mellow, soft golden upper leather. Soles and heels of extra-long-wearing "Wearflex" composition rubber.

No. 1557½—For younger girls. With its field mouse gray top and patent cuff, this patent leather shoe is among the smartest of smart winter styles. Sturdily built for school wear. And stays good looking for a long time.

LOUDERMAN BUILDING, ST. LOUIS — TRANSPORTATION BUILDING, CHICAGO

Saint Louis has in the new Downtown Branch Y. M. C. A. the largest and most complete "Y" building in the Middle West. This new $1,500,000 building is the last word in Y. M. C. A. construction designed to serve effectively a membership of 6000 men and boys. It is the largest single unit of the Development Fund Program which was the result of the successful $3,000,000 Y. M. C. A. campaign two years ago. Following the plan outlined in the campaign, work began on the Downtown Building in June of 1925, the months previous to that time having been spent in careful planning and consultation with architects and the National Building Bureau of the Y. M. C. A.. It was the object of the building committee to provide the most complete and efficient Y. M. C. A. plant in the country.

The Metropolitan Board of Directors under the leadership of their president, Byron W. Moser, appointed a General Building Committee headed by F. W. A. Vesper to supervise the erection of the five new branches provided for by the campaign fund. A special committee under the leadership of Edward T. Hall, was formed to assume the responsibility for the construction of the Downtown Branch. That group has been at work continually supervising all the details of planning and construction, cooperating with the architects, La Beaume & Klein, and the contractors in charge of the work. The Metropolitan Board of Directors will officially turn over the building and its equipment to a newly formed Downtown Branch Board of Managers in the dedicatory ceremony which will be held early in January.

The organization of the Downtown Branch is already complete and many parts of the building are in use. A Board of Managers, formed several months ago, has supervised the preliminary work which included the selection of a staff, membership promotion, and the establishment of the policies of the branch. Isaac H. Orr, President of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, is chairman of this board. Associated with him are Arthur E. Bostwick, City Librarian, John A. Bush, President of the Brown Shoe Company; Forrest C. Donnell, of Spencer, Donnell & McDonald, Attorneys; Alfred Fairbank, Vice-President of the Taussig, Day, Fairbank Company; S. W. Greenland, of Newman Saunders & Company; Edward T. Hall, Vice-President of the Ralston Purina Company; Robert L. Lund, General Manager of the Lambert Pharmacal Company; Duncan I. Meier, Secretary-Treasurer of the Ludlow-Saylor Wire Company; Samuel B. McPheeters, Attorney; Branch Rickey, Vice President of the St. Louis National Baseball Club; Boyle O. Rodes, of the W. H. Markham Company; Arthur Siegel, National Sales Manager of the General Outdoor Advertising Company; and W. H. Willcockson, Secretary of the Vesper-Buick Company. A. F. Holmer, formerly secretary of the Minneapolis South Town Branch, is Executive Secretary.

The new Y. M. C. A. building will offer its members a great many advantages and activities. A popular feature will be the physical department with its splendid equipment. With a staff of trained physical directors in charge, the gymnasiums, handball courts, swimming pool, and individual exercise equipment can be most effectively used for recreation and physical development. Special classes will be scheduled at times convenient to all groups and physical examinations with instruction for exercise will be given free of charge to all members. Another feature of the building is its dining room and cafeteria service. A large cafeteria, open to the public, is located on the ground floor, while private dining rooms are available to members and to church and civic groups. A sandwich shop and soda grill, a barber shop, a tailor shop are located in the building. The upper six floors are devoted to residence halls which offer a downtown home to 412 young men. Both single and double rooms are available at rates which range from $4.00 to $6.75 per week. The Educational Department offers courses in commercial subjects both in the day and evening with equipment and a teaching staff that can accommodate 2000 students. The lobbies, library, and social rooms on the lower floors of the building will be open to members during the day and evening, and a full program and group activities and entertainments will be held. All departments of the new building will be ready for operation late in December. The Residence Halls, Educational Department, and Physical Department are open now.

The above photograph shows the exterior of the new St. Louis Y. M. C. A., the most complete building of its character in the country. Its dignified exterior expresses the uses for which it has been planned. It contains all of the conveniences of a modern hotel building, together with the comforts of a men's club, besides special athletic and educational features seldom found in either.

It contains some three hundred and fifty-eight single bedrooms and nearly fifty double bedrooms, besides ample lavatory facilities on each of the six residence hall floors; two floors of classrooms for educational work, large suites of offices for the local branch of the Y. M. C. A. and the Church Federation of St. Louis, an assembly hall with a seating capacity of one thousand, a large gymnasium with running track, up-to-date gymnastic apparatus, gymnasium likewise thoroughly equipped, six bowling alleys, shower rooms, etc., a pool 25x75. Besides these features there are billiard rooms, lounge rooms, rooms for men and boys as well as a lunch room, sandwich shop and soda fountain, barber shop and other features.

The building cost complete, furnishings and equipment, $1,250,000.00. La Beaume & Klein of St. Louis, Architects, James Stewart & Company, Incorporated, Contractors.

Like father, like son--

both like REM for coughs

It's hard for plumbers to go through a winter without catching cold, working the way they do in dampness and wet. That's what Mr. D. D. Hardy of 2145 Grace St., Chicago, and his son J. W. tell us, and they ought to know. But though they sometimes get coughs as a result of their work, they've found a way to get rid of them. REM? You guessed it. Listen to this:

"Our work often keeps us in damp places where it's easy to get a cough and hard to get rid of one," says Mr. Hardy. "Last winter I caught one that stuck right to me.

"My son J. W. had a cough at the same time so we stopped into Myerson's Drug Store at Leavitt & Grace Sts. and got a bottle of REM. I had used it before, a couple of years ago, and it had been very satisfactory. It did the work this time too. It fixed my cough and the boy's in short order."

So many who have tried REM speak of the quick relief it brings. This quick action is largely due to a special ingredient in REM---effective, harmless--- that is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the inflamed and irritated membranes.

No Opiates in REM. And it is pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM—the dark blue package with the large orange circle. If it doesn't help you, you can have your money back. Fair enough!

BULOVA WATCHES

Be sure the Watch You Give is a TIMEPIECE

HOW many a Yuletide gift is but a memory when the New Year dawns! How few gifts live to knit closer the friendships that inspired their giving!

A watch suggests years of faithful service — utility, beautifully adorned. Yet how often a watch selected for its beauty fails to be faithful to its trust!

Remember always that the name BULOVA on the dial is your assurance of a perfect timepiece. Generations of painstaking effort have achieved that.

As to beauty, no finer cases have ever been wrought. Truly, each BULOVA watch is an "Aristocrat of Beauty, Autocrat of Time".

Priced from $25 to $2500. BULOVA watches vary in design as they vary in price; they are alike in dependability.

Be honest for a change . . . . .

Like most human beings, you probably tell white lies about some of the little things of life.

You say you brush your teeth, for instance, three or two times a day—where once would be nearer the truth.

Most of us are lazy in the same way and say the same thing.

In fact, there are still some people who lie about taking a cold bath every morning. Usually they don't, and many days they miss the morning bath entirely.

Isn't it true, though, that many of the little duties of life are more irksome than the bigger ones?

Tooth brushing is a good example.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In fact, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. Just a minimum of brushing and your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing! Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay. Lambert Pharmacal Co., Saint Louis, U. S. A.

P. S.—By the way, Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.

This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.*
At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts tooth decay.

A FRIENDLY CLOCK

The Gift Sponsored by Noted Interior Decorators

HERE is a gift you can choose with the assurance that it is today considered a vital part of the decorating scheme of every room.

For interior decorators so highly regard a clock's friendly air of cheeriness and life that they put one in nearly every room they plan —living-room, dining-room, hall, bedroom, kitchen or nursery.

Their choice rests on Seth Thomas because these clocks are so beautifully designed and made with such masterly craftsmanship.

And each clock has the wonderful accuracy these clocks have been famous for since the first Seth Thomas was made 113 years ago.

Moreover, they're moderately priced—from $6 to $120. No other gift for such an expenditure can equal their qualities of enduring beauty and decorative value.

Ask your dealer to show you his Seth Thomas Clocks before you make up your Christmas list. You will find them a wonderful solution for many of your most difficult gift problems.

Finding Gloriously White Teeth

By Clearing Teeth of Film a New Way

To attain clear, white teeth, and firm healthy gums, many authorities are advising this way to combat the dangerous film that forms on teeth

THAT many of the commoner tooth and gum troubles, and most cases of so-called "off-color" teeth, are due to a film that forms on teeth which ordinary brushing does not successfully combat, is the consensus of today's dental opinion.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel this film—a slippery sort of coating. Film absorbs discolorations and thus makes teeth look dull and dingy. It breeds germs and bacteria and invites tartar, decay and pyorrhea. It is a menace to tooth and gum health that must be combated.

Thus dental authorities now seriously urge that film be removed at least twice every day—in the morning and at bedtime. To do so, obtain Pepsodent—a special, film-removing dentifrice most dentists favor. It curdles the film, then removes it and polishes the teeth to high lustre in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay. It acts, too, to firm and harden the gums; thus meeting, in many ways, the requirements of modern findings.

Old-time dentifrices did not adequately fight film. That is why this modern protective way, as a twice a day habit, and at least twice a year calls on your dentist, are being so widely advised today.

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage Pepsodent into the gums to firm and harden them.

SMILES ARE DAZZLING WHITE when film is gone. Teeth sparkle like polished jewels. Gums firm to healthy coral tint. Thus this new scientific way of dental care becomes one of the greatest beauty treatments of the day, and, with its unique therapeutic and prophylactic qualities, a great aid in oral hygiene.

SENATE DROPS IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ENGLISH

House Recommendation Accepted, 70 to 9, Despte Those Who Would Prefer Trial.

REED ACQUIESCES, BUT MAKES PROTEST

Missourian Declares It "Lamentable" That Offender Should Escape Larger Part of Punishment.

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The last solemn act in the impeachment case against Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis, based on evidence gathered and published by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, was staged in the Senate today.

By a vote of 70 to 9 the Senate, sitting as a high court of impeachment, accepted the recommendation of the House that, in view of the resignation of Judge English, the proceedings be discontinued.

This recommendation of the House, contained in a resolution adopted by that body Saturday by a vote of 286 to 52, was conveyed to the Senate at 1 p. m. by the nine managers of the House, appointed for the prosecution of the case.

Curtis Submits Proposal.

Responding to the request of the managers, Senator Curtis of Kansas, the majority leader, submitted an order declaring the impeachment proceedings discontinued. The vote in the Senate was upon this order. It was written on the record after a spirited debate, in which a number of Senator expressed regret that the House declined to drop the case.

The Senators voting against the discontinuance were Ashurst (Dem.) of Arizona, Bruce (Dem.) of Maryland, Caraway (Dem.) of Arkansas, Couzens (Rep.) of Michigan, Dill (Dem.) of Washington, Jones (Rep.) of Washington, McKellar (Dem.) of Tennessee, Shipstead (Farmer-Labor) of Minnesota, Trammell (Dem.) of Florida and Wheeler (Dem.) of Montana. Both the Missouri Senators, Reed and Hawes, voted for the dismissal.

The speeches of several Senators turned upon sharp criticism of the House recommendation. The two Reeds, one from Missouri and the other from Pennsylvania, made it clear that they voted for the Curtis order only in deference to the request of the House.

Senator Bruce (Dem.) of Maryland declared that the particularity and precision of the charges against English had convinced him of the Judge's guilt. The resignation, he said, was a plain confession of guilt. Bruce said that the Senate should have been given the opportunity of barring English from ever holding any office of trust or profit under the Government.

"He has disgraced one high office," said Bruce. "He should never have the chance to disgrace another."

Pennsylvanian Objects.

Reed of Pennsylvania said that if he felt the Senate were free to decide he would vote for the continuance of the trial.

"If the charges against Judge English should be sustained by the evidence," said Reed of Pennsylvania, "he richly deserves the judgment of attainder, which the Constitution enables us to put upon him, but the House of Representatives does not submit the matter to our judgment. In view of the fact that a co-ordinate House of Congress requests us to dismiss the proceedings which it instituted, it seems to me we are in all comity bound to accede without question to the request.

Senator Reed of Missouri said that he wanted it to appear in the record that the House was not basing its request on the ground of any mistake in the charges against English.

"On the contrary," said the Missourian, "the statement appears of record that the withdrawal of the charges, or the request for their dismissal here is brought about by the resignation of Judge English.

"I want to be among the last of those who would in any way endeavor to embarrass the House. I have the utmost respect for that great body, and I think I know the motives that impelled the House to ask the course it has taken.

"I believe you felt that in your
